Marmora—The death occurred in the General Hospital, Timmins on Tuesday morning of Maud Revoy, wife of Harry Sopha of Timmins. Mrs. Sopha was a native of Belleville, previously, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Revoy and was 62 years of age. She had been a resident of Cobalt and later of Timmins for 41 years. She was a member of the United Church. She is survived by her husband and three daughters, Mrs. Mrs. Ernest McDonald (Idella) and Bernadette, Timmins; Mrs. William Rundle (Robena), Sarnia. She is also survived by three brothers, Walter Revoy, Marmora township; Sidney Revoy, Peterborough; and Harry Revoy, Toronto, and one sister, Mrs. Thomas Vansickle, Havelock. The funeral takes place in Timmins on Thursday afternoon.

Britain Praises Canadian Initiative In Training Plan

London, Nov. 16 — (Reuters)—Britain attaches great importance to Canada's "generous initiative" in enabling a number of RAF pilots and navigators to train in Canada, Aircraft Production Under-secretary for Air, said yesterday.

Sqdn. Ldr. Patrick Spens, Conservative, had urged in the House of Commons that the air training agreement with Canada be expanded.

Crawley said in his reply that any question of its extension would be a matter for further discussion between the two governments in relation to the defence program and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"These and other matters are being urgently examined," he said.

FOXBORO FARM FORUM

The Foxboro Farm Forum met on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Donald and Donald Longwell.

The broadcast on Forests, Slash or Save, was heard and discussed under the direction of Ronald Whidden. It was unanimously agreed that there was too much waste and destruction in forests and farmers' woodlots. More needed more personal contact and education. Discussion in order to save the waste and so receive more income from woodlots also how to take measures to correct erosion through use of windbreaks.

After the discussion the business of the evening was taken care of by Mrs. Whidden and Fred Campbell.

The annual meeting of Hastings Federation of Agriculture was noted and plans made for the meeting in Foxboro. The lunch evening was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Longwell. Games were played and lunch served.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Longwell. The next meeting will be held at Mr. Bert Finkle's.

ORE CARRIER AGROUND

Cleveland, Nov. 16 (AP) — The Lebanon, 538-foot, Bethlehem Transportation Corporation ore carrier, is hard aground in the Martin Island passage, coast guard headquarters here reported today.

The passage is between Green Bay and Lake Michigan.

Officials Blunden, Holly-hock and Woodbine, and the ice-breaker Mackinaw were dispatched to the 7,000-ton Lebanon. There are 33 men aboard, and the vessel is not loaded.

SLOW IMPROVEMENT

Albany, N.Y., Nov. 15 — (AP) The person who took the book "Improve Your Memory" from the Albany Public Library apparently received little benefit from it. The book was returned by mail, anonymously, exactly six years after the due date.

PETAWAWA PINUP

Anglican Primate Spends Fair Day

Toronto, Nov. 16 — (CP) Most Rev. George F. Kingston, Primate of the Church of England in Canada, spent a "fair night and a fair morning," hospital authorities said today.

The 61-year-old Archbishop of Nova Scotia suffered a heart attack Monday while here for the annual meeting of the Canadian Council of Churches.

Archbishop Kingston's physician, Dr. Cameron Gray, said he is "holding his own today and perhaps is a little better."

"We are more hopeful today", he said, "but the Primate's condition still is serious."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 16 (CP) — Industrials sagged in quiet trading as the session progressed on the Toronto Stock Exchange today.

From a mixed opening the list gradually began to weaken with losses ranging to a point. Steels, papers, retail stores and manufacturing companies showed a majority of losses in the groupings.

Base metals declined following three days of strong advance. Ascots, East Sullivan, International Nickel, Quemont, Sherritt Gordon and Steep Rock were some of the leading issues that were lower. Two leaders, Noranda and Consolidated Smeltery, bucked the trend, however, with gains.

Golds drifted downwards with penny losses. Dome, Kerr Addison and McIntyre led the senior group and Akaicho, New Land, Pickle Crow, Windward and Campbell were lower among Junior producers. Western oils declined quietly.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 16 — (CP) Trade was dull at the Ontario Stockyards today with sales too few to establish prices. Receipts: cattle, 60; calves, 20; hogs, 190; sheep and lambs, 80. Left from yesterday 2,100 cattle.

A few common to medium heifers sold for $20 - $25; canners and cutters $14.50-$16.50; few good bulls up to $23.50.

Calves were steady at $31-$32 for choice calves; common downward to $21.

Grade A hogs sold for $29.50 with sows $24 dressed.

Lambs were steady at $28 for good ewes and wethers; bucks $27.

Few sheep brought $8-$15.

MARMORA

Fossil of Shellfish Found 400 Million Years Old

Marmora.—H. W. Sabine, editor of the Marmora Herald received an interesting letter a few days ago from a reader of his paper, Mrs. H. W. Walker, of Toronto. Its contents in part are as follows:

"There is an item of news which I think will be of interest to Marmora Herald readers (or readers anywhere). I have recently returned from a six weeks' stay at Crowe Lake and was entrusted by Mr. W. B. Wilde, with a piece of fossil which he found in 1932 at the big rock cut just west of the village, when the highway was being cut through. I was pleased to take it to the Royal Ontario Museum for classification.

"Dr. Fritz of the Department of Paleontology, examined it and these are her written remarks: 'Trilobite which is an extinct crustacean. Its name is Isotelus Gigas. It lived in the Ordovician Seas which covered the area. These seas left sediment behind which later consolidated into rocks in which some of the shellfish which lived in the ancient seas, became entombed as fossils. Age, 400,000,000 years ago'.

"Dr. Fritz took me through the gallery of this department and pointed out the specimens, some larger, some smaller, but none clearer, of this same shellfish, now extinct. I am returning to Marmora in the near future and will bring the stone with me. I got a lot of pleasure out of discovering the great age of our Crowe lake and river rocks, and what must be locked within them.

"Dr. Fritz said this piece of fossil should be of great value to your high school students of Natural History. There is a constant stream of students viewing them at the University and making notes of same in their studies. It leaves me breathless to think of this shellfish being alive right there 400,000,000 years ago. I would like it to be exhibited as I know it would interest a great many."

P.O. Eases Restrictions On Currency Limits

Ottawa, Nov. 16 (CP)—Recent amendments to the Foreign Exchange Control Act, expanding the amounts of United States or sterling currency Canadians may send out of the country, have been put into effect by the post office department, it was announced today.

The post office, in new instructions to all postmasters, said henceforth permanent residents of Canada can remit not more than $200 in U.S. funds or its equivalent in any one month to countries outside the sterling area. The previous maximum was $10 a month.

In addition a total of 35 ($105) pounds sterling or its equivalent can be sent monthly to a British Empire country direct or to a country serviced through a British Empire postal administration. The previous maximum for sterling was 25 ($75) pounds a month.

MAY LOSE EYE

Toronto, Nov. 16 — (CP)—Doctors say Joan Callen, 14, struck in the eye by a BB-gun pellet while walking last flight near her suburban York township home, may lose her sight.

Police arrested Gordon Murray Tuplin, 19, on a charge of causing grievous bodily harm. He was released on $200 bail.

Girl Says Story Was Plot to Gain Freedom

Sydney, N.S., Nov. 16 (CP)— A giggling, 18-year-old girl who became a conscience stricken a few days before her 48-year-old father went on trial on a charge of incest, yesterday confirmed her sister's story that the whole scheme was a plot designed "to gain our freedom."

The accused, Joseph Jessome, was acquitted by a petit jury after 25 minutes deliberation.

Jessome was charged last May after his daughter, Anne, 17, claimed she was attacked by her father and violated.

Tuesday she testified that "it was all lies."

She said she thought that with her father arrested she would gain her freedom and be allowed to attend dances and shows.

Her sister Mary, told the court yesterday:

"I thought that if Dad was put in jail for the rest of his life, Angie could have her freedom, get married if she wanted. "We were telling a batch of lies."

"How did you dream of this scheme?" Crown Counsel Donald Fishlyn asked.

"I read books," was the reply.

"Can you think of a human being lower, more vicious?"

"No, I can't."

Trips Over Bear And Bags Him

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Nov. 16—(AP)— John Probovich has a mind like a sieve when he goes bear hunting—he seldom forgets.

Last winter, Probovich and a companion became lost in the woods. Stumbling around in the darkness, he tripped over an object which he at first took for a boulder. The obstacle emitted a loud wail, however. Probovich went bear hunting at the spot where he had tripped over the brain last year.

He came back with a 450-pound specimen.

United States army officers use the initials, all unconscious of their connotation for Canadian correspondents.

Egypt Wants UK To Withdraw From Suez Zone

Cairo, Nov. 16 (AP) —Egypt's government stated formally today it no longer regards its 1936 treaty with Britain as legal.

But although the Speech from the Throne at the opening session of parliament made this assertion and added, "there is no other alternative than to decide its cancellation," the government stepped short of formal denunciation of the treaty.

The Throne Speech read by King Farouk indicated instead that Egypt hopes Britain will recognize its demands to remove British troops immediately from the Suez canal zone and permit the unification of the Sudan with Egypt under Farouk's rule.

A main clause of the 1936 agreement is its authorization to maintain British troops in the strategic canal zone until 1956.

First reaction of western observers was that the speech was drafted in diplomatic doubletalk which could — and probably would be — interpreted both as a cancellation and not a cancellation.

Some thought the hint of denunciation was intended as a political vote-getter popular feeling which strongly favors British evacuation. Britain has been occupying Egyptian soil for 68 years.

Official British sources declined immediate comment. One source said the Throne Speech was 'vague' on the subject.

Two in Race For Mayoralty Of Toronto

Toronto, Nov. 16 — (CP) — A mayoralty fight between Mayor Hiram McCallum and Controller Allan Lamport shaped up today when both men filed nomination papers at city hall.

Nine candidates for the four Board of Control seats filed papers. They included three sitting members, David Balfour, John Innes and Leslie Saunders. Voting is Dec. 4.

The new candidates are Alderman William Collings, merchant; former Alderman L. J. Shannon, lawyer; Ford Brand, business agent, labor candidate; Charles H. Mahoney, business manager and a candidate for mayor last year; Frederick Vacher, builder, who trailed in last year's controllership race; and Stewart Smith, journalist and former communist controller.

Happy to Have Motorists Cart Gasoline Away

Taylorville, Ill., Nov. 16 — (AP)— Motorists are getting free gasoline—30,000 gallons of it—from a hole in the ground.

The stuff came from a 12-inch hole which sprang a leak three weeks ago. The break was fixed, but there's still gas for the taking.

Phillips Petroleum Company, which owns the pipeline, dug a big trench around the break, and townsfolk around here have been dipping the gasoline out of the trench by the bucketful.

Phillips is happy to have its gasoline carted away, eliminating a fire hazard.

SEVERELY BURNED

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 16 (CP) — Elizabeth Hughes, 8-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hughes, was rushed in an ambulance to the Toronto Hospital for Sick Children today to be treated for severe burns. She set fire to her dress with a match.

CANADIAN DOLLAR

New York, Nov 16 — (CP) — The Canadian dollar was unchanged at a discount of 3⅛ per cent in terms of United States funds in foreign exchange dealings today. The pound sterling was unchanged at $2.8805½.

INVENTION OF LETTER BOX.

British information Service draws attention to the invention of the letter box which was first used in 1851 as an invention of no other than an English novelist, Anthony Trollope. His name is therefore entitled to fame two scores, his writings which have enjoyed a great revival and the letter box, one of the most useful facilities ever contributed by man. Novelists generally are noted for association with such practical things as letter boxes, but Trollope proved that he could write and did also invent something for the public's use.

It is doubtful if he could have imagined that this gift of the pillar-box would conquer the world. In spite of all inventions, typewriter, printing press and the modern radio and television, and so forth there still remains the steering importance of the letter box. It has found a place in every land.

Most men who contribute something of importance to the world have some conception of its greatness and the place to which it can be put. Now the letter came to him for the ninety-nine years and is destined to last long into the future.

Trollope had at the age of nineteen secured a clerkship in the general post office in London and after seven years of service has been called overseas and was appointed to a post in Ireland as one of the postal surveyors.

His post was thoroughly congenial, and in order to increase his income he used his experiences in Ireland and used them into fiction. This honor came to him for good work in the postal service in Ireland to be selected in 1851 to reform the letter-carrier system in southwest Ireland. It was while strolling on a summer evening past the Cathedral of Salisbury that the thought entered his mind to write a novel in which English clergy should appear. Thus began his cathedral series of works. He made an imaginary Barsetshire as well known as any shire in Ireland. During his writing period as novelist he remained in the service to the postal authorities. He visited Egypt and the West Indies and continued writing his series of novels wherever he went.

In 1858 he concluded a postal treaty with the Pasha of Egypt and then went to the West Indies to study the postal service. His later writing was associated with travels. He became in time the most prolific of novelists. He travelled far and wide after his retirement from the post office.

Trollope has a claim to the minds of many to rank second to Dickens only as a great chronicler of life and manners in England among the middle classes. He has been blamed for deficiency in the artistic sense but he possessed a rich and humor with pathos and a keen intelligence.

He doubtless would find pleasure in his work in the novel above his service in the British Post Office but now he is known to fame for the two achievements, in the postal service and in the art of narration and depicting of contemporary manners.

The anniversary of the letter box will be marked in 1951 in Britain.

FIRE LOSSES

Facts in the third quarter of this year show that fires caused the death of seven persons and injury to 47 in Ontario. The number of fires was slightly more than in the same period the year before, namely 4,439 to 4,308 of last year. The total loss was more than a million dollars less, $904,069 as contrasted with $4,911,850 in 1949, while insurance loss was something less, namely $238,402, the total is reaching $3,9904,069 and the insurance loss $3,447,366.

Buildings destroyed or damaged totalled 1,154. There were 3 churches listed with a loss of $344,918.

Smoking was blamed in 1,568 fires on which the total was $161,712 while matches were given as the cause in 68 cases. The heaviest item of losses was for fires credited to electricity.

Barn fires due to spontaneous combustion numbered four, the total loss being $18,258. Fires were itemized as follows: chimneys and flues 68, stoves and furnaces 192, ashes, coal and open fires 91. Matches were listed in 68 fires.

Breakdown of the total of fires has its interesting point serving to draw attention to the origins of so many fires. Knowledge of these causes is a good basis for bringing a reduction in the cause of fires.

Fires are those reactionary events which destroy and menace lives and everyone must be interested in the maintenance of heating systems at their best.

WOMEN IN ARCHITECTURE

Proof that women can excel as architects is provided by 24-year-old Miss A. J. Rutherford, now touring Canada and the United States to look at research establishments and laboratories. Miss Rutherford holds the Matthewman Travelling Scholarship. She is a graduate of the Liverpool School of Architecture. On her return to Britain she will help with the designing of a new medical school.

GARDEN CLOSING

The roses are bedded; the asters are in
The birds have flown south.!
Let the winter begin!
Low down in the basement
the lawn mower goes
To rest with the spade and the rake and the hose.

The cutworms and beetles no longer invade.
The aphids retarded the stuff that I sprayed,
But they went underground at the sign of frost.
For they knew if they lingered

All's well with the garden! But what about me?
And what shall I do with my time after tea?
Just sit by the fire in my arm chair and yawn
And dream of the days when I watered the lawn.

OUR TOWN

BUSY VALLEY

One of the stories that people in Phoenix, Arizona, like to tell is about George Borg, a big noise from Hollywood, who flew down into the valley of the sun to look over a factory that was for sale.

Borg arrived, investigated and wired back to his associates that the item looked attractive. This was the last heard of him for some considerable time. Five months later they got a short, simple wire: "If you want to see me you'll have to come down here." Mr. Borg, it seems, had liked Arizona real fine.

On a more modest scale, something along the same line has happened to us.

In Phoenix we never had it so good. Phoenix is a brisk little city in the desert, smothered in motels and trailer courts, all trying to outdo each other in splendor and the size of the swimming pool. One minute you are driving through wastes of cactus. Next you're bowling along a broad avenue flanked by quaint auto courts with luxurious lawns, bright beds of flowers, shrubbery, green pools and that travellers' welcome, the sign that says "vacancy."

Let me tell you about the trailer park we're in. Our own private door opens on a cool cement patio. Beyond that we have our own private square of lawn. Overtime five feet away is a swimming pool, the size of Maple Leaf Gardens.

We have used the pool four days and have had this magnificent bath exclusively to ourselves. The temperature outside has been 85 degrees through the day, but people here seem to go by the calendar. It is October, and they don't use the pools. Only we foreigners gather, panting happily and frigidly in the water.

Each night we have a conference about swimming next morning. Each morning finds us, like Mr. Borg, still in the vicinity.

Energy Plus

Phoenix is a kind of capsule version of the smashing, limitless pep of all American west. There are more classic examples of this in California, but Phoenix will do.

It surprises you to hear that the population is only around the hundred thousand mark. Things seem to be at least that many civilizations on view in various activities here on a week day you see tanned people at play everywhere, driving golf balls on practice ranges, playing tennis, roller skating, riding horseback. The high school football field on the north end of sports planes buzzing about.

The number of snack-bars, drive-ins, hamburger kiosks, dine and dance spots and cocktail bars seems staggering for a city of this size. The drive-in theatres at night are crowded with the strange spectacle of rows of cars, a veritable forest of aerial rods, facing on the big silver screen (even stranger was the sight of a politician making speeches at one of these screens earnestly addressing automobiles).

You wonder if these hustling people have any home life at all. Glance at the entertainment pages of the newspapers and you are confronted with a dazzling choice.

At the moment you may go square dancing or shake that thing to a rhumba band imported from Mexico. Harpo Marx is here in person with a troupe. So is Dizzie Gillespie, the bebop guy. The Arizona state fair is going full blast, with Chinese conducting up new Fords in a weekend contest. Figstad is due in tomorrow.

The whole aspect of the city is fun-loving and while it might take a long time to feel that you belonged (I think more than a week) the fact that you're invited to the Phoenix party.

Worlds Apart

It is probably a ridiculous comparison—it is a ridiculous comparison—but I have been thinking of the incredible difference between Phoenix and one of the cities I visited last winter in England. This is not merely like arriving in another country. It's another planet.

The whole thing, to my mind, is a matter of energy. These people seem to have plenty. That is why not? Here is the good red meat of hamburger at seven per pound, potatoes and grapefruit and watermelon, a horn of plenty spewed out at bargain prices.

Here is a city producing fresh orange juice or hot, buttered popcorn or cool, tinkling ice cubes for you at their cocktails. You can even get a block of ice from a service station self-machine.

And to contemplate this display of vitamins with the recent memory of the English potatoes and brussels sprouts, to look at this bustin'-all-over vitality, remembering the pallid men, makes you wonder if what we really need is not a new world politically, but a new world of orange juice.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

PERENNIAL FRIENDS

I wonder how we would look upon life were it not for our friends! In an entire lifetime we are lucky if we have accumulated there be but one or two, still do we possess a friend. Not one in a large a number as that, but if there be but one or two, still do we possess a friend.

It was Stevenson who once asked: "What can be more encouraging than to find the friend who was welcome at one age, still welcome at another?" Many of us have carried along with us such a friend or two—ever changing with ever changing circumstances.

In reading much from the books of W. H. Hudson, the naturalist, who lived much in the pampas, I noted that a stranger was habitually addressed as "friend." At first I was greatly impressed and it made me think how wonderful it would be if we always looked upon our fellowmen as a potential friend.

In youth we have a multitude of companions whom we refer to as our friends, but as the years accumulate so many of them drop out from our association and memory. Just a little while ago I met two old personal ones. But it is this small group that makes life worth while, and which gives to it its beauty and comfort. I read somewhere that the only person who spoke of by Napoleon as a friend (I think it was in his will) was his faithful valet.

In Fitz-Greene Halleck's poem upon the death of Joseph Rodman Drake, he spoke of him as "Friend of my better days!

None knew thee but to love thee
Nor named thee but to praise."

That must have been a wonderful friendship. One that must have come to Halleck to mourn and inspire him, long after his friend's departure. It is this kind of friendship that is spreading, warming, and giving cheer to an endless number.

The dog has long been referred to as "man's best friend." For the brain reason, that he is constant and faithful to the end. In W. H. Hudson's Book "The Purple Land" he tells of a man who had been murdered in a lonely place upon the pampas, but with his faithful dog beside him. Vultures gathered nearby, awaiting their chance, but the dog would allow not one to come near, not even leaving for water or food, later dying with his master. Yes I believe there must be a heaven for dogs, as well as for our perennial friends.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

25 YEARS AGO

Nov. 16, 1925

The Y.M.C.A. Conference for Eastern Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes will open at Belleville tomorrow, 28, 29, and 30, and Belleville Y. M. C. A. will be represented by Messrs. B. F. Jennings, representing the board of directors, and by one representative from each of the following sections: employed, boys group, high school boys, camp Ontario and the Y's Men's Club.

By early next week, it is hoped, all pouring of concrete at Belleville's magnificent new filtration plant will have been completed. Speaking to one of the men in charge today, The Ontario Intelligencer was informed that excellent weather has aided the builders.

Nov. 16, 1925

Belleville was visited by a disastrous fire which broke out shortly after one p. m. in the Palace Theatre situated on Front Street, and which spread rapidly and shortly after it was discovered, flames burst from the main entrance of the theatre and it was evident that the building was doomed to be the portion in front of the main entrance to the theatre and were assisted in the ground. The tenants lost their effects, but were fortunate to escape with their lives. The firemen succeeded in confining the fire to the building, but the Bank of Commerce to the north of the burned building and the Perfect Cafe to the south of the same building were flooded to some extent with water and considerable smoke.

40 YEARS AGO

Nov. 16, 1910

The steamer Belleville which went aground near Grafton has been floated and is now at Cobourg. She was released by the "Chieftain".

A horse attached to Mr. William McGie's delivery wagon ran away on Front Street this afternoon, but was caught at Victoria Avenue before much damage was done.

Mr. T. P. Brown, a resident of Belleville for 25 years, left today for Toronto where he will reside.

Mr. George Ross of Brockville spent yesterday here with friends.

Mr. Michael Manley of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, is spending a short time in town.

Mr. W. J. Hardy spent yesterday in Brockville.

50 YEARS AGO

Nov. 16, 1900

At the Belleville Assay Office of the Bronfield Mines during October, 153 samples of ore were received and assayed.

When Geen's Dining Store was opened for business this morning it was discovered that a burglary had been committed during the night. Perfume, shaving soap, smelling salts, chewing gum, stamps and about one dollar in small change was taken. The police have the matter in hand.

Mr. Lionel Parker of Chicago, Mr. Harry Parker of St. Paul and Mr. Fred Parker of New York are home owing to the death of their father, Capt. Joseph Parker.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The ancient and honorable profession of peddler probably originated in the dawn of time, when some cave man, in need of a new axe-head, would trade it for an extra bear hide he had lying around the cave, and hawked it about the neighborhood to find for an axe.

He was, obviously, an honorable man, and the peddler type would merely have gone with a club and beat the axe-head out of one of the neighbors' heads.

At all events, across the centuries in countless countries, the peddler with his pack or basket has gone wandering the roads of the earth, carrying his trade, his earning a living, and learning about the world and its inhabitants. Although until quite recently peddlers nearly all went on foot, the peddler by nature is on the move.

We ought to have a new word for peddling now. For peddlers go by motor car these days. On the side roads well back from the highways, in the countryside and in the towns, they are still with us in countless numbers.

They would be a big place. A peddler does not have to retrace his steps.

But there are still many peddlers in both country and town who do retrace their steps in the old tradition, and are watched for out of many a window as the seasons come and go. Peddling is one of the trades that the modern age cannot oust. In remote areas of the earth, there are doubtless peddlers who use airplanes.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

MAKING THE PAST OURS

Centuries ago a certain group of Nestorian Christians invaded China, as missionaries and established churches all through that great empire. But with the passing centuries the church declined in influence and numbers. Today,—practically nothing remains of the glorious days when a black stone tablet marking the place where these Nestorians first set up their church.

From a crusade to a monumental shrine! Well, of course, this is the story Christian belief was early condemned by the church as heresy. It appeared to set forth as Christian doctrine certain things which very decidedly are not Christian truth. So the unsoundness of Nestorian theology had something to do with the failure of this great project.

But the greatest cause of the decline and end was not doctrinal or inherited religion. This can work havoc with our faith. Is your religion an inherited religion? Has religion been a vital experience to you or have you taken for granted the motives which you observed other people using from habit?

Christianity is 2000 years old, yet there is a way in which it is young, very young. Its truths are truth as to be revitalized in the experience of every living person. It is not yours because you take it from habit, or as a matter of the past. To do this is not always easy.

MacKenzie's Column: King is Only Figurehead in Kingdom of Nepal

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The report persists that baby King Gyanendra of the Himalayan Kingdom of Nepal, the northern frontier of India, has been married to a granddaughter of the late Premier Rana who ruled as a political expedient.

This is a sequel to last week's sensation when the 13-year-old Gyanendra's grandfather, King Tribhuvan, was deposed by Prime Minister Maharajah Mohun Shamsher Jang Bahadur Rana, and fled to the British Legation in India. The Prime Minister placed the baby on the throne as a figurehead. The step to this Himalayan dramas is the fact that the king is only a figurehead and that the real monarty Prime Minister is the real ruler of the realm. The Prime Ministership has been controlled the throne since 1857. As the result of his action in deposing the King, who was bent on liberalizing the government, he now is battling to uproot the so-called Congress party which supported the monarch.

Amazing as such a child marriage would seem to western people, it isn't an event which would cause much surprise in Nepal, or in other neighboring Asiatic countries, for that matter. Child marriages have been going on in that part of the world from time immemorial.

Just Formality

Many of these marriages have been made for the sake of uniting families of wealth or rank. In cases where both parents have died the children usually have been a formality and the couple haven't set up housekeeping until they were old enough. In instances where the boy has been much older than his baby bride, he has waited until she reached maturity before the marriage was consummated.

Unfortunately, however, child marriages haven't been confined to such moderate cases. It long ago became a matter of practice in many eastern countries for grown men to-marry little girls as young as five, and set up housekeeping forthwith.

The results of course have been tragic beyond words. During my visits to India I heard appalling stories about such cases.

Things got so bad that back in 1929, the British Legislature passed an elaborate act to restrain child marriage.

Since those days there has been a vast decrease in child marriages in India, though they still occur in some circles. The result has been a steady increase in health and happiness.

Another practice, which was indirectly connected with marriage, also has been done away with. That was the custom of suttee under which a Hindu widow immolated herself on her husband's funeral pyre.

Naturally the girl bride of an elderly man often became virtually condemned to this horrible death.

Restored to Competency

Los Angeles, Nov. 16. (AP)—Craig Rice, who writes Whodunits, was restored yesterday to legal competency—pronounced by court order. Judge Newcomb Gordon signed the order, unless so she can sign a lucrative film contract. Miss Rice, one of the detectives married, was committed to a state hospital last year as a chronic alcoholic. Her case was diagnosed into her mother's custody last March 1.

NEAR 101ST BIRTHDAY

East Liverpool, O., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Next Saturday John Dunkerley will be a year along in his second century. The former oilfield worker will have to huff and puff one breath to blow out the 101 candles of his birthday cake. He has been retired since 1918.

(Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis, or treatment will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letter should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to these rules. Address: Dr. William Brady, 185 North Wabash Ave., Chicago 1, Ill.)

ROCHESTER MAN DISCOVERS NEW RACE

One Dr. Benson (Roy V. Benson)—or at any rate his home paper calls him Dr. Benson—has discovered a race of human beings with hands only half an inch thick. The hands of ordinary human beings are from 1¼ to 2 inches thick. That is to say, if you place the palm of the hand on floor or table top and rest a large book or say fifteen pounds of smoked herring on it you will find the thickness of the hand measures at least 1½ inches.

Roy V. Benson (I do not find the name in the medical directories or in Who's Who in America) is "Director of Safety Services" of the Rochester, (N. Y.) Chapter American Red Cross. So, naturally, he has both barrels loaded for a chance shot at me. It seems I manage to get in the habit of the big and little brass of the Red Cross whenever I point out in the public prints, the serious error in Schafer's manual prone-pressure method. Both the American Red Cross insists on making.

Schafer's method provides not only for intake of the largest possible volume of air into the lungs but also for drainage of any fluid which may obstruct the breathing.

The first of these important functions or benefits is assured by the position of the thorax, lung cage—especially the chest of the subject well above the head places the thorax in the most favorable position for inspiration, entrance of air into the lungs. The arms lie across the head above the head and the other placed under the head, this favorable position of the thorax is largely lost. But the Red Cross insists on placing the forearm, wrist or hand under the subject's head, and now that Schafer is no longer with us, who has the temerity to admonish the Red Cross? What is the information about this vital fault?

The second condition of Schafer's method provides and the Red Cross method withholds from the subject, is the drainage of water or other fluid which may obstruct the flow of air through the air passages. Schafer's method places the nose and mouth at the lowest possible level so that fluid flows from the breathing passages by gravity. Raise the mouth and nose an inch and you may create a watertrap in the breathing passages which will defeat the effort to restore breathing.

Mr. Benson says:

"In his booklet Dr. Brady pictures the first aider confronted with the victim in a position with his head resting on the clenched fist or high up on the elbow.

If this were true he may have a slight point . . . the head could be thrown back accidentally to cause a minor constriction of the air passage."

That would be worse than anyone I have ever heard of. Even if such constriction were possible, surely it would be of more than minor importance.

"But we all know," Mr. Benson continues, "that the Red Cross advocates the head rest on the back of the open hand at a point where the mouth is directly over the finger tips. This will raise the head only ¼ to 1 inch, place the mouth at the lowest point to allow drainage of secretions and the nose and mouth from rolling in the dirt, sucking in dirt particles, etc."

It seems to be a question of common sense, of a choice between Dr. Schafer's method and that of the organizations who have approved a standard technique operation."

In my files are scores of picture of operators applying artificial respiration in the way approved by the Red Cross and numerous organizations. Some of these show a head on the subject's head, some show a forearm, none shows the subject's head resting on the back of the hand.

The method I advocate is not "Dr. Brady's method" It is Schafer's method.

Now that we know enough to apply artificial respiration in the emergency and that within eight years old should be taught how to do so—surely no "particles of dust" are involved.

The technique of resuscitation is not a question of life or death.

It seems to me that the American Red Cross bases the modification of Schafer's method on a misunderstanding of the physiological principles involved.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Vitamins and Cataract

Please advise definite amount of vitamins daily that might help cataract. (Mrs. R. R.)

Answer: Sufficient daily intake of vitamin D may account for cataract in rachitic and elderly aged persons in the early stages of osteomalacia which is manifested by weakness of the back and limbs. Insufficient daily intake of vitamin D (vitamin D3) has apparently caused cataract in animals, and an optimal daily intake of vitamin D sometimes at times as much as the normal daily requirement) of riboflavin has apparently arrested or cleared up the cataract in some instances. I do not know whether this applies to cataract in man, but it can do no harm to take a course to try it out for a few months. Optimal daily intake of riboflavin would be 5000 units. Optimal daily ration of riboflavin would be 2 milligrams, and of vitamin B one-sixth of a grain.)

WINE PRICES HIGHER

Toronto, Nov. 16 — (CP) — Price increases ranging from five to 30 cents a bottle for wines go into effect in Ontario today, the Provincial Liquor Control Board announced Wednesday.

A five-cent boost is general for brands now selling at from 65 to 80 cents. Three brands are increased 15 cents and two sparkling wines are up 50 cents.

Brig. J. G. Sprague, Comptroller of the board, said the hikes are the result of increases to the Board of Ontario Wineries.

Hunting with her father and three or four other men at Lost Lake area, she brought down a beauty which weighed 190 pounds.

SIR CLEMENT JONES RE-ELECTED CHAIRMAN

London, Nov. 16. (Reuters)—The Council of the Royal Institute of International Affairs yesterday re-elected Sir Clement Jones as chairman. The Institute, founded in 1919 by a group of statesmen at the Paris Peace Conference, gathers and makes available accurate information on international affairs. But it is non-political and is precluded by its charter from expressing opinions.

Escaped Convict Is Recaptured In Toronto

Toronto, Nov. 16 — (CP) Allen Francis, 37, who escaped Nov. 4 from penitentiary at Kingston, was recaptured here last night. He will be held here for a day or two before being taken back to Kingston.

"We want to investigate what he's been doing around here," a senior police officer said today. "When we're through, he'll go to Kingston to face a charge of escaping custody."

Francis was serving a four-year term for car theft, imposed here last January.

A native of Owen Sound, he fled with a fellow-prisoner, Jean Bernard, 24, whose home is in Sudbury. They slipped away from an eight-man work party at the prison farm and, police say, made their getaway in an automobile taken from the home of Lt. - Gen. Guy Simonds, Commandant of the National Defence College in Kingston. The car was later recovered.

Bernard was arrested the night of Nov. 5 on the main street of Sydenham, near Kingston. He refused to give any clue to the whereabouts of Francis. Bernard was serving 30 years for theft.

Police last night arrested Francis after trailing a taxicab to an address on east - central Ontario Street. They snapped the handcuffs on him as he was about to step out of the car.

The Toronto officers had learned that Francis was in the city. Det. - Sgt. A. Payne and Detectives Frank Orlando, Charlie Cook and Jack Kenneth followed him in a cruiser.

Francis' wife is said to be living on Sherbourne Street in east-central Toronto.

Last weekend, Francis was the object of a widespread hunt throughout Southeastern Ontario. More than 100 Kingston police, provincial police and R.C.M.P. officers combed the Kingston district and every police officer in that section of the province was put on the alert.

Roadblocks were thrown up on main highways and at crossroads and bridges. Heavy rain and near-freezing temperatures hampered the search.

SAYS RUSS PLANE FASTER THAN U.S.

Lieut. Russell Brown, U.S.A.F., who shot down a Russian-made jet plane, has reported that the enemy plane was 100 m.p.h. faster than his F-80 Shooting Star. He engaged the enemy over the Yalu River in North Korea, and said he pulled steadily away from him before his shells knocked it out of the sky. — Central Press Canadian.

•JAP BONDS IN DEMAND

New York, Nov. 13 — (AP) — U. S. trading in Japanese dollar bonds was resumed today for the first time since the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941 and the prices jumped substantially above the 1941 levels.

The City of Tokyo 5s of '52, last sold nine years ago at 14½, changed hands today at 90. Tokyo 5½s of '61 also were transferred at 50, 15 points higher than the last trade in 1941. Oriental Development 5½s were 14 points higher at 50.

Mine-Crippled Freighter Arrives

Hong Kong, Nov. 16 (CP) — The British freighter Tainan, crippled by a mine last September and helpless victim of a 87-hour typhoon in the Strait of Formosa, reached Hong Kong in tow late yesterday.

The 2,994 ton vessel showed little effects of the typhoon's buffeting, but she displayed a gaping 20 foot hole as the result of the contact with the mine — presumably laid by the Chinese Nationalists.

She was being towed to Hong Kong by the tug Margaret Moller, after temporary repairs at Shanghai, when the typhoon struck and the towline broke. Without power, she rolled dangerously from 38 to 43 degrees, ship's officers said, before the Margaret Moller sighted her and again took her in tow more than three days later.

When the freighter was reported in distress, the Canadian destroyer Sioux, which had just arrived in Hong Kong for refitting, put out to the vessel's aid. However, the Margaret Moller had the Tainan in tow before the warship—one of three Canadian destroyers serving with United Nations forces in Korean waters —reached the crippled vessel. The other Canadian destroyers are the Athabaskan and the Cayuga.

TWO OF TRIPLETS DIE

Hamilton, Nov. 16 — (CP) — Two of the Jaszek triplets died Wednesday, barely 24 hours after their birth. Of the youngsters who totalled eight pounds in weight, one girl remains alive and in 'fair' condition. The triplets— two girls and a boy — were born prematurely to Mrs. Walter Jaszek.

Radio Conference Will Mean Better Reception in Areas

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP) — The North American radio conference ended last night with an agreement which delegates said will mean better radio reception for many areas in the United States and Cuba.

The agreement fixes regional use of channels by the U.S., Cuba, Canada, The Bahamas, Jamaica and the Dominican Republic.

Mexico originally participated in the conference but withdrew several weeks ago when its delegates decided they could not reach a settlement with other members, particularly the U.S.

Cuba was reported to have won its battle for use of an additional number of channels. These channels will be shared with U.S. stations, but will not interfere with reception in either country.

The problem which the month-long conference had sought to solve was the sharing of 107 radio channels by several thousand stations in seven countries.

FATALLY INJURED

Toronto, Nov. 16 — (CP) Mrs. Elizabeth Edhouse, 66, was fatally injured Wednesday when struck by an automobile near her home in west-central Toronto. Police later arrested William A. Spencer, 44, on a charge of dangerous driving.

Women of The Moose

On Monday night a number of the Moose women got together with the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Jr. Grad. Regt. Kay Donovon, and held a house warming for Co-Worker Nellie Scrimsegour. After intro- ductions to the visitors, all sat down to play games and the amount of laughter everyone was having a wonderful time.

At the close of the games, Nel- lie was led to the living-room where all joined in singing "For She is a Jolly Good Fellow," while Irene Reed played the pi- ano. Then came the gifts in beautiful wrappings of pink, blue and white with bows to match. When opened, there were cups and saucers in paste shades some with rose buds and violets, beau- tiful assortment of towels in dif- ferent hues, also frosted glasses.

While the hostess and Melissa Carey, Emma McCullough and Peggy Mintz were preparing re- freshments, all enjoyed a sing- song, but as usual all good things have to come to a close, so good nights were said, hoping for an- other get-together soon.

Women's Institute

UNIONDALE W.I.

The November meeting of Uniondale Woman's Institute was held at Mrs. Alton Sine's, 6th concession of Sidney, with 30 members and visitors present.

A card of thanks from Mrs. Edison Sine was read. Report of sale at Gordon Wray's given, clearing $55. Delegate to con- vention first day were Mrs. H. Frost, second day, Mrs. Geo. Bird.

A special meeting is being planned sometime after 30th of November, for presidents, vice presidents and secretaries of branches to be held at Mrs. George Burkitt's, 4th concession of Sidney. Exchange of Christmas gifts to be for the December meeting, each member to bring a gift, not to exceed 25 cents.

Program followed with a read- ing by Mrs. George Striker "Thoughts by the Way." Joyce Morris gave a talk on her trip to Montreal sponsored through the Junior Farmers. She report- ed a good time and the visiting of many places of interest.

Instructive Ideas

Mrs. Roy Bush, district presi- dent, was then called on for an address, who gave an interesting talk and instructive ideas that can be passed along to others. One idea was to have a family night so all could get together and learn the thoughts and opin- ions of others. Then to work in any way one can to keep down the standard of living, help to keep religion going in the neigh- borhood by working with the young people; have young peo- ple's meetings each one taking a part. Plan programs so they will be understanding and interesting to draw a larger crowd at every meeting; learn the necks of or- dinary housekeeping, by having a demonstration on clean washed clothes, and how to mop floors without streaking. This all warms up to better living, better living quarters, and better institute communities.

Mrs. Morley Sine thanked Mrs. Bush for her instructive message

WEST HUNTINGDON

Neighbors Welcome New Residents

West Huntingdon—A large number of friends and neighbors gathered at Mr. and Mrs. Don Spencer's home on Wednesday evening to welcome them to this community. Mr. Phillip Carr pre- sided over a short program which consisted of welcome speeches by a number present, two songs by Sharon and Donna Hammond, a reading by Mrs. Don Haggerty and two solos by Mrs. Foster Wilson.

Mr. Don Spencer replied voicing his appreciation for the warm welcome extended to them. Refreshments and a social half hour brought a happy evening to a close.

Club Activities

ARTS AND CRAFTS CLUB

The November meeting of th Belleville Arts and Crafts Club was held in the "Craft Shop" of Albert College with the Presi- dent, Mrs. J. G. Hornsby, in the chair.

During the business session, it was decided to hold an exhibition and sale of members' work in "Philippe's Studio", in early De- cember. Mrs. Hornsby then gave a resume of a broadcast which she made over Station CJBQ con- cerning Arts and Crafts Club activities.

Miss Marion MacFarlane took charge of the remainder of the evening which was spent in etch- ing aluminum trays with Miss MacFarlane demonstrating the process very capably.

Open House Enjoyed by H.&S. Group

Open-house was observed at King George School Monday night in connection with the regular monthly meeting of the Home and School Association. Class rooms were open and teachers were present to discuss the progress of the children with their parents.

Mrs. Cross, president welcomed the parents and all newcomers to the association. Mr. Hackett principal, spoke briefly and three new teachers of the staff were introduced: Mrs. Stewart, Miss Grier and Mr. Burgoyne. Attendance prize was awarded to Mr. Laughlin's Grade 7.

Alderman William Argue addressed the meeting explaining tentative plans for the setting up of the health department in the city. The co-operation of the county will be required and the issue is to be voted upon the the coming municipal election. If the plan is carried through it would be of great benefit to school children, consequently home and school associations are vitally interested. By unanimous vote the association agreed to show their support by co-operating with other home and school associations in sponsoring and advertisement in the press.

Mrs. Ivor Butler, social convener gave a report of her committee for the past month, at the close of which Mrs. Cross, president, presented her with a gift on behalf of the association in appreciation of her untiring effort in connection with the annual banquet held for Grade 8 graduates in October.

An educational and entertaining film was shown after which Mr. Gendron, program convener, invited everyone to participate in games in the recreation room. Later refreshments were served by the social committee.

Onions -- They Treat You Well

Vegetables treat you well and give you good dividends of food value only if they are treated well by the gardener, the retailer and the cook. Of the three perhaps the cook must take most of the blame for the uninteresting and unappetizing vegetables that are often served in homes and restaurants.

The slogan, "cook vegetables in as little water as possible, for as short a time as possible, in a closely covered pan", has become almost a battle cry of Nutritionists in their war on malnutrition. Many families have had much more enjoyment in their cabbage and carrots since the homemaker learned to cook them by recommended methods. New ways of serving old, familiar vegetables will often arouse interest and appreciation and the occasional use of an unfamiliar one will be welcomed.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, suggest three ways of using common vegetables.

Parsnip Patties

2 cups cooked, mashed parsnips
1 tablespoon flour
1 egg
Salt and pepper to taste

Combine parsnips, flour and slightly beaten egg. Season with salt and pepper. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased hot frying pan and fry to a golden brown, turn and brown other side. Serve hot. Yield: six servings (12 patties).

Steamed Red Cabbage

6 cups finely shredded red cabbage
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 cup vinegar
Salt and pepper to taste.

Melt butter in saucepan. Add vinegar and cabbage with salt and pepper. Cover closely and cook until cabbage is tender but crisp, 10 to 15 minutes. Yield: six servings.

Creamed Fried Onions

2 tablespoons butter
4 cups sliced onions (4 to 6 medium onions)
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups hot milk
1/4 teaspoon salt
Pepper

Melt butter in a heavy frying pan. Add onions, cover and cook slowly until tender, about 15 minutes. Blend flour and cook until it becomes golden brown, about one minute. Add hot milk gradually and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Season with salt and pepper. Yield: six servings.

Baked Turnips

Slice raw turnips and place in layers in a greased casserole. Sprinkle each layer with salt, pepper and a very little nutmeg. Add milk to half fill the dish. Top with crumbs and dot with butter or grated cheese. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375F., until tender, about 1 hour.

Merry Makers Demonstrate Cottons May be Smart

The Merry Makers of Huff's Island held their third meeting on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Jack Mosley. Miss Ruby Zulinick was hostess.

All the girls had their pattern and material selected for their cotton dress. Their material certainly proved the fact that, "Cottons May be Smart."

The discussion involved such points as the correct way to stand walk, sit and bend over to pick up any object. Demonstrations were made by the girls.

The girls were shown how to work a swing button hole. This was an opportunity for a showing of some fine needlework by the girls. Patterns were checked for correct size.

Names were exchanged between the girls and leaders in order to exchange a Christmas gift at the meeting before Christmas.

An enjoyable social hour was spent during which time Judy and Dorcus served delicious refreshments.

ST. PAUL'S W.M.S.

Stirling—The November meeting of St. Paul's W.M.S. of the United Church met at the church parlors on Tuesday afternoon with a fair attendance.

Mrs. A. E. Baker convened the program and read a few verses from different psalms based on the key-note "Peace." Miss Verna Brown, of Carmel, favored with a solo "Stars Comrade, Sleep." Vimy Ridge Memorial.

Mr. A. E. Baker told of their trip to the Vimy Ridge memorial in 1936. He said there was over 5,000 persons in the pilgrimage wearing berets. King Edward VIII unveiled the monument, and at the front of the crosses of the Canadian soldiers is inscribed the words, "Their Names Liveth Ever More."

They spent a month in England and visited many places of interest which included brought to the Queen's Choir in Westminster Abbey. Mrs. Baker read a poem on the "Unknown Soldier" and closed this part of the meeting with "O Valiant Hearts who to your glory came."

Mrs. Cecil Macklin took charge of the business portion of the meeting. Miss D. Caldwell, corresponding secretary, brought some thoughts from the Missionary Monthly and also read an invitation from Holloway United Church to attend their bazaar in November.

A well in the church has fallen out, so it is hoped a good number will be able to attend.

The parcel of mitts has been sent and thanks received.

Christian Stewardship

Mrs. A. Armstrong brought a few thoughts on Christian Stewardship. Mrs. H. David read a clipping "Two Faces" on Christian citizenship.

Mrs. A. E. Good, friendship convener, reported 14 calls made during the month of October and also read a removal slip from the Sidney United Church W.M.S. stating that Mrs. Albert Wright had moved to Stirling. It is time also to renew the Missionary Monthly.

Life Membership

Mrs. W. Baker presented her friend Mrs. LaRue who is a member of the Bay Street W.M.S. Belleville, with a Life Membership certificate.

Mrs. Macklin read two verses of hymn "Jesus Master, Whom I Serve" as a prayer.

The remainder of the Christmas parcels for the Christie St. Hospital should be brought in for the December meeting.

Mrs. Dave Lucey and Miss Della Caldwell are the nominating committee to bring in the new slate of officers at the next meeting for the coming year 1951.

Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and tea were served by the lunch committee.

Mrs. Will Fox tendered a vote of thanks to Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Baker for the fine program, and all those who made the meeting possible.

ACCEPTS U. K. PROPOSAL

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Nov. 15 — (AP) — Argentina has accepted a British proposal for renewal of the tripartite Antarctic "truce," foreign ministry sources said yesterday. Under this agreement, Great Britain has proposed be extended until the end of 1951, Argentina, Chile and Britain undertake not to make naval demonstrations in Antarctic waters.

CONVICTED OF THEFT

London, Nov. 18 (CP) —Joseph McIntosh, 27, of (Forward Ave.) Peterborough, was remanded to Nov. 22 for sentence by Magistrate Donald Menzies when convicted of the Sept. 3 theft of $4500 in Dominion of Canada bonds from Leo Goyetche of London.

McIntosh was arrested in Peterborough Oct. 31. Police said the bonds were cashed in various Ontario cities and that McIntosh was without funds when arrested.

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking?

The words "French Toast" are not used in France. Frenchmen call it "Pain Perdu" meaning lost bread, like a lost soul. In spite of this name, it is a popular dessert served with sugar and jam and eaten for both lunch and dinner.

In other countries it is known as German Toast or Spanish Toast depending upon your favorite national type of cookery.

It is important, when making French toast, to select bread that is not too sugar or rubbery. Unsliced bread, a day old, is best for this purpose.

The bread should be dipped in egg and milk only long enough to moisten. If it is soaked too long, it will break when turned in the frying pan.

While, rye or whole wheat bread may be used. It may be dipped in a light fritter batter and fried in deep fat if you want a more substantial version of French toast.

To give the toast an even, light golden color; fry it on a lightly greased griddle. For a browner crust, fry it in a pan with fat that is hot but not smoking. Never use butter or margarine since either of these fats will turn brown during frying.

Try hot French toast as the base for a chicken, cheese and bacon sandwich.

French Toast Club Sandwiches. Serves 4.

2 eggs
1 cup buttermilk
1-8 teaspoon salt
8 slices whole wheat bread
Vegetable shortening
Sliced chicken
1-4 lb. sliced swiss cheese
8 slices browned bacon
Paprika.

There should be enough chicken thinly sliced to cover 4 slices of bread.

Beat eggs slightly. Combine with buttermilk and salt. Beat again.

Melt 2 tablespoons shortening in a heavy frying pan.

Dip each slice of bread in buttermilk mixture. Brown on both sides in hot fat. Add clean fat to pan, if necessary, during frying.

Top 4 slices of toast place first the chicken, then the swiss cheese and finally the bacon. Sprinkle with paprika.

Place under a moderate broiler flame only until cheese becomes soft. It should not run off sides of bread. Place slices of toast on top to make closed sandwiches. Serve at once.

Sliced ham or any other cooked meat may be substituted for chicken if desired.

Good Marriage Is Not Menaced By Minor Spats

Winnipeg (CP) — Marriages are not headed for the rocks just because the husband and wife do not see eye-to-eye on everything.

Dr. Gerda Allison, mother and doctor, says it is perfectly natural, and also desirable, for husband and wife not to agree on everything. The prime requisite of the happy marriage is agreement on the ultimate goal.

Dr. Allison was one of three speakers who addressed the Westminster Church Marriage Clinic. The others were Dr. Murray Campbell and Dr. Dorothea Wardrop.

Dr. Campbell said the truly happy couple must have a number of things in common.

In addition to "a real affection, emotional maturity, intellectual union and a union of body and soul, he said the happy couple should have common background, church, grammar, table manners, and similar elements including a mutual hobby.

Complete frankness and an understanding of your mate it vital, he added.

Equal Partnership

Both doctors stressed equal partnership status for husband and wife. "Dignified Victorian acquiescence is no longer fashionable," Dr. Allison said. Also, as far as the wife is concerned, she deplored "slavish submission."

Marriage was not the end of the story. "It is just the beginning," a "dynamic state" calling for continual adjustment. The key to happy marriage is "tolerance, understanding and good humor . . . and an informed and realistic attitude toward sex."

Dr. Wardrop said "sex education should be according to the be according to the shrd lecdd development of a child and should start with children, not at the pre-marital stage."

MARSH HILL

Presentation Made To Pastor and Family

Marsh Hill—The Rev. F. Gilbert preached his farewell sermon Sunday morning, at Marsh Hill. At the close of the service Col. Roscoe Vanderwater addressed a few words of appreciation on behalf of the congregation, to Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert.

Mrs. Fred Campbell and Mrs. Ben Bleecker then presented them with a lovely Kenwood blanket and two cups and saucers.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert though taken by surprise, thanked the Marsh Hill congregation for their lovely gifts.

PHILLIPSTON - ZION

"Snappy Snippers" Hold Meeting

Phillipston-Zion — The first meeting of the Club Girls was held in the home of Mrs. F. Bell last Saturday. The girls are starting on their fifth project, which is, "Cotton Accessories for the Club Girl's Bedroom".

The list of officers as elected, president, Lois Sills; secretary, Donna Hay; treasurer, Connie Sills; press reporter, Irene Sine. The name chosen by the members was the "Snappy Snippers".

Plans were made for record books, since next achievement day special attention is going to be directed their way.

Discussions were based on "bedroom accessories" which should be colorful and harmonious with pleasing and lasting beauty. Many interesting color schemes can be built up from a dark floor foundation.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Ray, our hostess and leader.

Will Aid Mothers Who Lack Support

Vancouver (CP)—Soon there will be an organization for unsupported mothers in Vancouver.

An association is being organized by Mrs. Robert Symington, clerk in the police department's records office, and now has a membership of 15.

Mothers who are without a husband's support and unmarried mothers will be admitted to membership.

The association, said Mrs. Symington, is "for the improvement of existing conditions of unsupported mothers everywhere."

It will be for those who wish to maintain a happy single home, developing and helping them in some self-chosen field of work.

There will be a course of lectures on all phases of becoming a better mother and a better companion to the child.

ROOM FOR MORE

Density of population in all Australia is only 2.8 persons to the square mile.

WOOLER

Leila McColl Elected Pres. of Cereal Shelf

Wooler—The first meeting of the Girls' Club "The Cereal Shelf" was held on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of the leader, Mrs. Gordon Cole. Leila McColl was elected as president, Lillian Pelser secretary-treasurer and Donna McColl press reporter. There were 11 members present.

The first subject discussed was 'Record Books'. They should be neat, attractive, clean and there are several items of each meeting that must be recorded.

Measures and abbreviations used in recipes were then taken up.

A pattern for everyday living was mapped out in the form of Canadian food rules.

The girls were asked, "What do we mean by Cereals?" A cereal, it was discovered was an edible grain. Examples were given.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. Cole served refreshments.

Modern Theories May be Harmful

Cheltenham, Gloucestershire, Eng. (CP) — J. F. Wolfenden, vice-chancellor of Reading University, says modern theories that children must be allowed complete liberty to "express" themselves do more harm than good.

Wolfenden told a conference:

"A sound and steady appreciation of the difference between right and wrong, true and false, beautiful and ugly, still seems to me to be more important than information about the distance of the sun from the earth or about the names of the kings of Judah.

"The theory of self-development seems to depend on the fallacy that children are born perfect and need no more for their growth to perfection than to be left alone to unfold the riches of their angelic natures."

KILLED BY TAXICAB

Toronto, Nov. 15 — (CP) — George MacKay, 78, was killed today when struck by a taxicab police said was driven by David Lloyd Jones, 26. Mr. MacKay, a native of Tavistock, Ont., was secretary - treasurer of Mealing and MacKay Coal Company Ltd., and was well-known for his work among underprivileged families.

ONE YEAR IN PRISON

London, Nov. 16 — (Reuters)— Douglas Monro, 25-year-old seaman, today went to jail for a year for stealing a church box from Buckingham Palace. Monro pleaded innocent to burglary but guilty to larceny.

Police were satisfied there was no more in Monro's act than a mixture of drink and bravado.

PICTURE OF FEAR

A picture of dejection and fear, this North Korean guerrilla, captured by U.S. troops, sits submissively under the business end of a rifle. He was sent back of the U.N. lines to snipe and destroy supplies. — Central Press Canadian.

MADOC

J. Stanley Glen Conducts Service At St. Peter's

Madoc — Large congregations, both morning and evening, marked the 97th anniversary of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Madoc, last Sunday. The minister, the Rev. M. W. Heslip, presided at both services and was assisted, in the evening, by the Rev. F. J. Laine who, with his congregation of Trinity United Church, was present for the occasion.

Guest Preacher

Prof. J. Stanley Glen, M.A., B.D., Ph.D., of Knox College, the anniversary preacher, chose as his text in the morning "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ" (Romans 5:1).

As an illustration of how we try to "justify" ourselves, he told of a child making excuses for his poor report card, and of a motorist trying to "justify" himself after a motor accident. We cannot be continued, be "justified" before God and have real peace except by living faith in the sacrifice of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross."

Persistency of Paul

In the evening Pro. Glen spoke on the "persistency of Paul". He told how Paul repeatedly faced opposition, but still persisted. We, too, may have to face opposition. We can meet this with retaliation and bitterness, or retreat which is failure. As Christians we cannot give up or leave those who oppose us because the love of Christ constrains us. Sail only helps when it retains its saltiness; so the Christian can only help those who oppose him when he retains his Christianity. As Christians we are fighting for and on behalf of one opponent and must persist.

Fine Music

The music all day was very fine with Mr. R. Robertson at the organ, and Mr. W. B. Rothwell as guest soloist. The choir assisted by the junior choir, sang "Will There Be Any Stars in My Crown?" and Mr. Rothwell's solo in the morning was "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" and in the evening, "My God and Father While I Stray".

A special feature was an unaccompanied octette, "Now the Day Is Over" by the Misses Shirley Cateror, Grace Edwards, Joy Ann Fox, Mary Ann McGregor, Margaret Nelson, Sylvia Shaw, Marion Yearwood and Barbara Young.

All are looking forward to the anniversary supper on Wednesday, Nov. 15.

BURR'S

Burrs—The November W.A. met at the home of Mrs. Ross Burr on Thursday afternoon. The president opened with a devotional period, assisted by Mrs. F. Huffman and Mrs. R. Burr.

Business included paying the final bill for the church floor and receiving funds from the autograph quilt and penny bags, which aggregated over $135. There are a few blocks not yet handed in.

It was decided to use a holiday dime card to choose two groups in the W.A. to collect pennies during the new year in place of the penny bags and travelling apron.

Mrs. Edwards thanked members for the plant and cards sent her while in hospital. Mrs. L. Burr and Mrs. G. Harns were asked to check the receipts from the quilt and penny bags to which they kindly consented.

Mrs. H. Diggins, Mrs. J. Bruining, Mrs. G. Harns and Mrs. L. Burr were guests at the meeting. Mrs. Burr was assisted in serving by Mrs. Leon Caughey, Mrs. K. Bilakely, Mrs. E. Edwards and Mrs. J. Bruining.

Mrs. M. Adams invited the December meeting to her home where an exchange of Christmas gifts among members is anticipated.

Birthday Tea

Mrs. V. Squire was hostess to five guests at a birthday tea and party for Paul on his eighth anniversary Tuesday afternoon. Games, gifts and a modelling table afforded a jolly time.

Mrs. R. Whitten of Bloomfield was the guest of her sister, Mrs. F. Purielle for a few days.

The play from Trenton held at the L.O.L. hall at Allisonville on Friday evening was well attended and well given.

Mr. M. Parks, Mr. T. VanCott, Mr. H. Caldwell and Mr. E. Edwards spent the week in the northland in quest of deer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr and Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Burr were Sunday dinner and evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. and Mr. and Mrs. D. Harns.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Osterhout were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. Osterhout and girls at Redners-ville.

MARMORA

Marmora— Mr. Michael Finnegan and son, Michael, of Picton, spent Tuesday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Finnegan.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Morley, of Peterborough, visited the latter's mother, Mrs. Annie Parks, over the weekend.

Mr. William Leonard is confined to his home, through illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Simons, of Hamilton, are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl O'Connor.

ANCIENT COFFIN STOLEN

London, Nov. 15—(Reuters)—The British Museum reported last night the theft of a coffin and four other leaden antiquities dating back to Roman times in Britain.

CAMPBELLFORD

Speaker Describes Historical Sights In Old Country

Campbellford — Rotarian T. J. Craighead addressed members of the Campbellford Rotary club at the luncheon on Monday. He recently returned from a two-months' visit to the British Isles and told the club of his experiences during his visit to Scotland.

Mr. Craighead spoke of the many historical sights and said he believed there were more monuments to Bobby Burns than to any other person in the country. He visited the estate of Lloyd George, and described how two locomotives were required to pull the train up the twisting mountain paths near Stirling, where the Battle of Bannockburn was fought in 1314.

Much of the grain in the country was still in the fields and as the weather had remained wet for so long, some of it would be a total loss.

Mr. Craighead described the "Electric Brae", which many Scotsmen claim is an optical illusion, but which many others swear is a natural phenomenon. He described how he drove to the brae with a friend, and as they were going down the incline, the friend stopped the car, turned off the ignition, and left the car in neutral with the brakes off. Mr. Craighead opened the door of the vehicle and watched the car back up the hill about eight inches. Persons going up the hill on their bicycles say hardly any energy is required to climb it.

Eggs, sugar, tea, butter, candy and meat are still rationed, but the people appear cheerful. "The hospitality of the people is much greater than that we find in Canada", said Mr. Craighead. Total strangers will do all in their power to help anyone.

Rotarian Dr. O. C. Watson moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, and President Art Loucks thanked Mr. Craighead on behalf of the club.

Kinsmen Hear Outline of C.C.F. Govt. in Sask.

Campbellford — Rev. Gordon Whitehorne of the Seymour United Church charge was the guest speaker at the Kinsmen Club meeting at the Trent House on Monday night. Mr. Whitehorne, who has resided in Saskatchewan for many years, spoke on the province and its government. He gave what he termed at the outset, a politically unbiased report of the activities of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation government of Saskatchewan, to which the people of the rest of Canada looked with curiosity, as this province was the first to elect the CCF to office.

Mr. Whitehorne spoke as an observer, and not as a politician. The principle of co-operation had been applied in Saskatchewan, which had seen dark times during the depression of the early 1930's. The government sponsored Saskatchewan Wheat Pool was the start of their period of recovery. This involved some 11,000 grain elevators in the province. Prime Minister Thomas C. Douglas, M.A., was elected to head the CCF government in 1944. He brought about many improvements in the mode of living, particularly to the poorer classes.

A hospitalization scheme was brought about whereby each citizen paid an annual levy of $10, or a maximum levy of $20 for one family. The government policy was "Every citizen has the right to good health, regardless of financial standing." In certain health areas a voluntary payment of $25 each year allows the individual to fully protect himself financially against any illness or accident, including surgery expenses. The government has fully equipped aerial ambulances which will rush any emergency case to hospital from any point in the province, for a nominal fee of $25.

Four Districts Looked After

In the new school areas, which have been created, a method of taxation has been worked out affording poorer districts the same educational facilities as the more prosperous regions enjoy. Teachers are paid good wages, and free text books are supplied to all public school students.

A bill of rights has been passed, guaranteeing among other things, elections at least every five years, in order to combat political propaganda that civil liberties were being threatened, and free elections abolished. The CCF party was re-elected to power with a reduced majority in 1948. The government had embarked upon many business ventures of its own, but some of these were not satisfactory.

Kinsman Bruce Grills moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, and president Ron Hazell thanked Rev. Whitehorne on behalf of the club.

Six Trenton guests were present at the meeting, and in a brief ceremony Kinsman Vern Wannamaker of Trenton, presented President Ron Hazell of the Campbellford club with a "Voyageur Gong," a travelling relic designed to promote inter-club fraternization. Members of the Campbellford club will take the gong to Tweed in the near future.

The date of the annual Christmas turkey bingo was announced as Thursday, December 14th.

RESORT HOTEL BURNS

Parry Sound, Nov. 15 — (CP) — The Monteith Inn, one of the oldest and best - known summer hotels in the Muskoka district, was destroyed by fire Wednesday night. The inn at Rosseau, 24 miles south of here, was closed for the winter.

Twins Tell Father House on Fire, Heavy Damage

Campbellford—Several hundred dollars damage was caused on Tuesday afternoon when fire raged through the upper part of a house on Bannie Street, owned by Mr. Alex McInroy.

Mr. McInroy, who works at the Campbellford Cloth Company, was home for dinner when his five-year-old twin boys, Willie and Ward came running downstairs to tell him the house was on fire. The alarm was immediately turned in and the firemen responded promptly.

Most of the damage caused was due to the dense smoke. Water damage was kept to a minimum, when workmen from the woolen mill, where Mr. McInroy was employed, arrived after the firemen left, with a company pump, with which they pumped out the water.

Mrs. McInroy, who was recovering from an illness, was removed from the burning building and admitted to the Campbellford Hospital, where her condition was reported as satisfactory on Tuesday night.

The blaze, which started in a fur coat in a clothes closet, in an upstairs bedroom, gained considerable headway at first, which prompted neighbors to remove much of the furniture and personal belongings. Most of the clothes owned by the family, however, were lost. There was no insurance on the building or its contents.

JUNIOR FARMERS DO THE JUDGING

Cattle came under close scrutiny at the Royal Winter Fair, Toronto, as representatives from all provinces joined in the judging. The judging was under the auspices of the Boys' and Girls' Farm Clubs which has an enrolment of 54,000 in Canada. Many girls were among the delegates sent by the provinces having beaten out the boys in contests for the honors. — Central Press Canadian.

PICTON

Milk Pool Favored by Head Of Concentrated Products

Picton—Good farm management coupled with good marketing of products mean happiness and more prosperous times for farmers, Allison Graham, Chesterville, president of the Ontario Concentrated Milk Producers, told the annual meeting of Prince Edward C. M. Producers, Monday night. The occasion was marked by a banquet at St. Andrew's church. Mr. Graham saw an improved market for concentrated milk products. He believed that there should be a milk pool by which flow of milk could be regulated into different plants to avoid surpluses and consequent flooding of markets and disastrous prices.

Threat to Industry

Charles McInnes, Brockville, saw in products in which vegetable oils are used, a threat to the dairy industry, and consequently he said, to the basic industry of Canada and the prosperity of the Dominion.

If free access of vegetable oil importation is allowed, we are contributing to the devaluation of the dollar which is governed by the amount of export and import trade, he said.

Protection has been given industry, those in various professions and others, in the form of tariffs and regulations and the dairy industry is deserving of protection from the threat of imported vegetable oils which are now being used in an ever-widening range of products, he declared.

The Canadian farmer is the only group in Canada which produces and does not put its own price tag on their products, he said, we have allowed marketing of farm products to be done by someone not interested in the producers. A different type of marketing legislation is needed, he believed.

Should Be Parity Price

"There should be a parity price for milk used in all dairy products", declared W. H. Montgomery, president of the County Cheese Producers' Association." A body is needed to direct milk into the channel which will bring best returns for the producer, and permit orderly production. He urged commodity groups to work in close harmony, and for producers to follow their example.

Donald Baxter, M.P.P., saw a prosperous agriculture, a necessity for a prosperous country and to maintain the general high standard of living. "We are certainly headed for destruction if the sale of margarine is not halted," he declared, and believed that agriculture has a story which should be brought home to city people.

Warden Norris Whitney stressed the importance of the dairy industry.

Increase Secured

President Barton Cronk reported on the year's work. An increase of 30c had been sought in the price of milk and one of 25c had been secured.

Basil Dulmage, Winchester, urged testing of herds to weed out cows who are boarders and to improve production.

Harold Noxon, secretary, presented the annual reports. Entertainment included music by an orchestra, solos by Ralph and Betty Pickering, reading by Mrs. George Leavitt.

Officers elected were Barton Cronk, president; H. Noxon, secretary-treasurer; directors, Sam Dodds, Milton Brooks, Herb Creasy, Howard Dulmage, Ross Parks, Lyle Branscombe, Rae Ferguson, Clarke Sprung.

Resume Civilian Air Mail Service To Korea at Once

Ottawa, Nov. 16 (CP) —Civilian air mail service to Korea is being resumed immediately but postal service to the republic by surface remains suspended, the post office announced.

The air mail service is limited to unregistered letters, postcards and Canada air letter forms. The rates will be 25 cents for the ounce on air mail letters and 15 cents each for Canada air letter forms.

The post office said the resumption of air mail services does not alter the special mailing facilities already provided for mail to members of the Canadian armed forces serving in the Korean theatre, which go at domestic rates care of the postmaster at Vancouver. Navy mail goes care of the fleet mail officer, at H.M.C. Dockyard, Esquimalt, B.C.

Christmas parcels and ordinary letters intended for delivery to Canadian servicemen in the Korean theatre must be mailed to reach Vancouver before Nov. 28. Air letters, prepaid at domestic air rates, must be received at Vancouver before Dec. 12.

US Radar Screen Backed by Jets Passes Test

By WES GALLAGHER

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 16—(AP)—A previously secret American radar screen backed by jet fighter patrols to protect Western Europe against surprise attack has passed its first test, it was revealed today.

The test was supplied by communist planes carrying delegates from England to the communist-line Peace Congress in Warsaw.

Their flights were tracked and patrols investigated them.

Twenty - nine unauthorized flights by Eastern Europe communist planes were sighted and traced as they moved yesterday over Western Germany.

The west has placed no embargo against flying over Western Germany—but demands that each plane notify air headquarters of its arrival, course and identity.

British Casualties 51 Killed, 158 Wounded

London, Nov. 16 —(AP)—Defence Minister Emanuel Shinwell told the House of Commons today British casualties in Korea to date are 51 killed, 158 wounded and five missing. About 10,000 British troops are engaged.

Winston Churchill, the opposition leader, said the house should "thank God" that British losses have been no heavier.

"In view of the fact that the U.S. losses have been perhaps 200 times as great," Churchill added, "would it not be well also for us to express our sympathy with their families and relations for the great sacrifices they have made in the common cause?"

Impact of Oil Boom on Alberta Economy Strikingly Evident; Spending at All-Time High

By GRAHAM TROTTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Edmonton, Nov. 16 (CP)—The impact of Alberta's fabulous oil boom on the economy of the province is strikingly evident this year, Government spending, lubricated with a constant flow of revenue from oil development, is at an all-time high.

Government oil profits—from royalties, sale of development leases and rental charges—leaped $32,353,000 for the first 8 1-2 months of the fiscal year ending next March 31.

Oil revenue in the whole fiscal year of 1949-50 totalled $33,370,000. In the 1946-47 fiscal year it was $12,490,000.

This year's fat oil surplus is a far cry from the $1,000,000 annually the government averaged before the momentous discovery of the Leduc oil-field in 1947 and the subsequent tapping of other major oil pools in Northern Alberta.

Heavy Earnings Realised

Premier Ernest Manning says $72,313,000 has been invested since the accelerated development of provincial oil resources began 2 1-2 years ago.

The government is spending $112,000,000 this fiscal year. Mr. Manning, also provincial treasurer, originally estimated in his budget last March that spending would total $74,600,000, which also would have been a record. The Premier expects oil money will enable the government at last to break even.

The heavy volume of oil revenue—and in a common pool with other income—allows the government to provide for improved and extended public services, retirement of debt, substantial financial aid to municipalities and large-scale capital construction.

But for oil profits, says Mr. Manning, Alberta would be forced to reduce drastically expenditures for essential capital construction this year, or resort to increased taxation or public borrowing.

Not Borrowing Money

The government is not borrowing any money. It has borrowed only once since 1935—$2,500,000 in 1947.

Because of oil revenue, Alberta is well on the way to becoming the Dominion's first debt-free province. It has paid off $21,650,000 of its debt in the last three years—$20,400,000 of it this year. The province was saved $24,191,000 under a reorganized debt retirement plan formulated this year.

The remaining funded provincial debt —$89,008,000—should be wiped out by 1973 through capital payments of about $5,000,000 yearly.

Income from natural resources, principally oil, now is higher than that accruing from taxation, for the first time in the province's history.

Taxes Kept Down

Oil profits have prevented taxes from rising, although there was no reduction this year. The province levies no sales tax. Amusement, liquor, gasoline and automobile registration taxes are all that are assessed by the province.

Capital construction expenditures on roads, bridges and public buildings are increasing by leaps and bounds.

As record $34,000,000 is being spent during the current fiscal year on roads and bridges—more than double the amount spent in the previous period. Capital expenditures on public buildings are expected to total $11,000,000—double what was spent last year.

The government set up a $5,000,000 fund this year from which municipalities draw low-interest loans to finance self-liquidating improvement projects such as installation of water and sewage systems. It is also loaning $3,000,000 for construction of new schools and $2,500,000 for construction by the Alberta government telephones system.

English Village Blacksmith Works Long, Hard

Daventry, Northampton, England, Nov. 16 — (Reuters) — A village blacksmith who wants to work long and hard and a local authority which objects are central figures in a dispute now before a government department.

The blacksmith, Sidney Herbert Moss, 38, asked for a renewal of his workshop licence but the County Planning Department said complaints had been received that he worked late hours. The licence would only be renewed if he stopped work earlier and cut out Sunday work.

Moss explained that he often worked late doing urgent repairs to farm machinery.

The dispute has been referred to the Ministry of Town and Country Planning.

Million Dollars Likely to go Into Pension Fund

Cincinnati, Nov. 16 — (AP)—Baseball's top brass gets together today to decide who gets the million dollars, and to boost some deserving talent from the minors to the majors.

The million dollars really isn't a million, but is only a pop fly off that figure. It is the $975,000 derived from the radio and television rights at the 1950 world series—and the odds are about 10 to 1 it will go into the player pension fund.

Attracting heaviest interest among big-league managers, general managers, presidents, scouts and farm directors, is the annual draft.

A year ago the majors picked 31 minor-leaguers at a cost of 192,500. This year 5,688 boys in the bushes are on the block, including their share of "bonus" players.

Branch Rickey, new boss of the Pittsburgh Pirates, gets first crack at the talent under the reverse-order system which gives the eighth-place clubs the opening choice.

Draft price range from $2,000 for a class-D player to $10,000 for one from the triple-A circuits. Some of the baseball men predicted only 10 to 12 youngsters would be drafted today.

While the $975,000 fund and the draft held top places on the day's agenda, preliminary structures which might lead to some big-league player deals probably were kicked around a little in the trading line was expected here, but spade work was being done behind the scenes at one of the big-league meeting in St. Petersburg, Fla., in early December.

Defence Counsel Requests Verdict Of Manslaughter

Picton, Ont., Nov. 16. (CP)—Defence Counsel R. E. Nourse, in a 2 1-2 hour plea Wednesday, asked a Supreme Court jury to return a verdict of manslaughter at the second trial of James Fosbrey on a charge of murder moved to-wards a close.

Fosbrey, an R.A.F. veteran, is accused of the fatal stabbing of his wife, June, in a snowbank at Napanee Nov. 28, 1949.

Mr. Nourse said the jury had a second alternative of "not guilty because of insanity," but he did not press this suggestion.

At Fosbrey's first trial in Napanee, Mr. Nourse asked for an insanity verdict. The manslaughter verdict was ruled out by Chief Justic J. C. McRuer, and it was on this ruling that the Appeals Court granted Fosbrey a second trial.

Crown Counsel K. S. Ham asked the jury to consider the fact Fosbrey had purchased a hunting knife a few days before the slaying, and that he had carried it in his belt. He also had written to a letter that he "knew five days before it happened that I would hang for it."

The case will go to the jury today after a charge from Mr. Justice R. W. Treleaven.

Accused Given Five Years For Extortion

Nassau, Bahamas, Nov. 16—CP —Convicted of attempted extortion and threats against the life of Lady Eunice Oakes and her family, Nicholas Musgrove was sentenced Wednesday to five years.

Chief Justice Oswald Bancroft also recommended that Musgrove be deported to his native Turks Island at the end of his prison term.

Musgrove was arrested in May after two theatening letters and two telephone calls, one of which was traced by police, were intercepted by Basil Sparrow, secretary to the widow of Sir Harry Oakes. Sir Harry, millionaire Canadian mining magnate, was murdered in 1943 and his killer was never convicted.

Musgrove took the stand in his own defence and denied knowledge of the extortion attempts.

Tuesday Musgrove was quoted as having said in a letter:

"Most times one person is making this demand. Even if one is caught the others will retaliate with vengeance and you'll have to pay in tears, perhaps in blood."

Lady Oakes was warned to leave $100,000 'in a specified, lonely place.

The first letter arrived just before Lady Oakes left on a vacation trip. She is still abroad.

Eastern Canada Cattle Men Take Many Honors

Toronto, Nov. 16 — (CP) Eastern Canada cattle men yesterday made a near-sweep of championship honors in the dairy cattle section of the Royal Winter Fair but Alberta, with a double-header win, set a fair record in market beef cattle.

Championship bulls in the Ayrshire, jersey and holstein breeds were all shown by Ontario dairy men. Clarence Marsh of Canandaigua, N.Y., exhibited the grand champion Guernsey bull.

Two steers from Alberta won both the grand championship in the market division of beef cattle at the fair and the runner-up reserve championship.

Fair officials said the double victory had never been registered before by one province in the 28-year history of the Fair.

Late last night farmers from the foothills province celebrated their record triumph with a square dance down the centre aisle of the cattle pens.

A shorthorn steer owned by the University of Alberta won grand championship of the Fair, and a Hereford owned by Ed Nosé of Claresholm was the reserve title winner.

W. C. J. Cerswell and J. J. McCague of Alliston, Ont., showed the prize-winning holstein bull, James Bagg of Edgeley exhibited the jersey champion and Robertson and McLennan entered Sunny Dale Milking Boy, the grand champion Ayrshire bull.

Mexico took the first two places in the international jumping competitions, the Fair's tilly for the evening. Jalisco, ridden by Lieut. Joaquin D'Harcourt, won the handy course competition and Arete, ridden by Miss Eva Valdez, was second.

Canada's entrants—James Eldridge and Tom Gaylord, both of Toronto—were among 10 to make perfect rides on the first round, but slipped to a three-way tie with Lt.-Col. H. M. Llewellyn or Britain for seventh after faulting in the jumpoff.

Girl Forsakes Singing Career For Wrestling

The gal has a pot full of dough and is in line for a lot more. She had a good start on a career in opera, might have been a soprano at the Met some day. She has a face and body calculated to make a movie scout look twice.

And to what is she now devoting all this talent?

Wrestling!

That's Gloria Barattini. She's been in the professional grunt-and-grapple business about two weeks now, after two months of tutoring in Boston.

Louis Barattini, her father, can hardly wait for the debut tour to bring her back to Baltimore so he can see his offspring in action. He says:

"She has done everything she has wanted since she was a little girl. She rode horses, drove trucks and motorcycles, flew airplanes and played school sports. So when she wanted to go into pro wrestling as a career and body builder, we let her do it."

The wolf-calls Gloria gets when she steps into the ring are evidence any more body building would be entirely superficial. She scales 145 pounds for her five feet, 7½ inches, with a 28-inch waist and 36-inch bust and hips.

Years before this 26-year-old beauty saw her first grappling match, she had her head set on an career in wrestling.

Then she saw a wrestling bout last summer. From that day, she says, she's the only living being than living off the fat of the land was to bounce some of it around.

She-she-she promotes Ed Contos into a try-out. The sight was so favorable he sent her to Boston for some work under Neil Stewart.

Since then Gloria has been on tour.

Formosa Going About Work With Singular Placidity, Law and Order is Noticeable

Taipei, Formosa, Nov. 16—AP— For all its perils and politics, Formosa is going about its business with singular placidity.

Except for official circles in its capital, Taipei, Formosa seems unworried about a communist invasion and unaware that it is a bone of contention in the United Nations.

The Nationalist government of China, pushed from the mainland by the Chinese reds, is making its last stand on this big, rich island a hundred-odd miles off China's coast.

It seems to be doing a good job generally, despite the fact that it has saddled the island with thousands of refugees and an army of more than 500,000 men.

One thing especially noticeable is law and order. Here you see casual reminders of war in back streets or countryside day or night—more safety in fact than in Hong Kong, where armed robbery is becoming uncomfortably frequent.

Gives Lie to Reports

This law-abiding condition in Formosa seems to give lie to occasional reports that there is great unrest among native Formosans, who are not supposed to like their governors from the mainland any better than they liked their old Japanese-masters. The heavy-handed exploitation that caused the 1949 uprising and the resulting "blood bath, appear to have been eliminated.

You hear little about the Formosa independence movement. This idea-which in the past to stern control measures against anything judged subversive by the Nationalist government. There have been vigorous roundups of reds, mostly in the ranks of the army and the government itself, with hundreds of jailings and many executions. Some leaders of the Taiwan Independence movement undoubtedly have been lumped with communists.

But there certainly is not the tight, nervous air of a terror regime here. No furtive and fearful faces, no reluctance to talk, no sullen silence in the presence of soldiers or policemen, no darkened windows at sundown, no heavy boots or creeping coolies. Those who have reason to fear are not among the common populace.

Insofar as I can read the face of Formosa, it seems to be a happy island. At least it was a whole lot happier than communist Shanghai was when I left last December.

Offers $20,000 To Rip Flooring

Fort Madison, Ia., Nov. 16 — (AP)—A Chicago smelting firm has bid $20,000 for the right to rip up the flooring of an old penpoint factory here. It hopes to recover gold and osmium particles in profitable amount despite the precautions which the W. A. Shaeffer Pen Company regularly takes to hold losses of valuable metal to a minimum in its plant.

200 Buildings Allotted Canucks At Fort Lewis

Fort Lewis, Wash., Nov. 16 — (CP) — Brig. J. M. (Rocky) Rockingham arrived here last night in advance of the United Nations brigade he commands.

The commander of Canada's 10,000-man Korean brigade was met at Seattle by a horde of newspaper men and photographers, beginning coverage of an historic event, the first time a major body of Canadian troops has trained in a foreign country in wartime.

The brigadier will be officially welcomed here today by a United States Army guard of honor. Later, he will meet American commanders at the camp.

Brig. Rockingham said he was "exceedingly pleased" with the co-operation received from U.S. officials in preparing for the Canadians. The advance party which arrived here some time ago now is in Pusan, Korea.

Two hundred large buildings have been allotted to Canadians at this camp, designated to accommodate up to 60,000 troops.

There are signs everywhere signally that the Canucks are here. One reads, for example: "Know your Canadian guests better." Another displays a reproduction of all Canadian badges of rank.

The second battalion of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, bound for Korea in the near future, will arrive late in the week.

After the Princess Pats, will come the Second Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, and 18 miscellaneous units.

The second battalion of the Royal 22nd Regiment will arrive Friday. The next major unit to follow will be the second battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment.

All these will remain for "orientation training" on this camp's 70 square miles of west coast terrain.

PICASSO PASSES SECURITY SCREEN

Pablo Picasso, world-famous Spanish surrealist artist, is pictured talking to a group of newsmen upon his arrival at Victoria Station in London to attend the peace congress in Sheffield. Others who arrived from various continental points to attend the conference were screened by the British government under the new security barrier. Five persons who landed from France were refused permission to stay in Britain and were returned to Paris. Picasso himself says he "admires" the communist fight against fascism. — Central Press Canadian.

New Liberal Chief To Retain Seat

Toronto, Nov. 16—CP—Walter Thomson, new leader of the Ontario liberal party, said today the demand by the Oshawa district labor council (C. C. L.) that he resign his commons seat if "a political manoevre by the C. C. F."

That party, he said, "dominates the labor council and is still smarting from the defeat I gave their candidate in the federal election."

The labor council, at a meeting last night, asked for Mr. Thomson's resignation on grounds that he has "neglected" the interests of Ontario riding, of which he is the federal representative.

Mr. Thomson denied that he had neglected his commons duties. He said he started his campaign for liberal leadership after the house prorogued in July and "did not miss a single day" of the special session this fall.

At the time of his election to the liberal leadership last week, Mr. Thomson said he planned to hold the seat "for the time being." He said today he had not yet reached any further decision.

"I haven't had the opportunity to discuss the matter with Prime Minister St. Laurent. Meantime, I hold the seat for the government.

Aim to Modernize Rules of Air Travel

Montreal, Nov. 16 (CP)—Modernization of the world's rules of the air, including changes made necessary by jet and helicopter aircraft, is the main objective of the fourth session of the International Civil Aviation Organization's rules of the air and Air Traffic Control Division, which is now meeting at I.C.A.O. headquarters here.

The division is also attempting to work out air traffic control methods to increase the capacity of busy aerodromes to handle the landing and taking off of aircraft under instrument weather conditions.

Christmas Party Given Dying Boy

Winnipg, Nov. 16—CP—Gary Turnbull had his Christmas party two days ago because he hadn't long to live. The three-year-old tot died of cirrhosis of the liver.

Although his strength was sapped by long illness, little Gary uast Monday perked up enough to untie his Christmas presents and shout to Santa as he left:

"Come back ntxt year to see me."

A service club sponsored Gary's party. The child is the youngest victim of the fatal liver disease shown in the records of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

MARMORA

30th Bazaar Opens S.H. Parish Hall

Marmora — With the grand opening of the Sacred Heart Parish Hall at Marmora on Thursday evening, marked with the holding of the 30th annual bazaar of the church a record crowd was present and had the first opportunity of admiring the well designed and finely equipped building.

In their serving of the chicken supper, which will be repeated on Wednesday evening and followed by a variety dinner on Thursday, the ladies of the congregation well sustained their reputation over the years.

Good Assortment

A good assortment of fancy and knitted goods were on display at the booth operated by the Catholic Women's League, while the Altar Society had charge of the home cooking booth. The Sodality girls had their customary candy stall. Bingo and various games operated by men of the congregation proved sources of entertainment for the large gathering.

Noted among visitors from neighboring parishes were the Rev. Father Hyland, of Madoc and the Rev. Father Le Marsh of Flinton.

Added entertainment will be a euchre party on Wednesday evening and a dance on the closing night.

POINT TRAVERSE

Spawning Season Soon Due

Point Traverse — The annual whitefish spawning season will soon be at hand according to commercial fishermen. Commencing in about a week the run of fish are expected to seek shoal waters to spawn.

Heavy catches of whitefish were made during the fall of 1932, when lifts of whitefish from 500 to 1,500 per boat were not uncommon. Prices for whitefish then averaged from four cents to nine cents a pound.

Snowy Owls

Snowy or Arctic owls have already made their appearance in this area, and hunters are asked to refrain from shooting these beautiful birds. The value of these birds in the township are very great, as 72 percent of their food consists of mammals, rats, ice, shrews, moles, etc.

Install Engines

Two new air cooled engines and air compressors have been installed in the False Duck Island fog station, by engineers from the Department of Transport. The engines previously housed in the station, had been in use for more than 45 years.

Largest Inland Waterway Ship Will be Built

Cleveland, O., Nov. 16 (AP)—A giant iron ore carrier — largest inland waterway ship ever built — will be constructed for M. A. Hanna Company in the Lorain, O., yards of American Ship Building Company, the Cleveland News says today.

The huge vessel will be finished in time for the 1952 navigation season at an estimated cost of nearly $6,000,000, the News says.

With a 690-foot, over-all length the new vessel will be 12 feet longer than the Wilfred Sykes which Inland Steel Company put into service late last year.

IVANHOE

Armistice Service

Ivanhoe.—A special Armistice Service was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, West Huntingdon, on Sunday afternoon conducted by Rev. W. H. V. Walker.

Mr. Walker preached an impressive sermon from the text John 15: 13: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends".

Mr. Barton Haggerty, veteran of World War II, read the names from the honor roll and a two minute silence was observed in memory of those who paid the supreme sacrifice.

The hymns used were "O God Our Help In Ages Past", "Lord While For All Mankind We Pray", "Lead us in the Paths of Peace".

Mrs. Arthur Hassell's fine voice was heard in Kipling's "Recessional".

Baptismal Rite

VIP'S LIVED VERY WELL IN THE GOOD OLD DAYS

Uncovering the ruins of a 3,000-year-old Egyptian temple, archaeologists have come to the conclusion that the Mentemhet family, in their day, did not lack much in luxury. This photo shows the burial temple of the high priest or the Mentemhet family, a Very Important Person, who rated a memorial bigger than that given to anyone today. The relics were unearthed near the tomb of Tutankhamen, discovered 28 years ago and containing millions of dollars worth of jewels. — Central Press Canadian.

NEW Self-Washing DREFT WASHES DISHES FOR YOU

JUST SOAK... RINSE... and YOU'RE THROUGH!

Amazing "FLOATAWAY" Action SAVES WASHING—WIPING—SCOURING

Yet! Dishes and glasses shine—even without wiping!

It's true! New self-washing Dreft practically washes the dishes for you. You simply let dishes stand in warm Dreft suds for 2 minutes—give a swish of the cloth as you rinse—and you're through. You've your dishes and glasses shine—even without wiping.

These self-washing suds save washing, save wiping, save scouring. In fact, while Dreft is washing your dishes you can be doing other things...like putting the food away in the refrigerator, or sweeping the kitchen floor.

Even pots and pans soak clean without scouring. That's because Dreft's amazing "Floataway" action gets under grease... floats away grease as no soap ever could. Even stubborn grease rinses away without scouring.

Yet self-washing Dreft is one of the mildest suds in the world. Leaves hands beautifully white and soft. Try new self-washing Dreft today. Your dealer has it.

NEXT ROUND GOES TO EAST BERLIN

In foreground is the big electric news flasher built in the west zone of Berlin to flash the news across the Potsdamerplatz to residents of the east (Soviet) zone to let them know what goes on on the free side of the iron curtain. Now the east Berlin communists are erecting a duplicate to compete with the west's. It may be seen across the square in background. The red version will advertise state-controlled stores. The builders expect that its illumination will drown out that of the news flasher. — Central Press Canadian.

FLORIDA JOE: "My husband, child and myself would like very much to move to Florida. He is a carpenter and would have no trouble getting all kinds of building work. Could you tell us if there is a good market for carpenters in any part of Florida or any industry in which my husband could get a kitchen cupola."

The U.S. Consulate tells us there are no special labor market conditions in Florida. We suggest you write to Merrill-Stevens Dry-dock and Repair Co., Foot of NW 6th Ave. Miami, Florida, Jacksonville, Florida.

DICK CAT: "I have a Persian cat which has been ill for some time. The vet says he has FIP. Is there anything you can do to help him?"

Dr. Secord's Animal Clinic tells us that FIP is caused by a filterable virus infection. They say that there is no cure. They suggest that you feed your cat a fresh meat, fresh cooked fish, plus a multivitamin tablet not containing iron.

WOMAN TAXI DRIVER: "During the war I drove a taxi. I had a real interesting job. Now I am married and have a baby. I would like to get back into the taxi business. Do you know if there are any women taxi drivers in Toronto?"

Drop in to the National Employment Office, Women's Division, 25 Bay Street, Toronto. Here you will find that the whole staff is at your service and available concerning women's services and employment.

Queen's Register First Win In Senior Group With 5-4 Victory Over Our Redshirts

By GEO. H. CARVER
Sports Editor

Queen's University Combines made a great big initial entry in the victory side of the Senior "S" Group ledger in Kingston last night when they defeated the Belleville Redmen by a 5-4 score to deposit the red-shirts with a definite thud in the cellar slot of the group standing.

It was the Redmen's third contest in as many starts and the Trimotor's first victory in five appearances at the starting gate.

It was not good hockey by any stretch of the imagination. There was plenty of hard checking with intermittent dashes of good-but-fashioned team play but, especially in the goal-mouth melees, and there were several.

Ear Trouble

In fairness to the Redmen, it must be said they were minus the services of Tommy Schreiber, Jackie Wardaugh, Peter Jones and George Graham for 18 minutes of the first period due to ear trouble, while errored in the Kingston.

Coach Walter Bent was forced to use makeshift lines for this period of time, and also to shake his defence department. At that the victory-hungry Combines managed to poke the puck into one past Jim Ellis in the Belleville net, in the initial period.

It was hard hockey throughout the three periods with both teams-falling on several occasions to get their passing play clicking and relying on forays into enemy territory and goal-mouth crap-shooters' huddles to score.

The prettiest goal of the night night was scored by Keith MacDonald when he and Doug Free sifted through the Queen's team on a two-man rush with MacDonald drilling the rubber home.

The teams battled to one goal each in the second period giving the homesters a two-one edge they made it three-one after ten seconds of play in the third session but the Redmen roared right back into the picture by firing those two goals in two minutes to tie up the pastime.

Both squads put on the pressure in an effort to break the deadlock and Queens forged to the front when Shepherd grabbed a loose puck during a Belleville ganging attack and raced straight to beat Keays. Ohlke added another from Dunn 10 seconds later to make the score 3-2.

Kingston Goalie Stars

The Redmen pressed hard but were beaten time after time by the great sensational work of Blalvin in the Queen's nets. With a minute to go Mulvihill took Johnny Greaves' pass to narrow the margin to 5-4 and the Reds were driving hard at the Queen's goal when the siren sounded.

Bolvin, was an outstanding star for the homesters and his work in the nets robbed the Redmen of not a few goals especially in the first period. Keays in the Belleville nets turned in a good effort beating Queen's solo rushers on a few occasions, but left his first goal of the game scoring against him struck him in the pads and sifted into the net.

Keith MacDonald, Doug Free, George Graham and Brian Mulvihill were the snipers for the Reds with D. Murray with a pair Keenleyside, Harley and Ohlke counting for the winners.

MacDonald, Free, Vern Goyer and Johnny Green looked the best for the losers with D. Murray, Keenleyside and Bolvin starring for Queens.

Six penalties were handed out by Referee Pete Nye of Peterborough with Queens sinning three times, Johnny Green drew a two-minute sentence with Doug Day drawing a minor and a major misconduct to start off the third period.

Redmen: Goal, Keays; defence, Schreiber, Goyer; centre, J. Wardhaugh; wings, Green, Mulvihill; subs, Sea, Schmidt, Grs' an Jones, Williams, Day, Sawyer, MacDonald.

Queen's Combines: Goal, Bolvin; defence, Graves, Sweetman; centre, Keenleyside; wings, Wild, Harley; subs, Wood, Latimer, White, D. Murray, R. Murray, Ohlke, Carr - Harris, Shepherd, Dunn.

Referee: Pete Nye, Peterborough; linesman, Art Casterton, Kingston.

Rockets Defeated In First Start By Peterborough

Peterborough, Nov. 16—Off to an impressive start for the 1950-51 season are the junior Oddfellows. With popular Harry 'Bunny' Kingdon again at the helm defeated Smille Moronek's Belleville Rockets 7-0 last night at Civic arena and served notice to local hockey fans that they will merit fine support in the coming season.

With several new faces in the line-up, Triple Links flashed plenty of speed and color and outplayed their game rivals in every period to register a convincing victory. It was a rugged encounter marred by 15 penalties mostly for minor offences as the referees ruled firmly for a clean start. Those were evenly divided. Though a little early to assess the strength of the club the locals seem to possess depth and balance. Fine reserve power with the emphasis on speed and giddyap. Red Wasson earned his shutout too. For though not as blusy as Barclay over the route, he was called upon to make many clever saves and twice in the final chapter outgiessored rival sharpshooters from close in. He played a smart game. Links outshot Rockets three to two.

Pilot Backhander

Morrow put Oddfellows one up early in the first as play opened fast, when he flipped a neat backhander over the prostrate Barclay close in after a scramble before he, Dgar West and Wyatt put on the steam. Don Clapper, up for his first year junior got his first goal midway in the period as he smacked home a hard low one from the left just inside the blue line past Barclay to the far corner of the mesh. Ab Buckton, hard-working left winger, drew an assist.

Continuing with increased tempo in the second frame Links held a fair territorial margin with all three lines working and both ways and the defence foursome of Shearer and Wasson, Armstrong and Clapper proving impregnable in the hard going. Finally at 6.19 Bill Stewart, who teamed with the Robinson brothers in a smart game batted home Shearer's pass out to the edge of the crease and gave Barclay no chance. The big winger scored again at 13.26 from just inside the blue line on a low zinger as Robinson fed him a neat pass. Veteran Bob Wyatt clicked just near period's end on a scorching 15-footer from direct range for the final tally of the period.

A Torrid Go

Play reached a torrid pace in the final stanza as Rockets 'shot the works' and gave their all in a desperate attempt to stave off the pressure of Links' attack and break the goose egg but to no avail as Army Armstrong led his mates in bumping flying Rockets hither and yon. Army also wheezed a dandy 20-footer past Barclay early in the frame from short right wing and West made it lucky seven from Morrow two minutes later to wind up the scoring. It was a fine win for Oddfellows but in fairness to Belleville they were better than the score indicated and will certainly improve as the season progresses.

Belleville: Goal, Barclay; defence, Trumble, Green; centre, Duran; wings, Gilmour, Strahan. Alternates, Hunter, Brown, Cary, Delaney, Houle, Henhoucke, Turland, Bedford.

I.O.O.F.: Goal, Wasson; defence, D. Wasson, Shearer; centre, West; wings, Wyatt, Morrow. Alternates, Doris, Douglas, Buckton, G. Robinson, B. Robinson, Stewart, Armstrong, Clapper.

Referee: Larry Heffering, Pickering. Lineman, Dick Oulmet, Peterborough.

First period.
1 IOOF, Morrow 1.16
2 IOOF, Clapper (Buckton) 10.35
Penalties—Carey, Henhoucke 3, Wyatt, Clapper, Green, Mantle.
Second period.
3 IOOF, Stewart (Shearer) 6.19
4 IOOF, Stewart (B. Robinson) 13.26
5 IOOF, Wyatt 19.56
Penalties — Duran, Armstrong, Shearer.
Third period.
6 IOOF, Armstrong 2.43
7 IOOF, West (Morrow) 5.20
9 Penalties — Turland, D. Wasson 2, Doris.

LAST NIGHT'S STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Lorne Ferguson of Boston whose third-period goal gave the Bruins a 4-3 victory over New York Rangers.

Rangers Relax in NHL Cellar After Lesson in Relaxing From Hypnotist, Lose to Bruins

(By The Canadian Press)

New York Rangers can relax—without the benefit of hypnosis—in the National Hockey League cellar, knowing their luck can't get much worse unless it's being there alone.

After what happened to them last night in Madison Square Garden they also have reason to suspect the hypnotic powers of one Dr. David F. Tracy, also a psychologist, who hours earlier had given them a treatment on how to relax.

The Rangers emerged from the treatment psychologically pepped up to chalk up their second victory of the season. Whether or not they followed the doctor's orders, they ended up with their eighth defeat.

Boston's punchless Bruins, operating on their own little supply of steam, knocked hockey's first hokus-pokus experiment into a cocked hat by waltzing off with a 6-4 triumph—their second of the season. The loss dropped Rangers into tie for the cellar with the Bruins, both with eight points.

If the Ranger front office figured the stunt of hiriding Dr. Tracy to bestir the team out of its slump would draw more customers, that strategy also misfired. The smallest N.H.L. crowd in 19 years—6,856—saw New York trail all the way.

Boston whipped a last-minute attempt by the Rangers to prove their psychological experiment would work. They yanked goalie Chuck Rawiser out of the nets, sent him back after Boston scored, and pulled him out again.

But they must have been relaxing when they should have been scoring, for the strategy just didn't work.

Pats Bruins Ahead

Ross Lowe put the Bruins ahead 3-2 after 28 seconds of the third period, and Lorne Ferguson tallied the eventual winner at 19:18 during one of Rayner's two trips to the sidelines. Edgar Laprade closed out the scoring with 12 seconds of play left.

Centre Paul Ronty had opened the scoring in the first period and centre Jack McLeod tied it up for New York. In the second, defencemen Murray Henderson tallied for Boston and defenceman Pat Egan tied it up.

N. H. L. governors and club owners met in New York yesterday without making any statement on the business discussed. But a spokesman said an announcement was expected today on a "minor trade" between Rangers and Boston.

There has been speculation recently about Toronto Maple Leafs trading Bill Ezinicki and Vic Lynn, wingers with their Pittsburgh Hornets farm club in the American Hockey League, to the Bruins.

Blue Bombers Leave Winnipeg On Saturday

By AL VICKERY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Nov. 16 — (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers leave by train Saturday night for London, Ont., to get ready for the Grey Cup final at Toronto Nov. 25.

Bomber president Ralph Misener announced at an executive meeting last night that the team will train on the University of Western Ontario gridiron.

The last time Bombers competed in the Grey Cup final was in 1947. That year they trained at Hamilton. Other years they worked out at either Hamilton, Ann Arbor, Mich., or Appleby College in Oakville, Ont.

No reason was given by Misener as to why the club chose Western. It is known Bombers received offers from numerous other colleges, universities and eastern football teams.

One official said: "We haven't been so lucky of late. We need a change."

The Bombers will meet Toronto Argonauts or Balmy Beach in the Grey Cup game at Varsity Stadium a week from Saturday. It will be Winnipeg's eighth clash with a Toronto club in the East-West finals—and they'll be seeking their first victory.

Toronto fans will have difficulty in recognizing the 1950 edition of Bombers. Guard Bud Irving is the only member of the 1947 team which lost 10-9 to Argus. Another familiar face, however, will be around this Bomber bench. Bob Sandberg, whose performances in the '47 final was rated by many as the best ever put on by an individual, is a backfield coach with the club this season.

Winnipeg fans will get approximately 4,000 tickets for the final. Bomber manager Scotty Kennedy said.

The executive also decided last night the method of distribution for the prelgue durcats.

"Owing to the heavy demand already received by the club, it has been decided that the tickets will be allocated on a priority basis to season ticket holders and members of the club in order of the receipt of their request," he said.

The tickets are being made available today.

Mayor Garnet Coulter said he had received a telephone call from Toronto's Mayor McCallum asking about how many Winnipeg fans could be expected.

Mayor McCallum said he wanted to be sure of "adequate accommodation" for all.

The Bombers supporters' special train will leave Wednesday night arriving in Toronto Friday morning.

Windigo Returns To Northern Wilds of Ontario

Kenora, Ont., Nov. 16, (CP)— The legendary Windigo has returned, this time to the wilds of far-northwestern Ontario.

The tale of the ghostly monster was related by the Ontario Lands office here. It said its information came from Leif Mannmen, fur trader at Poplar Hills Post, 200 miles north of here on remote Berens Lake.

The Windigo, in the northland, is what Cyclopes or Cadhorcosaurus is to British Columbia. But unlike the coast's sea-serpents, a Windigo has no set shape.

Leif Mannmen' Windigo is supposed to have been seen first several months ago. He had an artistically-minded Indian draw him a picture. The Windigo resembles an alligator.

The story is it comes out of the water, makes a swamp turn and slithers underneath again. The Indians claim it tears their fishing nets.

The Land office says Mr. Mannmen wants an all-out hunt to capture the monster. He says native trappers are giving Berens Lake a wide berth and not trapping the area as they should.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

'TWAS DIPSY-DOODLE

They should have counted the near-misses and goal-stops in this Queen's Combines - Redmen bowlding in Kingston last night as well, and the score would have made an American professional basketball count look silly by comparison.

The Redmen should have won by a handsome margin for they fired enough rubber at one M'sieu Boivin, the Tricolor carp-cope to insulate the arena. It seemed every time a Redshirt let go the puck at the net there was a large healthy chunk of M'sieu Boivin's anatomy there as a road-block.

In the first period when Tommy Schreiber, Peter Jones George Graham and Jackie Wardhaugh were dickering with a Nepanee service station hicks about the price of a new tire, the crippled Reds were in on the Boivin bastille poking the biscuit everywhere but in the twine. The boy was good. Even a pair of hard-boiled fans who sat behind the penalty box admitted the ancient enemy from this village should have had at least three tallies on the scoreboard.

The enforced absence of the quartet mentioned before caused Coach Willie Reid a few pre-game headaches. Came the whistle and he was forced to send out makeshift lines and use the three defencemen available with single reliefs. At that the Redshirts carried the brunt of the play and the only goal of the period came when Harley fired a shot from forty feet out that bounded off Keays' pads into the net.

The Tricolor had several close shots at Keays that appeared to be labelled. Twice he outguessed an incoming forward and on another occasion a Queen's man sashayed in all alone with not a Red within a mile and missed the net by a mile. While it was not good hockey by a long shot, the shinny - garnished slap-bang type was eye-pleasing, if you like that style.

NYLONS HERE TOMORROW NIGHT

The Kingston Nylons will be the guests of the Redmen here tomorrow night and the joint should be greeted with a large crowd of fans. Coach Bent will drill his charges hard tonight since he has more challenges in mind, with possibly a surprise for the faithful. Nylons have one victory out of three starts thus far this season, and they intend keeping in style with the rest of the Redmen conquerors by tacking a juicy defeat on the Bentmen. However, after last night's setback, the Reds feel they are all ready to hang out the victory sign, and brothers there is not a team they would rather defeat than the Nylonese unless it is the Peter, Eagles or Queens.

Bill Cook's junior "B" Rockets were tucked away in their couches when we arrived home early this morning from Kingston so we cannot comment on their 7-0 defeat last night at the hands of the Peterborough IOOF's. However, we'll come to that later, and add the inevitable paean of victory that will emanate from the winners' lair.

OFF AGAIN — ON AGAIN

The out-on-the-limb club can go take a jump off Mount Everest-ing now on. Lookit what happened yesterday in this unpredictable Big Four controversy between the Hamilton Wildcats and the Toronto Argonauts. The Cats, growling fiercely after their crushing victory over the Scullers last Saturday, went out of character, and instead of scuttling the Scullers as was expected by the experts, could not even purr a defiant hiss and went down to defeat by the score of 26-4. The Cats were de-clawed, de-furred and de-fanged by a rampaging Corcmen crew who now meet the Toronto Beaches in a sudden death play-off tussle to decide the East's representative in the Grey Cup joust against the Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

The Argonauts have been anything but consistent in their football all season. At times they sparkled like champions. At others they dropped to the level of near mediocrity. They lost by large margins, and generally won by the varnish of their mythical scull-blades. Hamilton looked like the cream of the Big Four lacteal fluid last Saturday—Argos the reverse. Yesterday the Scullers came up with another of their periodical returns to the form they are capable of producing, and it happened to be timely. Saturday they meet the Beaches. On paper it should be Argos by plenty. But it could be the other way. In any event we shall stick by our former prediction and forecast that the battle-scarred Grey Cup mug will be back in Winnipeg ozone next summer.

MIDGETS AND JUVENILES TONIGHT

Tonight the youngsters take to the ice in their first appearance of the season. Minor hockey lifts the lid on its 1950-51 activities when the juvenile and midget squads of the Belleville Hockey Association get in their first practice licks. The midgets will undergo a two - hour session starting at seven o'clock under Coach "Toots" Holway's supervision while at nine o'clock the juveniles take over for an hour under Manager Fred Eigle.

All midget and juvenile aspirants are requested to be at Memorial Arena at the times mentioned, so that some idea of potential material for the coming season, can be secured. Players are requested to bring their skates and equipment and report to the various managers or coaches. Another reminder to the youngsters: remember you have to secure an entry form and birth certificates before you can play organized hockey in minor groups or leagues this year. Better get these immediately, or as soon as possible. It will save a lot of time and trouble later on.

Argos Oust T-Cats From Grey Cup Hunt; Favored to Win Eastern Title From Beaches

Toronto, Nov. 16—CP—If the long-shot bettors are tunkling on Toronto Balmy Beach's knowledge of Argonaut plays to get the underdog Ontario Rugby Union champions to the eastern Canada title, they'll draw little comfort from what happened at Toronto's Varsity Stadium yesterday.

Hamilton Tiger-Cats, who had played Argos five times previously this season and presumably could reach Frank Clair's mind, found theoretical knowledge no help to them as the Toronto club swept to its 13th Big Four title with a convincing 26-4 victory before 23,349.

The Cats, who arrived with a two-point edge from their 13-11 triumph in Hamilton in the first game of the total-point finals Saturday, should have been able to draw diagrams of every Argo defensive play But the Argos passed them dizzy and ran them ragged as they piled up a 23-point lead in the first three quarters and hung on to take the round 35-19.

The Beaches, who operated this season as an Argonaut farm club in the O. R. F. U., knocked off their opposition with the well-drilled version of the same attack under playing coach Gerry Tuttle and assistant coach Dwight Follin, both of whom did their early-season training under Clair.

Some experts rate Tuttle the equal of Argo quarterback Al Dekdebrun, whose ball handling and varied passing attack mystified Hamilton's defenders yesterday. Follin heads the formidable first-string line and Negro backfielder Carl Galbreath is a deceptive speedster who ranks with Argos' Dyson Curtis.

Few fans concede the youthful Beaches a chance in next Saturday's eastern final. The spectacle of Argos dealing with a carbon copy of their own attack will hold some academic interest, but it will be a copy in a fainter type.

Using System

Clair confirmed last night that the Beaches have been using his basic system all season to fit the young Beach players for spots on the Argo line-up in future years. Tuttle and Follin will be free to vary the system Saturday, and their youthful club won't lack enthusiasm.

But Beaches lack a kicker like Joe Krol, whose consistent punting was a potent ground gainer in both Hamilton games and who kicked three singles yesterday.

Their outsides can't match big Marvin (Stretch) Whaley, who caught four Dekdebrun passes—one for a touchdown—or fiery Jack Wedley, the veteran who generally blocks at least one kick a game and set up an Argo touchdown against Hamilton with his specialty.

Their ground attack consists of youngsters who are considered a year or more behind such Argo homebreds as Bob Westlake and Ted Toogood, each good for a major yesterday. And young George Watson will need a good day to match Nick Volpe, the scullers' placement expert, who racked up a field goal and three converts.

The statistics showed the effect of the Argo onslaught on the Tiger-Cats, who got only one first down in the opening half and three by three-quarter time before launching a last-quarter drive that netted them their only touchdown.

They were disorganized when Edgar (Special Delivery) Jones, the Big Four's scoring champion, was injured early in the first quarter and returned only to kick the convert after quarterback Stan Heath threw a touchdown pass to rookie Bob McDonald late in the game.

Bill Gregus, their plunging ace, was given a deferment by the draft board that had ordered him to report to the United States army. But he was unable to break until the final quarter, when his plunging set up the Hamilton major.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Nov. 16—(AP)—The United States Golf Association still is worried about players who waste too much time studying shots and lining up putts in championship tournament. . . that seems singularly unnecessary at this time, when southern golfers can take all winter if they like and the guys vacationing in the south and west aren't in a hurry about anything. . . still there are some interesting figures on putting compiled for the U.S.G.A. journal by Runcie Martin, who clocked a lot of the lads in the 1950 amateur championship. Times recorded ranger from 17 seconds, from the time the golfer addressed the ball until he stroked the putt, up to 105 seconds, which was how long Frank Stranahan took to miss his final putt. The average was slightly more than 40 seconds a putt . . . In one match, which required four hours, 11 minutes for 17 holes, almost 37 minutes were devoted to lining up putts. . . . Now you can look for some enterprising geezer to come up with the ideal Christmas present for a golfer's wife to give the old man—a combination stop watch and alarm clock, with a special gong that comes out of the heck out of that locker room, you bum, and try to be on time for dinner just once."

NY Rangers Find Goals Still Needed To Win Contests

New York, Nov. 16—CP—The New York Rangers today know what a lot of people have suspected for a long time. Psychology, hypnotism or no, it still takes goals to win a hockey game.

Despite a "bonus point" session with a psychologist, hypnotist, the winless Rangers last night lost a 4-3 game to Boston which moved New York into the National Hockey League cellar with the Bruins.

The Ranger management has been desperate to find something to give the Broadway Blues a winning way. They shook up the line-up but that didn't help.

Then Dr. David F. Tracy, New York psychologist, hypnotist and sales executive, offered his services. The Rangers gladly accepted his offer.

Tracy met the team in their dressing room for more than an hour yesterday afternoon and talked to them. "He didn't say anything we hadn't told them before," coach Neil Colville said, "but he pointed up all we were telling them. I was quite impressed."

Skeptical at First

The Rangers—some of them skeptical at first but all eventually won over to the doctor's side set in a defensive drill, flat on the floor and hands folded.

"I want you to stop worrying," Tracy said. "When you worry too much you block off the thinking process. When you are afraid you won't make a play you tighten, and when you're behind a couple of goals you start to worry more. Forget the score. Go out there and play.

"Let the other team do the fighting. Think before you act, remember its more important to stay out of the penalty box than to prove to the fans that you can fight back. Stay out of the penalty box."

Stay out of the penalty box the Rangers did last night, but they couldn't come up with enough goals to win what might have been their second victory of the season.

Plant Suggestions Aim

Psychologist he had done, Dr. Tracy said, "I don't think they even realized it, but I tried to plant suggestions in their subconscious mind. Later they'll find themselves doing these things without thinking. If we keep it up long enough it will become a habit.

"Some of these fellows seem to have lost the kick of playing. They are pressed, trying too hard. The trick is to gain confidence and enthusiasm. Find out how the other fellow feels and make him tighten up, not you."

But judging from last night's game, which almost degenerated to shinny at times, the doctor hadn't much more success with the Rangers than he had with the St. Louis Browns, whom he tried for four months last season to lift out of the doldrums of the American Baseball League.

The fans were skeptical. The smallest turn out in more than 10 years—6,856—obviously were not hopeful about the experiment as the Ranger management "After all," one said, "what had they to loose except another game."

1950 Ratings For Fighters Are Released

Montreal, Nov. 15 — (CP) — Fighters from Charlottetown to Vancouver are represented in the Canadian Boxing Federation's 1950 ratings released here today.

The federation, abolishing its old system of picking a champion and 10 challengers in each category, has adopted a new plan and named the champion, logical contenders and outstanding boxers.

Ratings were decided at a recent meeting in Quebec at which A. W. (Fred) Steele, Ontario Athletic Commissioner, was elected high commissioner of boxing in Canada.

Yvon Recoe of Toronto is the heavyweight champion; Tiger Warrington of Kentville, N.S., rules the light heavyweights and Roy Wouters of Montreal is top man among middleweights.

Johnny Greco of Montreal is king of the welterweights but the C.B.F. has ruled that Greco will be deprived of his title if he does not defend it by Feb. 1, 1951.

There is no lightweight champion but logical contenders are listed as Arthur King, Toronto, Solly Cantor, Toronto, and Dick Howard, Halifax.

Among featherweights, Frankie Almond of Vancouver rules the roost while Fernando Gagnon of Quebec holds down the bantamweight title.

Heavyweight contenders were listed as Don Mogard, Toronto, and Earl Walls, Toronto and Windsor, while lightweight contenders are Jeris James, Vancouver and Eddie Zastre, Montreal.

Contenders in the middleweight division include Yvon Durelle, Belle Isle, Anne, N.S., and welterweight contenders include Jimmy Nolan, Calgary. Bantamweight contenders include Stan Almond, Vancouver.

Bombers to Train At University Western Ontario

(By The Canadian Press)

Winnipeg Blue Bombers will train at the University of Western Ontario for the Dec. 2 football final in Toronto Nov. 25.

Club president Ralph Misener made the announcement Wednesday night, shortly after Toronto Argonauts had won their way in the Eastern Canada final against Toronto Balmy Beach. He said the team will leave by train Saturday night, arriving in London next Monday morning.

Whether the Bombers meet Argos or Beaches, they'll have a jinx to overcome in the Grey Cup classic. Over the years, Winnipeg teams have played Toronto clubs seven times in the final—and lost every time.

The Bombers feel that this is the year they'll break the jinx.

It looks as if old Murph (Hardrock) Chamberlain may be out of work.

In Charlottetown Wednesday night, officials of the local Maritime Senior Hockey League entry said the former National Hockey League veteran was granted his release to coach Vancouver Cougars of the Pacific Coast League. However, in Vancouver Canucks owner Coley Hall denied that Chamberlain has been appointed coach.

There had been negotiations but they were broken off a week ago, he said, and Chamberlain "is not at the moment coach of the Canucks."

At any rate, Murph could probably get his Charlottetown job back. Officials of the Islanders team expressed regret at his leaving, but granted his release to let him better himself.

A one-day meeting of National Hockey League governors and club owners called in New York Wednesday without any statement on business discussed, but a spokesman said an announcement was expected soon on a "minor trade" between New York Rangers and Boston Bruins.

There has been speculation recently about Toronto Maple Leafs dealing Bill Ezinicki and Vic Lynn, wingers with Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League, to the Bruins.

In London, England, a secret inquiry into Tommy Farr's latest comeback fight lasted three hours Wednesday but no results were announced. The British Boxing Board of Control listened to Farr's version of his disputed three-round knockout of Belgian Piet Wilde at Leicester, England Nov. 6. Also involved in the hearing were the referee, representatives of Wilde; the timekeeper and the promoter, Joe Jacobs.

Farr has fought and won twice since he started his comeback. His next fight is scheduled for early December.

Forty-two horses probably will face the barrier Saturday in the Manchester November Handicap, the last big race of the English racing season. Among the favorites for a 1 1-2 miles test are Mush, Pipeline, Promotion and Prince Royal.

In Chicago, Pete Zurlinden, executive director of the National Caddy Tournament of the United States Professional Golfers Association, has announced that caddies from Canada may compete in next year's annual tournament.

The tournament, which awards colleges scholarships to the winner and runner up, will be held next Aug. 20-25 at Columbus, O.

Hockey's Big Seven

There were no changes in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race Wednesday night. The seven top places were not affected by the only scheduled game between New York Rangers and Boston Bruins.

Max Bentley of Toronto, remains in first spot with 19 points —five goals and 14 assists, the latter also being a leading mark. Maurice Richard of Montreal is best sniper with nine goals to his credit.

The leaders:

	G	A	Pts
Cal. Bentley, Toronto	5	14	19
Gardner, Toronto	6	8	14
Kennedy, Toronto	4	10	14
Richard, Montreal	9	4	13

Mohawks Move In First-Place Tie With Barons

(By The Canadian Press)

Cincinnati Mohawks moved into a first-place tie with the idle Cleveland Barons in the American Hockey League's Western Division Wednesday night, coming from behind to earn a 4-4 tie with Buffalo Bisons.

In other games, Hershey inched nearer the top of the Eastern Division downing St. Louis Flyers 4-3 and Pittsburgh Hornets shaded Springfield Indians 3-2.

In the Cincinnati game, the Bisons took a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by George Pargetter and Les Hickey but the Mohawks kept fighting back and made up a two goal deficit in the final five minutes of the game to earn the tie. The overtime session was scoreless.

At Hershey, Norm Corcoran scored twice in the final period to give Hershey its first home victory since Oct. 21. The Bears had dropped five home games.

Pittsburgh pulled their goalie in the dying moments of the game with the score 2-1 against them to send on six forwards. The strategy paid off as they first tied the game and Andy Barbe then scored the winner.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You scare easily, if you are afraid of a poor hand in bridge. Unless you are forced you may pass. If forced, the forcer says he has enough to take care of your honest needs.

An opening of two in a suit is forcing to game. Two no-trump is the first reply by responder if he has no sure trick. With a sure trick he must bid something other than two no-trump at once.

Bids follow T-A-N: Takeout, assist, no-trump. With a sure trick suppose responder has no takeout or assist. His only true reply is no-trump. But to admit a sure trick his response is three no-trump.

Thus, an immediate response of three no-trump says what to the opening two bidder? It says: "Partner, I have a sure trick in my hand. But no biddable suit and not support for your bid suit."

The pair of hands sent me will be seen here:

SOUTH
♠K Q J 10 9 8
♥A K Q
♦None
♣K J 10 9

♥10 6 4 2
♦A 4 3 2
♣5 4 3 2

South opened with a bid of two spades. Such an opening bid is a guarantee of nine tricks or more. Does he have them? Yes. Six high cards (aces, kings, queens) and three shorts in diamonds.

The first reply by north was three no-trump. This is correct. It denies a biddable suit. It denies support for a suit bid only once. It admits a sure trick somewhere in the hand.

South then bids four spades. This is a game contract. So, the force no longer exists. But what should north do now? Is he going to let the contract be played in spades?

You're darn tootin' he should. He has no takeout. He lacks support. He has no more no-trump bids. And he is no longer forced to bid. There is no doubt in the world but he should pass four spades.

A player should not anticipate that his partner is in trouble. If he bids honestly the pair will not be in trouble. Unless partner has not bid honestly. If so you say "wot hoppen."

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Nov. 16 (AP) — The glamor girls of Hollywood are letting their hair down.

Reaction has struck the short haircut craze that swept in and blighted the country a couple of years ago.

Now Jane Russell, Joan Crawford and many other Hollywood names are allowing their locks to resume normal length. Most of them admit the men demanded it.

But Claudette Colbert adds a note of caution. She is the screen's most noted devotee of the short cut and has stuck to her bob despite the whims of fashion for these many years.

"I think many women should think twice before they let their hair grow back," she says.

"I like long hair on some women — particularly young girls whose hair looks silky and soft. But on some women it just looks messy. There is nothing more unattractive than long, stringy hair that looks as though a comb had never been run through it.

"The best thing about the short haircut is that it makes a woman look neat. And a lot of women could stand looking neater."

Talk of the Town

The feud being whipped up between Bette Davis and Tallulah Bankhead over Bette's portrayal in "All About Eve" (getting her taking the whole thing seriously).

The raps received by "The Minver Story".

The revered feud between NBC and CBS over the Jack Benny time (with NBC putting coaxly artillery into "The Big Show" opposite the fiddler).

Benny, Livingstone Mr., Mrs. Citizen Of United States

Hollywood, Nov. 16. (AP)—B'nai B'rith announced yesterday that Jack Benny and his wife, Mary Livingstone, have been selected this year's "Mr. and Mrs. American Citizen".

President Seymour Knee of the Jewish Lodge said the award is for "unselfish service to humanity" and "consistent and energetic efforts to create better understanding and tolerance among all people."

REPORT OF INQUIRY

Ottawa, Nov. 16 — (CP)—Loss of a helicopter from the Eastern Arctic patrol vessel C. D. Howe on northern waters Aug. 5 was due to "lack of inspection previous to flight," a board of inquiry reported. One man, a passenger in the craft, was drowned as the helicopter plunged into the Hudson Strait at Ungava Bay during an attempted take-off from the vessel's flight deck.

AT THE BELLE — Barbara Stanwyck gets pretty rough treatment at the hands of screen newcomer Lyle Bettger in this scene from Paramount's exciting drama, "No Man of Her Own." John Lund and Jane Cowl are featured in this story of a woman engaged in a desperate masquerade.

Art Childs Helps Hamilton Tigers To Win Game

(By The Canadian Press)

An old friend returned to the Hamilton Tiger lineup Wednesday night.

Art Childs, the ancient and acrobatic goaltender who played Olympic hockey before the war and sparked the Tigers to several Ontario Hockey Association Senior A titles before his retirement last year, filled in for the injured Bruce Dale in the nets, and his mates presented him with a victory.

Childs, one of the last of the "tired old men" who fought their way to the Allan Cup finals in 1946, looked rusty in the first period, when Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen scored four goals, including a couple of cheap ones.

But he was his old unbeatable self in the later stages as the tables soared back to grab a 5-4 decision and a triple tie for first place in the major series with Toronto Marlboros and Toronto St. Michael's.

Tom Smelle scored twice for the winners, including the tie-breaker. Murray Comfort, Frank Liscombe and Doug Maher added single tallies. Kitchener marksmen were Don Obendorfer, Art Hurst, Mickey Roth and Bob Wrightsell.

Barrie Flyers took over first place in the tightly-packed Junior 'A' race, defeating St. Catharines Teepees 4-2 to lead them by a single point in the standings.

Another point back, tied with the idle Toronto Marlboros, are Windsor Spitfires, who walloped Guelph Biltmores 7-1, and Oshawa Generals, who defeated Galt Black Hawks 6-3.

Towers Scores Three

Doug Towers ruined the Teepees, pumping home three of Barrie's four goals, Lionel Barber got the fourth, while Ted Powers and Wayne Brown were the lamp-lighters for St. Catharines. Five of the six goals were scored with the opposition short-handed through penalties.

A couple of rhyming centremen— Eddie Joss and Erwin Grosse—had a good night against Guelph, accounting for five goals between them. Joss scored once in each period and Grosse tallied twice in the second frame. John Offidani and Jim Anderson completed the Windsor total while Doug Blair was the lone Guelph marksman.

Lindsay Edges Port Hope 9-8 In Junior Game

Lindsay, Nov. 16 — (CP) Lindsay Kin Juniors, with Eddie Shore looking on, made their debut in the Central Ontario OHA Junior B league a winning one by edging Port Hope Panthers 9-8 in overtime in a rugged game last night.

Lindsay, which has a working agreement with Shore's Springfield Indians of the American League, trailed only once during the wide-open contest played before 1,000. Vic Corley paced the winners with three goals while Ken Schinkel and Gary Vasey fired overtime markers. Bud Downey turned the hat-trick with three goals and assisted on three others for the Panthers.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

For Friday, Nov. 17

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

March 22 to April 20—(Aries) —Indications encouraging, maybe unexpected favors from outside sources shoes you along. Benefits also likely from past contacts, work done without thought of compensation.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Really good returns from your consistent effort at doing a good job. Property, investments, business and merchandising should go well today. Continue the gains with your earnest backing.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Stellar configurations in your favor. Business should come first, then personal matters. Your keen sense of what's saleable or attractive should carry you along to success.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Pursue without thought of just personal gain and your business or work can produce a fine day. Out useless words and purposeless action to get better response. Benefits in the offing.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Important today we work a little extra for the good of the cause, those less fortunate. We have self-centered when we practice charity now and then.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)— Good news and some business gains forecast especially in a.m. Day will steadily progress, could bring satisfaction to you and family. Do thank God for blessings received.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Your general financial position has healthy outlook now. Seek favors, make sensible changes where really needed. Expedite work by system and by cutting hampering red tape.

October 24 to November 22 — (Scorpio) — Mars' aspect today especially stresses need for patience, forbearance. May not be easy day to get done all you would like. Others may irritate but you must smile—you'll win.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius) — Most planets are in inauspicious array, Much is up to your disposition and what your position demands. Be agreeable, understanding.

December 23 to January 21 — (Capricorn)—Similar indications to Scorpio here, Mix good humor with your earnest efforts and you will advance quicker, receive greater co-operation from others. Domestically favored.

January 22 to February 20 — (Aquarius)— Helpful period for most worthy undertakings if you do your share in planning and executing things rightly. May not be whirlwind day for accomplishment but gains can be made, and by you.

February 21 to March 20 — (Pisces) — Be alert, accurate, prompt. Some help from influences in general but you must show fresh initiative and the will to get ahead. Personal and home affairs are most favored.

You born today: vibrant, magnetic personality. Inclined to be forceful; may be arbitrary at times but usually honest and just in intent. Have unusual leadership qualities, can carry heavy responsibilities, hold position of authority. All this, of course, if you are living true to your finer traits and if you strive to correct failings. Quick temper, tendency to jealousy, should be curtailed. Keep studying, improving, you folks are hungry for knowledge and can make good use of it. Birthdate: George Grote, English banker and historian.

FRANKFORD

Tribute Paid To War Dead

Frankford—A small group of veterans and citizens braved the cold weather Saturday to pay tribute to the men of the two Great Wars who paid the supreme sacrifice for their country.

Reeve Geo. N. Spencer acted as chairman, and brought a few opening remarks. Rev. R. MacEachern of the United Church led in prayer after which Mr. Arthur Duncan brought greetings from Batawa.

Last Post was sounded by Bugler Charles Butcher and a period of silence was observed, followed by Reveille. Wreaths were placed by a number of organizations.

Mr. MacEachern brought a brief but inspiring message.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Cresser of Hillside visited friends in Frankford on Saturday.

The Frankford Boy Scouts held their weekly meeting in the Community Hall with a good turnout. Following the opening flag break, a period of instruction followed on the Pathfinder Badge. Two of three games were enjoyed, including a "stalking" instruction game. The business session followed, and a number of Scouts volunteered to sell poppies on Saturday. Plans were completed for the "Test Night" next week when Field Commissioner A. L. Jackson of Trenton will be present. Eldon Sine completed his second class Lashing and Hitches Test.

Misses Marlene Munn and Barbara Bonisteel, and Scouts Dean Kemp and Harold Baker, and Mr. John McInally did a fine job on the poppy sales Saturday.

MARSH HILL

Marsh Hill — A number of Pine Grove W. I. members attended the W.I. Area convention Wednesday and Thursday of last week at Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. David Hollinger and Jimmy and Mrs. John Brown visited relatives in Smiths Falls, on Thursday and called on Miss Mae Currie, who is a patient in Kingston hospital.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell on Sunday were Rev. and Mrs. F. Gilbert, Ralph and Mary, of Foxboro, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Searles, of Oak Lake, and Mr. and Mrs. Will Shaw, C. of Ivanhoe.

Mr. and Mrs. Allyn Finkle and boys were guests Sunday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bartlett of Foxboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake Johnson are attending the Royal Winter Fair.

Mrs. Will Gano, of Marmora, called Friday evening on Mrs. Robt. Campbell and Mrs. Frank Finkle.

A number of ladies from here attended Wear-ever brush party Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Grace Bartindale, Oak Lake.

Mr. Leslie Finkle spent Tuesday in Toronto.

BELEVE BOYS VISITING

St. Catharines, Nov. 15 — (CP) — Phillip Nelles, boy assistant of the disappearance of Freddy Abrams, 14, of St. Catharines and his 13-year-old neighbor, Frank Styger of Grantham township, Abrams has been visiting since Sunday and Styger since Monday.

No foul play is suspected. It is thought the youngsters are on their way to Toronto or Brockville.

MELROSE

Melrose—A number attended the public meeting at the Anne Stret School on Friday evening and again saw two of the Melrose winners carry off the first and second awards. Congratulations to Sheila Currie and Jimmie Stafford for their success.

Miss Doreen Bailey of Toronto, spent the weekend at the Reilly home.

Several ladies of Melrose W.I. attended the area convention at Belleville Collegiate on Wednesday and Thursday of last week. Honorary president, Mrs. Roy Badgley had charge of registration. Mrs. Jack McLaren and Mrs. Clare Weese were delegates.

Miss Jean McLaren spent the weekend with her aunt, Mrs. Bob Miller, in Madoc.

Mr. and Mrs. Carman Milligan and family and Mrs. Wm. McLaren had dinner on Sunday at the home of Mrs. Geo. Macfarlane.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tripp, Oshawa, were recent guests of Mrs. A. W. McLaren.

Mr. R. H. Macklem, I.P.S., paid an official visit at Melrose school one day last week.

At the morning service in Melrose United Church, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Long was christened Karen Marie Long. Her maternal grandparents were present to witness the baptism.

Mrs. Charles Macfarlane spent the weekend at the Davis home.

Miss Marion English, Reg. N., Toronto, spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur English.

Friends will be glad to know Mrs. Charles Bates and Mrs. Norman DeMille have both improved in health and convalescing at their home.

Messrs. Charles Bates, Jr., and Earl Badgley are attending the Royal Winter Fair this week.

WELLINGTON

Wellington—Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Alexander (nee Bernice Teskey) of Bloomfield, on the birth of a son last week at Prince Edward County Hospital.

Mrs. Ken Wallbridge, of Toronto, was an overnight guest of Mrs. J. Reid on Sunday.

Mr. Stanley Hawthorne, of Madoc, was a caller at the home of Mrs. Ida McFaul on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Lavender and Mrs. Wilma Ainsworth are spending a few days in Toronto, while Mr. Lavendar writes an examination at the Royal York Hotel.

Messrs J. and Charlie Lavendar Mr. Wilson Ainsworth and Mr. Everett Lavendar have returned from their cottage north of Millbridge where they were deer hunting.

Master Garry Channell had his tonsils removed at Prince Edward County Hospital on Tuesday morning.

All are sorry to learn that Mrs. Douglas McFaul Sr., of Picton, has had an operation at Kingston General Hospital. She is as well as can be expected.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Rutter, of Picton, were Sunday tea hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ellis and children.

Deepest sympathy is extended to the Lewis family in the loss of their son, Keith.

Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Leavitt have moved to the farm they purchased recently from Mr. and Mrs. W. Ashley.

Mrs. Charlie Nelson entertained the members of the Evening Auxiliary at her home on Tuesday evening.

Afternoon Aux. W.M.S.

On Tuesday afternoon the Afternoon Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. Clarence McMaster. The president presided and conducted the worship service assisted by Mrs. J. J. Way.

Mrs. M. Waite and Mrs. L. E. Dorland presented the chapter in the study book in the form of a playlet ending with a Japanese game.

During the business session, Mrs. C. Moffatter and Mrs. F. Gooding were appointed a nominating committee. Some arrangements were made for the December meeting and books exchanged. Rev. W. G. Fletcher dismissed the meeting.

Refreshments was served by Mrs. E. McMaster, Mrs. L. Dorland and the hostess.

PLUGGING AWAY AT LONG DISTANCE

Telephone supervisor William Crumpner has his hands full as he attempts to handle the block-long switchboard in a Chicago telephone exchange during the strike of 33,000 members of the C.I.O. Communications Workers of America. Long-distance boards were hard hit as operators refused to cross the picket lines. More than 25,000 workers throughout the U.S. have left their jobs to support the walkout. — Central Press Canadian.

I WANT 2000 PEOPLE TO TRY SYNTONA FOR ONLY 25 CENTS
SUFFERING FROM STOMACH TROUBLE, YEAST MISERY, LAZY LIVER, NERVOUSNESS AND GENERAL RUNDOWN CONDITION

WHAT IT IS!
SYNTONA is an advanced medical compound of 15 of the finest medicinal herbs, and not one a habit-forming drug. It is not a laxative nor purgative. It will tone your system eliminate the poisons that form in your stomach, bowels, and blood, and in 10 minutes to stop gas and pains, sour stomach, bloating, etc., and at the same time SYNTONA drives the poisons from the system through the pores of the skin, bladder irritations and weakness.

WHAT IT DOES!
It acts on the stomach, liver, bladder and kidneys to relieve gas, sour stomach and nausea, pains, gives relief to boils, pimples and other common blood disorders by ELIMINATING THE CAUSE! It builds strong, healthy nerves. It will free your system of the overgrowth of acidity. These revolting poisons, if allowed to remain, will sour your stomach — fill you with gas — sour your food and cause constipation.

Now, whether SYNTONA will help you as it has thousands of others or whether it will end your misery as in many cases, it is worth a quarter to you in light of what it has done for others. It is surely a mistake not to try it for 25c, only a fraction of its worth. This introductory offer is good Friday and Saturday ONLY. So act at once and get enough to prove it to you and your family.

I Hear Adventure Calling

By Emilie Loring

"'Country Lane' is no longer mine. It is yours, Sinclair and Miss Sargent thought me fussy, but after all, why shouldn't I make a change? They are my pictures. I took down one, carried it to what they call the repair shop, removed it from the frame and substituted one I had brought from the Inn which I decided might be more salable. It was a good hunch. I found this telephone message when I came into lunch." He drew a slip of paper from his coat pocket, read: "'Romance in Stone' called this morning. Congratulations. Fran Phillips.' That's the story of yesterday afternoon."

"Sounds as if you knew your stuff."

"Of course he knows his stuff, Myles. Do you think he would be hung in a Sargent Gallery, in a one-man exhibit, if he didn't?" Miss Tassie was quite breathless in defense of her protege. "A success story, I'd call it. What is the subject of the picture just sold, John?"

"A Belgian castle, enough of it standing to show its one-time grandeur, to suggest its romantic past, in contrast to the rest of it, a heap of picturesque ruins with vines. I developed the painting from a sketch I made while I was with the army in that country."

A ruined palace. Belgium. Berth, the waiter, had told Fran he had been a butler in a near palace once. Could it be another coincidence that the two men had arrived in this village at the same time? Back up on that trail. The mystery of the gallery was giving him many thrills. Dollars to dimes the ex-butler never had seen a palace in Belgium any more than he had been chauffeur at Dunkirk. Hadn't he told Morrie Grove he had served in the R.N. Navy four years? Undoubtedly he was a psychopathic case, harmless, one not to be taken seriously.

"The storm gave the inlet the works, poured Eckhard's thirsty throat to light a coffee-colored meerschaum representing the head of a leering satyr. I went there in the late afternoon to look over the studio that was to rent. Stayed for an alfresco supper in the midst of which the heavens opened, we rushed for the house. That wasn't a protection, for the roof leaked. I haven't done so much laughing since I was an amateur yachtsman. The village belles wasn't hopeful that I would restore my suit to its original freshness, which after all wasn't so fresh, as it was of the one-the-war vintage."

Knit one wet suit as a clue to the gallery mystery, added to that, the man hadn't a sign of a cold. He could scare off Eckhard from the list of suspects, Myles decided as he rose.

"It has been like old times to drop in for lunch with you Miss Tassie. My regards to Susanna, tell her there is no cook in the world who can touch her lobster thermidor. Glad to have this chance to get acquainted, Eckhard. I'm not an art critic, but I know what I like and I like your work immensely."

Color deepened the violent sunburn of the artist's face to the edge of his stiff iron-gray hair. The prominent eyes behind the owl-like lenses misted as he clasped the hand Myles extended.

"You're mighty friendly, Major Jaffray to a stranger. You and Congressman Grove sure have put out the Welcome mat for me. I met him at the village tailor's. He was caught in the storm last night. His suit, if one is to believe the tailor, is in a more hopeless condition than mine. Looked as if he had been standing under a tree or among bushes that had stained them."

"Standing among bushes that had stained them." The words rotated in Myles's mind in unison with the wheels of the car as he drove along the main street. Could Morrison Grove be the person who had left muddy footprint on the kitchen floor, who had discovered the hideout of the blue blotting paper? A crazy suspicion. Morrie had left Shore Acres in his sedan before the storm broke, he had said he was about to make calls on constituents. What possible reason could he have to hang around the gallery, to cook Silas Pond?

Was Morrie Grove in love with Fran? Myles asked himself. Suppose he were, suppose he had given up hope of getting Nat, going all out for another woman? That wouldn't take him to the gallery. She was at Shore Acres when he drove away. Common sense would suggest that she would remain there through the storm. Could be, thought, that a man in love had no common sense. Nevertheless there was a wet suit stained by the drip from tree or shrubs to be accounted for. Slight as it was, incredible as it was, he'd better not pass up the chance that it was a clue. Morrie Grove was his dish for the present. He'd drop in on him.

The dapper white-coated Filipino who opened the door of the buff Colonial house where Morrison Grove kept bachelor hall shook his head in response to Myles's inquiry.

"No siree, the boss not home. He telephoned from the tailor's shop where he took his suit, that he was going out of town for a few days. Very sudden, sir, he didn't take a bag."

"Did Mr. Grove have a cold when he left?"

"Not a real cold, sir. He sneezed once this morning, but that was all I heard."

"Very sudden, sir, he didn't take a bag. He sneezed, once." Myles turned over the words mentally as he drove through the main street. Yesterday after noon in the terrace at Shore Acres Morrie had exclaimed:

Something tells me that fella will bear watching."

Had he seen Barth steal away from the silo? Was he on the trail of the man's past? He shot the roadster forward, muttering to himself:

"I'll be darned! It's possible."

"Quite a storm last night, Caesar Myles greeted the very tall, very black, very straight butler at the door of Sunnyside.

"Yes sir, Mr. Myles. Seems like the good old days befo' the war when Miss Tassie had parties an' you was always on de floor receivin' in de drawin' room, sir."

Having paid his respects to hostess and guest of honor, Myles stood in the doorway of the dining room with its beautiful woodwork, carved shutters and high cornices which, under the empire mirrors, antiquities in the country. From the broad hall drifted the music of woodwinds and strings playing. "The Night Was Made for Love."

The music provided a running accompaniment to his thoughts. Three days ago he had had luncheon here with Miss Tassie and Eckhard, now the great room was filled with guests in gala attire invited to meet the artist. Was pink the top fashion for women's frocks this summer? Those in view ran the gamut of pinks and shades from flesh color to American Beauty. There was a sprinkling of black among the white dinner jackets.

He responded to friendly waves and affectionate hails while his thoughts and the music travelled on together. Three days gone and he had made no progress in getting the truth of the theft at the gallery, Barth, Fran Phillips, been incommunicado, he had been unable to reach her. Did he mean that for one reason or another her dislike of him had been given fresh impetus or that a clue to the break had been unearthed and she had been forbidden by her boss to talk with him?

Morrison Grove also had been elusive. He had followed up his call at the house with telephone inquiries. "Out of town," each time a voice had replied. Too late now to check on the clue of the wet suit, it would be bone dry by this time. The more he thought of it the more he believed it to be coincidental, like the arrival in the same town of the artist who had painted the ruins of a Belgian castle and the butler who had served in one. Who could believe the man's story.

"Can I get you something sir?"

Barth, ex-butler, ex-Dunkirk, ex-what-have-you, appeared as if conjured into being by his thoughts. The lock of hair dangling on his high forehead was as white as his immaculate shirt front.

For no apparent reason Myles's memory television set a figure skulking among rocks, sound tracks broadcast a song:

SIX KILLED IN LEVEL-CROSSING COLLISION

SAILED PACIFIC ALL BY HIMSELF

A lonely voyage of 14 months from New Zealand ends at San Francisco, as Swiss-born Jacques Markwalder, 40, waves hello from his schooner Te Rongoi. The daring mariner was skipper and crew of his 34 ft. auxiliary, whose log will tell most of the work. Markwalder put in at Tahiti, Christmas Island and Honolulu. — Central Press Canadian.

GAS EXPLOSION ROCKS WEST-END OF WINDSOR

None Seriously Hurt, Blast Wrecks House

Windsor, Nov. 17 (CP) —Several blocks of westend Windsor were rocked today by a heavy explosion which injured only two women and wrecked their home.

Fumes from either a coal furnace or gas cooking installation were blamed for the blast, which demolished all four walls of the top storey of the house.

Injured were Mrs. Edward R. Bowe and Mrs. Wincheney Fawbert, who live on either side of the double house. Neither were seriously hurt.

Persons on the street nearby escaped injury from bricks and rubble which showered on the road and sidewalks.

Mrs. Bowe was upstairs in her section of the house.

"There was no warning," she said. "It didn't smell anything. There was a horrible blast and everything hit my back."

"Smoke started billowing about me and flames burst in front of me. I began to run, getting out of there because I was alone, so I ran out of the house."

A road and fire truck began on the scene was extinguished by firemen.

Found Dead in Car With Strangled Woman

Andover, Mass., Nov. 17. (AP) —A former convict, who served six years in connection with the strangling of Boston's Jane Doe in 1942, was found dead today in a parked automobile, the trunk of which contained another strangled woman.

Police identified the man as Joseph L. Lemieux, 37, and the woman as Mrs. Pauline Chaput, 36. A preliminary examination indicated murder and suicide.

Police said Lemieux was convicted of manslaughter in 1942 in the strangulation of Betty Jane Doe, a divorcee. He was sentenced to eight to ten years in prison and was paroled two years ago.

BRACKEN STALLION CHAMP

Toronto, Nov. 17 (CP) — Bourbon Pot Gold, owned by John Bracken, former national leader of the Progressive Conservative party, today was judged the grand champion Palomino stallion at the Ex. The senior and grand championships.

Mr. Bracken, former premier of Manitoba, now farms at Manotick Ont.

Kingston (N.Y.) Man Missing Aboard Barge Feared Lost On L. Ontario During Storm

St. Catharines, Nov. 17 — (CP) — Baldie Serrie, 36, of Kingston, N.Y., is missing on Lake Ontario aboard a barge which is believed to have foundered in a storm on Lake Ontario last night.

Loaded with 700 or 800 tons of scrap and by the steel mills in Hamilton, the barge was being towed by the John E. Mattson, of the Mattson Lines, Albany, N.Y., when the cable broke three miles west of the mouth of the Niagara River.

Heavy Sea Rolling

Captain Bill Gazaw, a relief captain who was in charge of the tug, said that at the time the wind was between 50 and 60 miles an hour and the waves were breaking over the wheelhouse.

The barge, the Ted, owned by Reliance Barge Corporation of Kingston, N.Y., was picked up by the tug at Rainy, N.Y., and was being towed across the lake to Hamilton.

About 10 p.m. last night, in the midst of the storm, the crew of the John E. Mattos felt the stern of the tug being dragged downwards by the tow cable, until it broke under the strain. At the time the barge was at the end of 1,300 feet of cable.

The tug used radar equipment for five hours in searching for the barge, but did not make contact, and finally put into nearby Port Weller early this morning. U.S. Coast Guard cutters and aircraft from the Niagara Falls naval reserve have been combing the area since daybreak.

Captain and crew members of the tug and the man on the barge was a relief man who had joined the tug crew at Oswego, N.Y. The tug, the John E. Mattos is now up at Port Weller.

Her captain, William Gazaw, said "it was one of the worst storms I have ever been through" in the long years he has sailed the lakes.

Capt. Marvin Shear, cook from Fort Pleas, N.Y., said: "it was rougher than the ocean."

Canadian Destroyer Battered By Worst Storm in Her Career

Hong Kong, Nov. 17—(CP) — The Canadian destroyer H.M.C.S. Sioux was battered by the worst gale in her sea career in the China Sea last week and came into the naval base with port side guard rails twisted out of shape, steel ladders bent and watertight doors warped out of shape.

The Sioux was in company with the British light cruiser Belfast Caesus when she was hit. Though the ships adjusted their course to avoid the centre of the gale, the waves were reaching heights of 50 feet by midnight on Nov. 9.

One veteran of 10 years' sea experiences said he had never seen anything like it.

The Sioux's port side bore the brunt. All that remained of the Port Welter was a small part of the bow.

The huge waves which repeatedly buried her up to the funnel snapped a wire funnel stay an inch in diameter. Steel waterlight doors were warped out of shape and a spare locker on the upper deck burst under the incessant pounding.

A starboard Carley float was ripped in its lashing and was carried 150 feet after, which it finally wrapped around some stanchions.

Lieut. Robert Peers of Victoria said that during the watch there were times when the rudder was hard over but the ship couldn't answer her helm.

No one was allowed on the upper deck. What traffic was necessary was confined to a catwalk some 10 feet above the main deck. But officers and men walking there often found themselves waist deep in foaming seas and ordinary seamen Vernon Brisham of Mission City, B.C., described that once while he was going forward along the catwalk, a huge sea buried the ship up to the funnels, top of the maple leaf on her funnel.

Natural Politeness of Japanese Makes Life Comfortable in Tokyo

Tokyo, Nov. 17—CP—If the Japanese have had to swallow their pride with the white man in defeat, they certainly don't give no sign of it. But at the same time they know the white man is boss.

This realization and their natural politeness makes life in Tokyo comfortable for the foreigner.

In the Marunouchi hotel, for instance, one gets service unexcelled probably anywhere in the world. The hotel is for commercial men, officials, and Canadian pilots, live there on their 48-hour stop-over in Tokyo.

The hotel is similar to a Canadian hotel except that wash basins are left for the shorter Japanese.

The desk clerk speaks excellent English and keeps his composure during a harried day translating destinations for cab drivers, looking up addresses in his card and generally answering every conceivable question a foreigner might ask in a strange city.

The day starts at 7 a. m. with the ceremonious arrival in the rooms of two maids, one carrying tea, the other bearing cream and sugar.

Service in the dining room is perfect. The food is good—I found the roast beef better than that at home—and there is no waiting between courses. The dishes are, mostly western, with the Japanese touch to some again.

There are two lounges and a ballroom where drinks are sold until 11 p. m. or midnight. A scotch and soda costs 18 cents, rum or a beer seven cents.

For rooms and meals, plus laundry, the cost is $4 a day.

There are at least 3 official currencies in circulation in the hotel—the Japanese yen, the occupation dollar and the pound sterling.

In Japan, no American currency is used. You change your money at the bank for occupation money, at the same rate. It is illegal to have an Australian dollar, a Canadian dollar but a bit narrower.

This scrip is used in all military establishments and the British personnel use the pound in their places as well.

You're used to dealings with the Japanese. You pay the cab driver and the merchant in yen and the Japanese are not supposed to have dollars, pounds or scrip, and there is practically no black market in money. One dollar gets you 360 yen.

Canada's Defence Activities Pass into Darkness of Secrecy Under Impact of Korean War

Ottawa, Nov. 17 (CP) — A lot of Canada's defence activities have passed into the twilight or full darkness of secrecy under the impact of Korea and the half-war with Russia.

The theory behind it all is keyed to the natural wish to tell the Russians as little as possible about what is going on in a preparedness program without peacetime precedent in this country.

Compared to Russia's own disclosures, a veritable stream of revelations pours out steadily from defence headquarters here through speeches, press releases, statements to parliament and news stories.

But there are among recent developments which show the way the winds of security—or seclousness are blowing in an effort to keep vital disclosures as scarce as possible.

Troop Movements: The army's special force has been moving to Fort Lewis, Wash., under a security blackout on times, departures and arrivals. Officials say this precaution is being universally around the world now, that it could be construed as a move against potential sabotage but more as an exercise in such precautions as would be considerable as experience if war comes.

Jet engines: It was announced in the U.S. this week that an American jet engine has been built with a device to ward off ice, a major problem for jet propulsion. A year or so ago the National Research Council made no bones about the fact it was working on the problem. Now, however, the N.R.C. says it's not saying what is going on. The blackout on scientific activities for defence has extended to numerous other projects, despite strenuous U.S. aversion to secrecy.

Anti-tank Weapons: Defence Minister Claxton recently disclosed that Canada has completed developments of two anti-tank projectiles. That's as far as officials are prepared to go. They won't say even broadly what kind they are, whether they are going into production, whether the special force will use them.

The North: For some time, officials of Canada's northland have been divided into two central security groupings—areas where security measures are allowed, areas where the bars are less strict. At some northern bases there is complete ban against all but military people and RCMP assistants.

Internal Security: The forces not only co-operate with the RCMP in efforts to weed out any communists who seep in, but their own security arrangements have been put on a virtual wartime basis. Service men are warned to take every precaution to see that papers and documents don't fall into unauthorized hands.

Mounties in Alert Position To Deal With Red Traitors

Ottawa, Nov. 17. (CP)—Justice Minister Garson said today that plans and precautions of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to deal with communists in Canada are "well matured" and some of them are now in operation".

He added, however, that it would be contrary to the public interest to disclose what these plans are since such a disclosure would be of vital assistance to the communists themselves.

The minister in a statement referred to an article by T. G. Marquis in the current issue of Maclean's magazine. McManus, former communist who renounced the party, said communists in Canada were prepared to strike at Canada's internal security if an emergency arose.

Mr. Garson said he had been asked what precautions the government, and in particular the Royal Canadian Mounted Police had taken to deal with these intentions of Canadian communists to commit treason against Canada.

The minister recalled the actions and attitudes of the Canadian communist party following the signing of the non-aggression treaty between Hitler and Stalin. Communist party leadership into the Second World War but changed this attitude when it was the Russian attitude to do so.

But until this change, he said, Canadian communists had "carried on a campaign of obstruction, disaffection and other subversive and illegal acts.

This activity, however, was not very successful; for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at that time gave a pretty convincing demonstration of its ability to deal with these communist activities.

"The Royal Canadian Mounted Police have long realized that if a war were now to occur between the Soviet Union and the communist states, the communists in this country would again be loyal to Russia rather than to Canada, and would again attempt to carry on the campaign of subversion and treason.

"The organization and plans of an enlarged and more experienced Royal Canadian Mounted Police to deal with such a menace are well matured.

"Some of them are now in operation.

"But quite obviously the publication of these precautions and plans would be of vital assistance to the communists themselves and for since these plans are mainly directed against traitors, there are in Canada many persons who, if know what these plans are, or they should be helped more by such knowledge than these traitors.

"It therefore is manifestly contrary to public interest that these precautions and plans should be made public, since to make them public would be to render practically useless for the purposes which they are intended to serve."

Suffocated After Putting Out Fire

Toronto, Nov. 17, (CP)— Thomas Burton Williams, 54, believed suffocated last Tuesday after putting out a fire in his basement, police reported last night.

Building superintendents broke into the apartment when it became known Mr. Williamson had not been seen for two days. They found the body on a chesterfield, with a burned out chair indicating the man had extinguished a fire before collapsing.

FIVE PERISH IN FIRE

Rauch, Minn., Nov. 17 (AP)—A mother and her four children were burned to death early today when fire destroyed their home. Rauch is a small farming community, 70 miles south of International Falls, near Minnesota's northern border.

The victims were Mrs. Rose Smith, 36, and the children, Thomas, 11; Marilyn, 10; Betty, 5; and Jack, 2.

Three Lost in Bush For Night Return

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Nov. 17. (CP)—Three men lost in the rugged bushlands in the Batchawana Bay area 40 miles east of here found their own made their way to safety late yesterday.

They are Wilfrid Lawrence (Larry) 34, Frank) 27, and Arthur, 22, all of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., suffered no serious ill effects from a night in the open with the temperature hovering around the freezing mark.

20 TANKS ON BERLIN

Berlin, Nov. 17 — (AP) — A score of American tanks will be sent to Berlin about Jan. 1 to reinforce the Western Powers' garrison, the cold war city, it was learned today.

The tanks are 43-ton Pershings mounting 90-millimetre guns.

They will join the eight British Centaurs, 53-toners with 77-millimetre guns which arrived yesterday from West Germany by freight train.

FOSBRAY GUILTY MANSLAUGHTER, GIVEN LIFE TERM

Jury Recommended "No Mercy"

Picton, Ont., Nov. 17. (CP)— James Fosbrey, who said he stabbed his wife to death in a jealous rage when she told him she was going to live with another man, has been sentenced to life imprisonment for manslaughter.

Fosbrey's second trial for the slaying of his estranged wife ended here Thursday when a Prince Edward County jury, after deliberating four hours and 15 minutes, returned a verdict of guilty of manslaughter and recommended "no mercy", Mr. Justice R. W. Treleaven pronounced sentence.

The 10-day trial ended a year less 11 days after the body of attractive, red-haired June Fosbrey, 25-year-old mother of a four-year-old daughter, was found in a blood-spattered bedroom of the yards from her home in the eastern Ontario town of Napanee.

Fosbrey, 29-year-old R.A.F. veteran from Sittingbourne, Kent, England, who had just returned to Canada from a trip to the United Kingdom, was arrested and charged with murder.

He was convicted by a Lennox and Addington County jury of Napanee, June 16, in a verdict brought in after only 45 minutes' deliberation. Chief Justice J. C. McRuer had ruled out manslaughter as a possible verdict, however, and left the trial to a jury on appeal by defence counsel R. E. Bowerman of Picton.

Won Change of Venue

He successfully submitted that the Chief Justice should have admitted the possibility of provocation and therefore a manslaughter verdict. Later Mr. Nourse also won a change of venue, contending that it would be impossible to select an unprejudiced jury in Lennox and Addington County.

There was apparently little interest in the proceedings. The murder trial included an admission by Fosbrey that he had stabbed his wife. He said he had been drinking when, after failing to make up with her, she told him she was planning to live with another man.

There was also testimony, both by Fosbrey's friends and relatives in England and by expert witnesses here, that Fosbrey usually unbalanced and was schizophrenic at the time of the killing.

Mr. Justice Treleaven took three hours in his charge to the jury, elbows on his knees, the same way he had sat through most of the trial.

Vehicle Carried 200 Feet, Then Rolls Over Bank

Beeton, Ont., Nov. 17 — (CP) — Six persons died last night when an old-model automobile collided with a fast freight train at a rain-swept level-crossing near this Simcoe county community 35 miles northwest of Toronto.

They were identified as Roy Morrison, 35, formerly of Woodstock; George Fetzer, 39, of Creemore, 25 miles north of here; Edwin (Ted) Hewitt, about 30, of Hurons, Ont.; Mrs. Irene Rushton, 35, whose estranged husband lives in Le Have, N.S., and her daughters, Marion, 10 and Joan, 7.

Police said Morrison, thought to have been the driver of the 1936-model sedan, had a wife and two children in Woodstock.

Mrs. Rushton, who came to Ontario from Halifax, N.S., nine years ago, had three other children. A daughter, Myrna, 15, has been living with a cousin in Collingwood, Ont. A son, Bud, 13, and another daughter, Ruby, 12, live with their father, Mrs. Rushton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Purdy, also in Halifax.

Morrison and the Rushtons had recently been living in this district, police said.

Fetzer's widow, Frances, and a 13-year-old daughter, Sylvia, are in Creemore.

Hewitt was described as a Second World War veteran trying to make enough money to go into business for himself.

The men were employees of the Arnott Construction Company, which is building a bridge on the township near here. Morrison was the cement foreman on the project and the other men worked in his cement-mixing gang.

Bound for Allliston

Provincial Police said they believed the car was bound from Beeton to Alliston, about eight miles north of here. The construction gang was returning on the bridge campsite near Alliston. Mrs. Rushton and her two children also were said to be staying in a trailer nearby.

Basil Wansbrough of Toronto, engineer of the south-bound Canadian Pacific Railway freight train, said it was his opinion that the occupants of the car did not see the approaching train.

"We were going between 35 and 40 miles an hour," Wansbrough said. "There wasn't much we could do. I saw the car coming and thought it was going to stop . . ."

The car was about half way across the train when the engine hit it, Wansbrough said. He stopped the train but the six occupants of the car were beyond aid when he reached them. The car being was dragged about 200 feet along the right-of-way and then rolled down a 30-foot embankment.

The county road slopes gradually before meeting the tracks.

C.P.R. spokesmen said. The tracks are about 10 to 15 feet higher than the surrounding ground.

The woman's body was found inside the crumpled wreckage of the car. The bodies of two of the men had been thrown, clear and were found 10 feet from the wreckage. One man had been decapitated and a foot was torn off one of the children.

Throw up Roadblocks

Motorists who came upon the crash scene within a few minutes after the collision—which occurred about 11 p.m. E.S.T.—said they were the first on an accident at the crossing itself. But, starting at short distance from the crossing, wreckage was strewn along the right of way.

District residents said there have been several fatal accidents in recent years at the crossing. From the south the road approach is tree-lined and the tracks themselves are elevated.

The crossing is about 20 miles south of Camp Borden, big Canadian army base.

Provincial police from Alliston, eight miles to the north, and from Bradford, about 15 miles east, took charge of the investigation. Coroner Dr. Lloyd Bolton is to keep back spectators. All available ambulances and hearses in the district were sent to the scene.

CAR RUNS INTO SIDE OF FREIGHT TRAIN NORTH OF BEETON

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Nov. 17—(CP)—The cooler weather and strong winds arrived in Ontario late Thursday evening as Detroit, Sarnia and rain fell in regions southeast of Lake Huron and snow flurries with continua in most regions until Friday afternoon.

Temperatures will drop 36 degrees today from those of Thursday when Windsor, London and Hamilton, at 4:30 p.m. E.S.T. shortly reached a new record of 55 for that city for that time of the day. Showers will clear this weather but increasing cloudiness and temperatures unseasonably moderate on Saturday in advance of a disturbance which will move through northern regions.

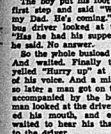
Bus Driver Did Not Answer Question Asked

A sense of humour would seem to be a requisite of a good bus driver. Last night, just after the supper hour, a city bus was proceeding down Pine St., when it was hailed by a young lad. The driver drew the bus up between stops and waited.

The boy put his foot on the first step and said "Wait for my Dad. He's coming." The bus driver looked at the lad "Has he had his supper yet?" he said. No answer.

So the phoble busload waited. And waited. Finally the boy yelled "Hurry up" at the top of his voice. And a minute or so later, a man got on the bus, accompanied by the boy. The man looked at the driver, paid for his mouth, and everyone waited to hear his thank you to the driver.



"Were you waiting for me?" he said. And this time, it was the bus driver who didn't answer.

Notice Received To Vacate Govt. Property

Notice to vacate the government-owned parking lot property at the corner of McAnnany St., and Pinnacle Street has been received by the city from the Department of Public Works at Ottawa. The notice to vacate the property by the 15th day of May, 1951, was read before council at their committee meeting Thursday evening.

For many years the city has been using the vacant lot as parking space for autos. The government planned to construct a new post office on the site.

Tender Accepted

Tender of the Diamond Construction and Engineering Company at $1,097.60 was accepted for the construction of a sanitary sewer on Burrell Street, and that of the Port Hope Construction Company for the construction of a sanitary sewer on Catherine Street at $4,350 was also accepted. In each instance the tenders accepted were the lowest.

Council will terminate its present contract with the Waverly Pest Control as of December 31st of this year. The above firm has had a contract for fumigation at the city hall for the control of insect pests.

Approval of the council members was given for the Argyll and St. Julien Chapters of the IODE to use the council chambers for the display of Queen Mary's carpet for three days during December.

Under Consideration

A communication from H. V. Faulkner, property treasurer of S.S. No. 9 school area in Thurlow was read before council. The communication indicated the school section contemplated the construction of a new school north of College Street, but before choosing the site the board members wished to know if the city intended extending its borders northward within the next few years.

If the area north of College Street was annexed it was pointed out there was a possibility that the proposed school may not be necessary. The communication was turned over to the Belleville Planning Board for their consideration.

Change in Plans For Santa Claus Parade Tuesday

A change in plans for Santa Claus was announced by the Chamber of Commerce this morning. Previous plans had the parade, which is next Tuesday, stopping at the Armouries, but it has now been decided to close off Bridge Street and have Santa's old gent and his retinue.

The parade is still scheduled to start from Cleveland's at 3 p.m. and officials estimate that Santa and his party will be in the downtown area sometime between 3.30 and 4 p.m. The whole show will be over by approximately 5 p.m. on the south side of the city hall buildings.

In all, there will be 16 floats, many of them sound-equipped. All of them will depict nursery rhyme characters, with the Big Bad Wolf, Little Red Riding Hood, Old Mother Goose, Old King Cole, Rudolph the Reindeer, Reindeer, the Old Lady in the Shoe, Cinderella and Santa Claus included.

At least one will be spotted throughout the parade route. In addition, several clowns will add to the gaiety. Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus will receive the children in their mobile home in Market Street.

PROPOSE LINE IN KOREA

London, Nov. 17. (AP)—A group of 22 Labor members of parliament urged the government today to propose a line in Korea at which United Nations forces would stop "with a view to bringing the fighting to an end".

They also asked the Western Allies to put forth counter-proposals for a big Four Conference on Germany suggested by Russia.

Most of the members of the House of Commons who signed the two motions belong to the Labor Party's Left Wing.

Board Member Explains Reasons For Resignation

Editor's note: Following is a letter sent to the mayor and council by E. Guss Porter which explains his reasons for resigning from the Board of Health.

Belleville, Ontario
November, 16, 1950

To the Mayor and Members of City Council,

When I was appointed to the local Board of Health at the beginning of this year, I accepted the position with considerable enthusiasm, as it appeared then that many members of Council were in favor of establishing a health unit in the city, a plan which had been advocated by the Health Board of Health in former years and with which I was in complete accord. It soon became apparent, however, that this plan would not be approved by Council and those interested in the matter, including the members of the Board of Health, then pressed council to at least approve the appointment of a full time medical officer of health. Finally after considerable discussion, Council gave its assent to this scheme and set aside sufficient funds to cover the estimated expense which would be involved.

The appointment of a medical officer of health it, by virtue of Section 34 (1) of the Public Health Act, a matter within the sole power of Council, but no action was taken by Council even when they were being urged to do so this year that the local Board of Health had been approached by an applicant for the position. By the time Council did act, this applicant had obtained another appointment.

In the meantime, however, the local Board of Health had been further inquiries from government officials and other sources in the hope that Council would act and on July 13th a full report was forwarded to Council setting forth the information which had been obtained and formally offering the co-operation of the local Board of Health in this matter in the future. Council either did not feel that the matter was of any great importance or did not wish to pursue it further, because it was not until September 25th when I personally appeared before Council in an effort to obtain some action, that the report of July 13th was finally brought before Council, and permission obtained for the Board of Health to take whatever steps it deemed advisable in order to control V.D. in Canada.

Since that time advertisements have been placed in the leading medical journals of the country and numerous inquiries made by the Board of Health from other likely sources, but to date no applications have been received and as it is so late in the year, it does not appear that any success can be expected this year.

Recently, without cancelling the instructions given to the Board of Health and in fact without to my knowledge, so much as consulting the Board of Health, Council changed its mind and now proposes to ask the voters to decide on election day whether or not they are in favor of improving the city's health services. The result is that this matter has now been turned into a political issue and the time and effort expended by the Board of Health and other interested citizens wasted.

In view of the above, it is quite obvious that the Board of Health enjoys neither the confidence nor the co-operation of Council and that it is futile for me, as a member of that Board, to expect to be able to accomplish anything for the betterment of health facilities in the city. I therefore tender my resignation from the Board of Health.

Yours truly,
E. Guss Porter.

Special Course Being Offered To All Veterans

Veterans in Belleville and district interested in building their own homes are this fall and winter being offered a special course in night school classes at the local collegiate dealing with financial problems and the actual construction details connected with building a home.

The course is being offered as a regular night school class at the collegiate and representatives of the Department of Veterans Affairs outlining the financial details including how much money the veteran could expect to borrow from the government and what a house should cost with the owner doing much of the work by contract system. Sixteen veterans are enrolled in the course at Belleville with Mr. R. H. Vaughan, principal at the O.S.D. acting as instructor.

Given Instruction

Currently classes are being held in the woodworking shop at the collegiate, but as the course continues it is expected the veterans will be given instruction in bricklaying and other trades associated with home building. The classes started in November and are expected to continue until May.

Principal of the collegiate, Mr. R. H. Currie stated that although but 18 classes being held at Kingston and at Cobourg.

Also for the first time classes in plumbing and heating and steam fitting are being conducted at the collegiate on night school work. So far all enrolled in the course are apprentices in the above trades.

J.B. Hennessey Trenton Retires, 46 Years Service

Forty-six years of service with the Canadian National Railways ended yesterday for John B. Hennessey, of Trenton. And what's more, they ended on his 68th birthday.

Mr. Hennessey was presented with a sum of money from the men he has worked with on the railroad, and G. C. Irvine, assistant foreman of the local motive power department spoke to the employees about Mr. Hennessey's fine service record. The presentation was made in the lunchroom.

Mr. Hennessy has been on vacation since October 25. He joined the C. N. R. at the Trenton roundhouse on June 15, 1904, and became successively a fireman, engineer and a hostler. He has worked out of Trenton, Mimico and Belleville, and immediately prior to retirement worked in Belleville.

According to his colleagues, Mr. Hennessey has no definite plans for retirement, other than just "sitting around."

Bogus $10 Bills Are Detected By City Banks

If you are one of those fortunate human who possesses a ten-dollar bill, reach for it and look at it closely. If it bears the number BC 8536 and it is probably a phony.

An alert teller of the branch of the Bank of Montreal here detected one of the bogus bills yesterday. It is currently being circulated at the Canadian Bank of Commerce branch this week.

The phony bill is out, what the experts call, a good job. Its texture is coarse and the color differs slightly. But they can be readily passed if a transaction involving large amounts of money is in the making.

It is believed the bills have emanated from the same source as those which were passed a year ago.

The bills detected thus far, bear the same number.

IN MEMORIAM

SEDORE — In loving memory of a dear father, Miles Sedore, who passed away on November 13, 1948.
God knows how much I miss you
He counted the days
And whispered, "His only sleeps"
But dreamed no one knew.
So I'll be brave, dear Frank
And play it each day
And when I'm tempted to cry
Your smile will guide my way.
Sadly missed by wife Suretta and family. N17

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 17 — (CP)—Industrials advanced to new high ground in the fourth straight day of quiet trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today.

Sales were fairly wide where they were made they ranged upwards to more than a point. Papers, agriculture, textiles, banks, and retail stores showed a majority of gains in the groupings.

Base metals were irregular. Consolidated Smelters, Noranda, Quemont and Waite Amulet advanced while East Sullivan, New Calumet, International Nickel, Sherritt Gordon and United Keno Hill were lower.

Senior golds showed a solid list of fractional declines while junior producers were mixed with gains and losses limited to pennies. Western oils were mixed with Home, Pacific Petroleum, and Commoil Petroleum ahead.

WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

A heavy supply of stock was offered on Tuesday and prices were mostly with last week. Beef cows making 19 to 20c with plain to medium kinds selling from 17 to 18c, canners and cutters 13 to 14c. Heavy bulls sold at 22 to 23c a lb, light kinds 17 to 19c, beef steers and heifers 23 to 25c lb, stocker and feeder cattle 19 to 25c lb, Choice dairy cows close to freshening, $300.00 to $325.00 with plain to medium quality making $175.00 to $250.00 each. Calves choice 33c, plain kinds 23 to 27c, grass calves 18 to 20c. A large offering of pigs met with a good demand and sold from $10 each to $18.00 while small inferior kinds $7.00 to $9.00, feeder pigs 90 to 125 lbs brought 23 to 24c per lb. There was quite a number of horses for sale and found a brisk trade at 3 to 4c per lb, these horses going mostly for slaughter purposes. We ship fat hogs every Monday here at the sales arena and farmers delivering same will receive payment for trucking, and top prices will be assured. We are having favorable comments from farmers shipping their hogs through this channel as we are in a position to yard the hogs properly and make rapid delivery therefore the grade is higher and a better settlement is realized for the owner.

Liberal Leader Denies Charge Of C.C.F. Assoc.

Whitby, Nov. 17—(CP)— The Ontario riding C.C.F. Association demanded last night that Walter Thomson, new Ontario Liberal leader, resign his seat in the House of Commons because of his new duties and for "desertion." Mr. Thomson replied today, denying a charge he had been a chronic absentee from the House.

Mr. Thomson said he had never missed a Liberal caucus and "any time I was absent from the House of Commons it was with the knowledge and consent of a cabinet minister and it was for the purpose of carrying out either government business or the business of my riding."

The C.C.F. demand was similar to one earlier in the week from the Oshawa district labor council. Walter Laze president of the C.C.F. riding association, charged that Mr. Thomson was absent for 11 of 17 divisions in the House and had only spoken there twice, about five minutes each time, since his election as member in 1949.

Russian Threats Vie With U.S. Promises as UN Debate Red Intervention in Korean War

New York, Nov. 17 (AP) — Russian threats vie with American promises today as the United Nations Security Council meets to debate the question of Chinese communist intervention in the Korean war.

Russia's Jacob A. Malik charged last night that the United States has been attacking China on land, on the sea and in the air. He threatened to cast the Soviet Union's 47th veto to prevent passage of a security council repolution demanding that communist China withdraw troops from Korea. Malik said the United States—not the Peiping communist government—is the aggressor.

American delegate Ernest A. Gross immediately countered these assertions by reading a statement from President Truman stressing America's friendship for the people of China and stating that the United States has no intention of invading that country.

Delegates today took a cautious attitude, waiting for the answer to this question: Will all-out Russian diplomatic support encourage Peiping to continue and enlarge its military operations in Korea, or will the American assurances result in a withdrawal behind the Manchurian frontier?

Despite a declaration of Ecuador's Antonio Quevedo, that the "security council cannot simply fold its arms" in the face of Chinese intervention, the majority view seemed to be that, for the moment, a policy of watchful waiting is the most realistic and useful one.

Won't Press Vote

It was learned that not even the United States will press for an immediate vote on the resolution calling on the Chinese to withdraw from Korea and promising to respect their frontiers.

The United States feels, informed sources said, that every possible resource must be used to get China out of the Korean war peacefully, since the alternative might easily touch off a third world war.

Moreover, the direct threat of a Russian veto of security council action against the Chinese reds makes it even more urgent, from a practical standpoint, to try alternate means of influencing Peiping.

Although the assembly now has the power to take military action against an aggressor when the security council is "immobilized," no one is apparently willing to take the irrevocable step of sending the problem there before every other possibility is thoroughly explored.

A Chinese communist delegation now is en route here from Peiping but is not expected to arrive until late next week. Whether the final decision can be postponed until then is problematical.

Six Month Term

Kapuskasing, Nov. 17 (CP) — Charles Karas of Toronto was sentenced to six months yesterday on four charges laid by the Ontario Securities Commission.

Karas was charged with unlawfully trading in securities of the San Pedro Mining Corporation Ltd., the Gallagher Red Lake Gold Mines Ltd., the Barbara Mining Corporation Ltd., and the Ausonia Red Lake Mines Ltd., between March 1, 1949, and May 1, 1950.

Two Kapuskasing men reported they sold Karas $2,000 for stock and other amounts up to $300 and $400.

BLAMES LIQUOR

Walkerton, Ont., Nov. 17—CP— Rev. G. McLean, Baptist minister, yesterday blamed liquor for what police said was murder and suicide near here Monday.

He conducted a funeral service for Howard Evers, 38, who police said killed himself after fatally shooting his wife, Marie, and their four-year-old daughter, Judy, in Evers' farm home.

Mr. McLean said Evers was good natured, loved his family and worshipped the child. He said the slayings were the result of an irresponsible act directly attributable to the liquor habit.

Paintings by Manly Macdonald Win Acclaim at Local Showing

The Canadian scene vividly brought to life through the artistry of Manly Macdonald, talented Canadian artist, delighted a large gathering of art-lovers at the Belleville Arts Club last night.

Mr. Macdonald's canvas conception of the rural and urban scenes of Ontario and especially Belleville and its district, won the acclaim of those who attended the showing.

Particularly interesting was the artist's portrayal of two winter scenes depicting the Bay of Quinte looking north toward the city hall tower and another of a woodland scene centred by a flowing stream. These paintings had such a warm glow that it made one feel winter,is not such a bad season after all.

Wide Variety

Other pictures of Autumn scenes with their warm seasonal colors were shown as well as portraits of a boy and girl which demonstrated the versatility of Mr. Macdonald as an artist.

Perhaps one of his best paintings was a large canvas of a pool flanked on one side by a building and on the other by natural growth found in such settings. Looking at this made the viewer yearn to visit such a jewel of scenery that he might relax and forget for the moment some of the cares of modern life. And judging from the lavishness of attention to detail it might be said that the artist felt the same way.

It is to such artists that Mr. Macdonald's skill with his brush of still water reproduction is incomparable. The highlights and shadows blend in such harmony as to give a fluid appearance to his subject. Several of his canvases depicted this quality of his work.

Masterly Marine Picture

It is not only the successful portrayal of scenes which adds to his popularity, but his interpretation of marine scenes indicated a mastery of this subject on a par with his other paintings.

A fine example of this phase of his talent was shown in a sea harbor scene with a schooner tied up at the dock. This was painted from North Scotia and here again there is that limpid appearance of the water that is so desirable but difficult to reproduce.

Belleville is fortunate, indeed, to have as an artist of such stature as Mr. Macdonald. His modesty men and friendly manner, along with his great skill, will serve to place him in the forefront of great Canadian artists. No one is more richly deserving of the position and it may be taken for granted that the work of this fine artist, from Point Anne will enjoy increasing popularity as the years unfold. (M)

W. Europe Output At All-Time High With Marshall Aid

Washington, Nov. 17. (AP)— The Economic Co-operation Administration told Congress today Western Europe's industrial and agricultural production have climbed to an all-time high because of Marshall plan aid.

However, E.C.A. said in its quarterly report, Europe "must maintain and extend" these gains to cope with "the heart of intensified communist aggression".

"The required expansion in military production cannot be achieved", it added, "unless Europe's economic base is further strengthened."

The report was the ninth and by-far the most cheerful given to the United States Congress since the Marshall plan was approved in April, 1948.

Industrial output in the 16 countries under Marshall plan, it said, has reached a record—24 per cent higher than any prewar figure.

Agricultural yield for 1950-51 is expected to surpass the post-war high of last year and for the first time exceed pre-war levels.

As a result of such gains, E.C.A. said, the Western European democracies have "restored the confidence of their people in the ability of free democratic institutions to cope successfully with the economic and political problems facing them."

SHRINKING SPACE

If an experiment being carried out by an aircraft company in Britain and a department store in New Zealand succeeds it will be possible before very long to pick up the telephone, call the department store and arrange for the delivery of a plane the next day. In New Zealand customers will be able to select a plane, a family plane primarily which can be fitted out for crop-dusting and spraying, cable laying, glider-towing or ambulance work.

Such a possibility shows how far the airplane industry and the use of planes have developed that the plane should be taking so very intimate a part in the life of the people, not only in one land but in many.

It does not seem to be long since the plane was in its infancy. Today it is in its mature stride or near it. It is fitting into the work of the world and the business of nations just as earlier inventions fitted in, only the coming of the plane has revolutionized travel by devouring time and space so that if one were asked what more can the airplane be expected to achieve one might hesitate to reply, so much has already accomplished.

The far places of the earth are brought near by the heaven-flying machine as it cuts across the distances and time to shrink until the bounds of the globe are greatly narrowed, with the many nations with all their differences being brought as neighbors to one another.

The plane has become and will be only of the new means of transportation have been achieved but in due course the full harvest of results from airplane's speed will shrink and narrow the widest bounds.

The Columbus of the air started out for the west to find his way to the Orient and found instead what is now America, the known earth had narrow bounds which were yet fearful except to the most hardy and daring of navigators of whom many were drowned in the deep, the calms of the air and the sky is the only limit to daring of aeronauts. Through instruments astronomers have penetrated space and learned much from the stars so far away in their lonely vigil which they have maintained for endless ages.

WOODEN VESSELS

The present age is opening up avenues of exploration in every direction. The coming of the radio broadcast has widened the bounds of the earth as far as huban experience is concerned. From the most impossible places the voice of the broadcaster comes. One such instance was given to the radio listeners in Britain recently when an opportunity was provided for giving the public knowledge of the life on the lightships and the experiences of those who warn the ships against rocks and shoals.

For an island nation such as Great Britain safe shipping lanes are a vital necessity, and the lightships that mark the dangerous rocks and sandbanks round the British coasts are of untold importance to safety. At the moment six of these little vessels are being repaired and renovated and BBC reporter Audrey Russell told listeners what happens when one of them goes off station.

It is immediately replaced by another of the same type so that the service to coastal shipping is never interrupted. The intervals between dry docking depend on the type of ship and it was interesting to hear that it is the older wooden vessels, made more than seventy years ago, that last longest without routine attention.

There are three types of lightships in service. The wooden ones can stay at sea for seven years without overhaul. There are few of them left now but these are at St. Catherine's Point, which Audrey Russell described as "probably the first antique that Americans see as they steam up Southampton Water." The second type, built when ships made all of wood were falling into disfavor, is a composite vessel, one with iron hull and wooden upper parts.

These ships can stay five years on their stations. The modern steel vessel, a comparative youngster first made forty-seven years ago, comes in for an overhaul every three years.

When weather permits, the vessels are relieved every fortnight, and the seven man crew works four weeks on and two weeks off. There are two lamp lighters, two for signal drivers, two for radio operators and one for cook.

They need hobbies to stave off boredom and the feeling of isolation that is bound to come to seven men riding alone in an often-storm tossed ship that is miles from land.

They make maps and ship models, embroider, read quantities of books and listen to the wireless. Life in a lightship is extremely hard in heavy weather.

The ship may break adrift or be run down by larger vessels, and the yearly rescuing airmen and yachtsmen in distress have to be faced.

When the reporter heard the ship's foghorn she was surprised indeed to hear that, generally speaking, the men are quite immune to the fearful noise it makes.

"The first half hour of a fog is agony," it was said, "but after that you don't notice the horn at all."

KINSHIP

Though rich or poor it's all the same,
A fever pays no heed to fame,
Even the commonest rash or itch
Will vex and irritate the rich
And every pain a poor man bears
Will set to groaning millionaires.

To great and humble when they fall
The doctors give the self-same pill,
The surgeons use the self-same knife
And skill to save a poor man's life.
Which to the table they would bring
To meet the body of a king.

Doubt brotherhood! 'Tis in the breath
All mortals draw from birth to death.
'Tis proved by every hope and fear
And every smile and every tear.
And by the Heaven we pray to see
That meant for brotherhood were we.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

25 YEARS AGO

Nov. 17, 1925

Another link in the new lighting system that the city council and Belleville Hydro Electric Commission adopted will be officially connected tonight, when 25 lights, the same as placed on Dundas Street East, will be turned on on Highland Ave. and Bridge Street West. This will give another main thoroughfare leading into the better lighting.

At the present time, according to the Medical Health Officer, Dr. G. S. Cronk, there is not a single case of scarlet fever in the city of Belleville. This is rather remarkable in view of the epidemic that prevent weather.

James V. C. Truesdale has been appointed postmaster after 31 years in the post office here.

30 YEARS AGO

The corner stone of the new Anglican church named St. Philip, at Milford, was laid on Sunday, Nov. 14, by the Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, the Rt. Rev. E. J. Bidwell, D. D. The Rev. C. Louis Barber, Rector of Picton, assisted in the ceremony.

A enjoyable dance was given on last night in Bennett's Academy under the auspices of St. Michael's Athletic Association. Excellent music was furnished by Fy. A. Cousins' Six Piece Orchestra of Toronto. A vocal solo by Mr. Harold Barrett was much enjoyed. Much credit is due the following officers of the association: president, Dr. Daly, vice president, Mr. P. Hanley, treasurer, Mr. C. A. Barrett, and secretary, Mr. A. C. Meagher.

The Rt. Rev. William Lennox Mills, M.A., D. D., the newly-elected Bishop and Coadjutor to the Archbishop of the Anglican Diocese of Ontario, was given a hearty welcome by the members of the Church of England in Belleville, at a gathering in the city hall recently. An address of welcome was read by Rural Dean H. Bogart, Rector of St. John's Church and was signed by those present. The hall was filled with members of three parishes, St. John's, Christ Church, and St. Thomas' and the affair was most enjoyable. The following day a reception for the Bishop was held at the residence of Mr. W. B. Northrup, North Front St., from 3 to 5 p.m. The Union flag is flying from the tower of the city hall in honor of the Bishop's visit.

MacKenzie's Column:
King Farouk Gets Answer Quickly From London

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The demand by young King Farouk of Egypt in a formal Speech from the Throne that Britain clear out of the Suez Canal zone and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan creates a tense situation in one of the world's danger spots.

The speech was barely finished when Farouk got his answer from London in a blunt rejection by a spokesman for the foreign office. This representative said Britain's "defence contract" with Egypt still continues, adding:

"The defence of the Middle East is an issue which directly affects the peace and safety of many countries."

That states a great truth in a few words. The Middle East is one of the world's most important theatres strategically. It is so important that it could easily become the whelping ground of a Third World War.

Life-Line to Orient

This area, comprising many countries, is the great land bridge linking Europe, Asia and Africa. Also it is by the man-made Suez Canal which provides the shortest sea highway between the west and the Far East. As concerns Britain, it is her life-line to the Orient and to her own distant Orient.

Britain and Egypt have been associated under a 10-year treaty signed in 1936. Britain has maintained armed forces in the canal zone. The rich Anglo-Egyptian Sudan has been operated as a condominium, that is, two-country supervision. This is a situation which long has irked Egypt, who claims the Sudan as her territory.

Behind this latest Egyptian thrust is a long history of fierce resentment against what the land of the Nile regards as British intrusion.

Legality Lost

Yesterday's Speech from the Throne declared that "the 1936 Anglo-Egyptian treaty has lost its legality as a basis of Anglo-Egyptian relations." The speech added that Egypt now declares that the treaty has ceased to exist. Cancellation of the pact, but rather is a threat to cancel it if Britain doesn't meet Egypt's demands regarding evacuation of troops and withdrawal from the Sudan.

In any event, it seems clear that the Cairo government is willing for a showdown with London.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL I. DOUGLASS

WE NEED PROTECTION

You have doubtless noticed that every flower lover who can afford to do so builds a wall of some kind around his or her garden. The reason for this is that flowers can be beaten to pieces and robbed of their beauty by the cruel, strong blasts of wind. The loveliest flowers grow behind high walls in the sunny corners of the garden.

There are many people who object to any kind of a wall being built around a human being. Don't keep a child in, they say, with rules and strict procedures of discipline. Let the child learn by experience. Let him come in contact with both the good and the bad in human life and take his choice.

There is such a thing, of course as hemming people in too much—especially young people—by the application of rules and prohibitions. But for human beings as well as for flowers, it happens that life takes on a loveliness of hue and comes to have about it a more pleasant fragrance when it can be protected from the violence of two more furious blasts. The Lord's Prayer contains the "Lead us not into temptation." This is a prayer that God interpose His protective hand between ourselves and the onslaught of evil.

This does not mean that anyone should be pampered, but it does mean that we all need protection from life's temptations.

Letter to the Editor

Approves Public Health Plan

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

Permit me to express my views concerning the sanitation by-law No. 5097, A.D. 1946.

After reading in your paper that a referendum will be put before the electorate regarding a Health Board at a cost of $25,-000, the undersigned is fully in support of this important undertaking, and I commend the council for their good judgment in this matter.

Belleville is about the only city of its size that has no such Board, and the cost would mean approximately one dollar per year for each person living in our fair city.

Permit me to give a few details from the pamphlet which is to every citizen in this city and community.

Today John Public goes about eating in all sorts of places and buying food unconcerned about what he might buy with his hard-earned money. The laxity of sanitation in some of the most important subjects that we have in our city today (and it is a shame to say) is appalling, and anyone ever thought that when he goes out to eat, or purchases his commodities daily, that he is not assured of cleanliness today as he was in years gone by. We do not have sterilization facilities as our forefathers had when they had a dairy and ran up a by-law much superior to the Provincial Act. We do not have the lack the enforcement of the Act and the by-law.

For many years restaurants have been the victims of unfair practices due to a lot of unfair competition. The better class restaurant owner has on many occasions have appeared before our council, and were always greeted by something was going to be done about same. To date we still are where we came with a bow (pass the buck). It seems that every time we approach the city on election, these matters come up and are always passed over for the next year, and year after year.

A few weeks ago council made the recommendation to clear the matter up. However the following week we have withdrawn again and so the old horse keeps on living year after year, and the health and safety of the citizens of Belleville go unnoticed, and the only time they are going to wind up in the hospital with ptomaine poisoning is a restaurant in one or other of the slingshot eating places, when through unfair competition, permit me to explain this in detail.

A few years back I opened up a restaurant which had been in operation for many years and I was forced, before opening, to have washroom facilities and sterilization equipment. However, slingshot places need not have these things, and they only have $29 for the city coffers.

After eating a meal, topped off with a smile, and given to another at the same time, I go to the washroom for a stir, or the peep of light through a dark cloud. It was unsanitary, with the towels and has often changed the entire day for one. It has even been known that towels have been used by some of one's life! Kindliness is always alive with warmth.

The hotel keeper is always sympathetic and understanding. People come out these days to eat in mind. Such a mind makes friends and influences them as well to do the good and right thing, for surely that will be the best for the safety and well-being of the welfare of this community.

The writer has appeared before council on numerous occasions and asked for a stricter enforcement of the present by-law.

Permit me to call attention regarding the Belleville General Hospital. I have been told that the city has outstanding accounts of fifty-two collectable, or partly. What is being done to overcome this? Last year, $50,000 was laid out by the taxpayers, which represented five mills of our taxation. I sincerely believe that the citizens of Belleville are entitled to have a financial statement on the hospital's affairs regarding cost and its operation.

I would suggest that the board employ its own capable collector instead of an agency which takes 33 per cent of every dollar it collects, and that it be audited each year through taxation.

Now that we again are going to be asked to vote on the by-law, the citizens should know how the funds are collected at the hospital, what is going to happen in the coming year? Surely the ratepayers are not going to overlook this matter.

May I commend our Health Inspector for the work he has done and keeping conditions as they now exist. Our Board of Health, as it is now, makes a recommendation on its finding, and council passes the buck about the matter. May I ask how many we have on our council to check conditions in the city, especially in back kitchens?

Of course, it stands to reason that our council has not the knowledge of how to run a restaurant or hotel themselves. They have more undertakings to look after than they can handle, so a Board that has authority to act when it finds unsanitary conditions. It has been noticeable recently in council that our Health Board has no power to act.

Trusting that the citizens of Belleville will not overlook the importance of a Health Board for a city the size of our fair city and the protection of their health, I remain, Yours for a Board of Health support, for your protection as well as that of others, and we all have them.

Personal Health Talks

Letter should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received, all can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address:

HOW TO STAY YOUNGER LONGER

When I was a boy on Chapel Street in Canadaigua there wasn't a family in town poorer pecuniarly than we nor better fed—with milk, butter, cheese, eggs, chicken, pork, potatoes and other vegetables, greens, fruit we grew in our own garden or on bits of ground we cultivated free of cost or on shares. Then we had nuts, too—no cracks, please — hickory nuts which we gathered in the fall, with or without the consent of the owners of the trees. And from satisfying hunger, we, the Bradys, knew no more about nutrition than anyone else, yet, appraising the way we lived by hindsight I am sure our nutritional condition was far better than that of most families today.

And why not? With all that fresh raw milk, eggs, garden fresh vegetables, greens, fresh fruit in season, old fashioned blackstrap molasses, dark-brown sugar, graham or near-whole-wheat flour which we could afford the refined so-called molasses, refined white flour or refined sugar. We lived on the real food; whereas most Americans today live on the fake food, worry along on a diet composed mainly of cheat-foods—refined white flour, refined sugar, refined sugar refinery by-product "molasses" and the like which furnish calories for quick spurts of energy but poor in vitamins and minerals which are the basis of sustaining vim.

Although the everyday diet of most Americans was a good deal better for health and vitality than it is today, the dictionary, but it is defined in the booklet "The Key" (a do-it-yourself self-addressed stamped envelope) in horse-and-buggy days, but today, the Rt. Hon. W. L. Q. of Americans it is today. You see, the only source of health information was the almanac and such excerpts of the same as the pitch-per quacks and nostrum vendors selected for bait. Not only that, but, good grief, even the few graduates in medical physiology seriously in school were wide of the mark. Take for example the notion, repeatedly cited here, that with advancing years the diet of an aged person are more brittle because too much "mineral matter" was taken. "Mineral matter." This, as we know, now, is wrong. The reason why the diets of old people are more liable to break than the diets of younger people is because that the old bones have been robbed of their calcium store to satisfy the more urgent daily requirements of the soft tissues of the organs, the glands of the body. Incidentally this depletion of the bones may (I say may, because it can't be proved, as yet) be on the daily intake of calcium and vitamin D, the vitamin being required to insure calcification and utilization of calcium.

How to keep younger longer? First, you must consume in one form or another not less than 1½ pints three glassfuls, of milk, fresh or sour, the equivalent as cheese, butter, cream, skim milk, buttermilk or yogurt. You harbour some obsession against milk as food and clinging to your obsession is more important than cultivating a good complexion, good looks, prolonged virile, vim and longevity, that's all right—after all this is a free country, isn't it?

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Mystery of Warts

Would like to tell you we removed large wart on my daughter's thumbnail by hand with castor oil and recommended in your column. (Mrs. O. E.)

Answer—Although a good many similar reports have been received—the wart or warts disappear after daily gentle rubbing with castor oil—who knows whether it is coincidence? Warts appear and disappear without known reason.

Hygiene for Girls

I am 18 and have not menstrated for the past 17 months. Am not ill, but feel rather tired, weak and cough some. (G. D.)

Answer—First you should have a thorough medical and intelligent examination. Send stamped self-addressed envelope and ask for pamphlet Hygiene for Girls and Health for Women.

Calcium for Headache

I took calcium and D for leg cramps and found relief in your pamphlet. Had suffered with the cramps several years. Took the calcium but within a week they stopped and did not recur. Also have taken it for relief from headaches which I have had over many years with only a few days attacks. (Mrs. O. E.)

Answer—Pamphlet Why Have Leg Cramps? sent stamped envelope (no clipping) If you inclose stamped self-addressed envelope.

THE WARM MIND

Ever met a man or woman, with whom you talked, only to feel that every word was just wasted? You've endeavored cold words from a cold mind. On the other hand, what a comfort to talk with one who has a warm, comforting, inspiring, and genial mind.

People who are kind, courteous, and considerate always have a warm mind, and it is said that always warms other minds. Salesmen with this sort of mind have their trade. A cold mind into a receptive mood—and left with an order.

When discouragement comes to one, or when sorrow strikes, we need a warm mind near to us, to give us comfort and hope. Warm minds are the distributors of love, and that love is what binds us far, far apart. Many a heart has burned with warmth by the presence of and has often changed the entire warmth.

Spring a time have I left an evening with a friend, aglow within, because of the warmth of his mind, and I said with a smile, feeling and spiritual substance. Many are not born with such a mind, but it can be cultivated. Hardship and struggle have often done it. It is a mind to which one can take pride at any rate!

ONE MINUTE NEWS ABOUT JOHNS-MANVILLE

TANKS HELPLESS WITHOUT PACKING

The terrifying tanks that roar into battle spitting fire from every angle would be helpless without efficient packings. Nor would planes, ships or trains transports operate. For practically every piece of machine that moves requires the packings that prevent leakage of steam, air, gasoline, oil, water or other liquids.

An infinite variety of packings and gaskets are required to meet the exacting demands of the modern machine age. And Johns-Manville is a chief supplier of a century's experience, Johns-Manville produces effective packings for every classification of service purpose.

Johns-Manville research is always at industry's service. If you require assistance with any packing problem write Johns-Manville, 199 Bay St., Toronto, or, see your J-M distributor.

Contact Club Tea and Bazaar Featured by Artistic Booths And Delightful Homecooking

Leaden skies and swirling rain failed to dampen the ardor of the many who thronged the tea and bazaar in Christ Church parish hall, yesterday afternoon, held under the auspices of Contact Club.

Receiving at the door were Mrs. J. B. Creegan and the president, Mrs. S. T. Halbert, who graciously welcomed their guests into an atmosphere redolent of Christmas, for wherever the eye chanced to roam, could be seen the yuletide trappings. In between the heavy, dark green curtains at the east, glowing with prismatic lights and silver tinsel, was the Christmas tree, while round-about the pillars, wound branches of cedar, and yards of silver.

Christmas Spirit

From the green railing above hung an illumined holly wreath, and peeping in and out between the rails, were little boughs of evergreen, and here and there about the large room stood stately trees, seeming to guard the long, damask covered tea table with its centrepiece of silver grapes tied with a generous bow of poinsettia-red ribbon, and flanked by silver candelabra with tall tapers of red and green. Down either side of the room were tables with their evergreen sprigs as centrepieces.

Presiding at the silver services were, Mrs. K. Hickey, Mrs. A. Simpson, Mrs. Smith, and Mrs. G G. Wright. Those who served, Mrs. J. L. Hall, Mrs. Ross Burr, Mrs. R. Stewart, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. C. Colling, Mrs. A. Amos, Mrs. Ralph Pascoe, Mrs. L. Hall, Mrs. W. Mills, and Mrs. W. Jackson.

Upstairs were the various booths of the bazaar and the homecooking table. The first booth to be visited was that where the various wares of all sorts, colors, sizes, and designs could be purchased. The table was full of them, and the wall behind. Like other booths, the "mother-daughter" aprons were in evidence, as well as the little girl-doll aprons. Some were fluted from dotted dimity with organdy frills, some were of sprigged prints, and others of chambray. All so pretty and 'chic' it was hard to choose. Mrs. R. Joyce and Mrs. G. Scott were in charge here.

Fine Knit Articles

Next to the apron booth was that of the knit goods. A booth loaded down with all manner of fine articles, little pink sacques for the wee babe, tiny booties in yellow, pink, blue and white; hoods; harem slippers with big pom-pom rosettes in green and yellow; men's socks in diamond pattern; knitting bags; cozy quilts lined the wall behind, and then there were the cuddly animals all so cute looking. Peter Rabbit dressed in red with a belt having a tinkling silver bell, and other Peter Rabbits in grey and black with pink ears; Felix, the cat, was there with his shiny eyes and white whiskers, doll clothes in sets, and in single sets. Anything that could be desired for the little kings and queens in the home. Convening these were Mrs. W. G. Simmons, Mrs. R. Clarke and Mrs. J. P. Gill. Both the apron and knitted goods booth were beautifully decorated with a crescent of evergreen bows, red bells and silver ropes.

Delightful Array

The homecooking booth was centred by a tiny Christmas tree white frosted, and skirted by ropes of red with pendant red bells, and displaying one of the most delightful arrays of cakes, pies, tarts, muffins, of all kinds and decorations, that was truly fit for a king. In charge here were, Mrs. H. Luttrell, Mrs. C. Shappee, Mrs. R. G Young.

In solitary state, upon a table all by itself, was a specially nice crib blanket, done in blue and white blocks, the blocks of white being embroidered with kittens, rabbits, ducks, Mary's little lamb and frisking poodles. This was in charge of Mrs. A. Matthews, and would go to the highest bidder.

A Thing of Beauty

The plant booth was a thing of beauty with its simulated Christmas tree plant shelf, all decorated with cascading silver ropes and lighted by red and blue and green and yellow bulbs. Here one might purchase any plant desired for there were cacti of many kinds, the antler cactus; peanut cactus; gardenia cactus; snake's tongue cactus; right and left wing begonias; pink and purple African violets; Jerusalem cherry plant; foliages of every hue, and the ever favorite, baby's tears, or Irish moss, and many others. The conveners here were, Mrs. E. Pugh; Mrs. F. Beebe.

Down stairs in one corner of the tea room, was a pretty booth known as the Post Office, done in garlands of red and silver, and having many mail boxes for the many who eagerly paid their postage due. Some contained tea towels, others doilies, and some cellophane bags for vegetables. All worth the required 25 cents, and several much more. Mrs. H. Rainbird was the convener of this.

The treasurer for the afternoon was Mrs. F. Brown.

Much credit is due to those who worked so tirelessly to make this tea and bazaar one of such daintiness and charm.

Ten Occupants Flee Apartments In London Fire

London, Ont., Nov. 17 (CP)—Damage estimated to run into several thousands of dollars was caused by a three-hour fire which left the interior of a downtown restaurant a twisted smoke-blackened shambles and forced occupants of 10 apartments to flee into the street early today.

Cause of the fire which gutted a Richmond Street cafe, has not yet been determined but it appeared to have started in the vicinity of a gas heater in the basement, Fire Chief Robert C. McRonald said.

The outbreak was discovered at 1.10 a.m. by city constables Fred Bruce while patrolling the downtown business block.

After summoning firemen, Constable Bruce returned to the apartments over the restaurant to assist occupants already roused by the dense clouds of smoke.

Firemen feared for a time that the flames might touch off an explosion if they reached the gas meters in the cellar. Firemen donned masks and made repeated attempts to fight their way into the cellar. Several firemen were nearly overcome and were forced to withdraw.

67 New Fascists Are Held in Italy After Bombings

Naples, Italy Nov. 17 (Reuters) — Sixty-seven "new Fascists" were held in jail today after two bomb attacks in Rome and a big demonstration in Naples yesterday.

Police seized 300 fascists when the bombs wrecked the Rome office of the Italian Republican party and the Socialist unity party, youngest of Italy's three socialist parties. They later released all but 30.

In Naples, where 10 persons including several police were injured, police arrested 37 of the hundreds of young fascists who demonstrated in the centre of the city. All were members of the Italian social movement which the government has threatened to outlaw as promoting a resurgence of Mussolini's fascism.

In Rome, the offices of the Republican and Centre Socialist parties were shattered by homemade wood-board bombs filled with explosive.

Police have linked the explosions with a series of attempts against the offices of right-wing and centre parties in Rome recently, which they believe to be part of an Italian social movement protest campaign against the threat to outlaw their party.

PREMONITION SAVES TWINS FROM DEATH

Premonition of disaster on the part of Mrs. Bernard Parkins saved the lives of Don and Jon MacSwan, three-year-old twins at Port Dalhousie, Ont. Mrs. Parkins noticing the twins were not playing with another child, ran to the Henley regatta canal and found both boys sinking below the surface of the water. Hit by Car, Shot and Buried, Dog Rouses Self Out of Grave

Chicago, Nov. 17 (AP) —Three weeks ago Brownie, a five-month old pet dog, was struck by an automobile, shot in the head and buried.

Brownie refused to become dispirited at his run of bad luck. He roused himself out of a shallow grave to prove it.

He's back at his home in suburban Calumet City looking and feeling considerably better than he was after his close brush with death.

Brownie strayed into the home of Albert Herman last September and was promptly adopted by Herman's four young children. He was hit by a car late last month.

Mrs. Herman, noting Brownie was suffering, decided to put the dog out of his misery. She asked a neighbor to shoot Brownie. He took the dog to a wooded area and fired one shot at the animal's head. Then he placed Brownie in a shallow grave.

The next day, Mrs. Herman said, Brownie showed up at her back door—winning. She rushed him to a veterinarian, who went to work with penicillin, splints and other equipment and soon had Brownie patched up. Several days later Brownie was back home.

The mercy bullet fired by the neighbor ricocheted off Brownie's thick but affectionate skull without inflicting serious injury.

Sent for Trial On Murder Count

Hamilton, Nov. 17— (CP) — Thomas Burnham, 38, of Beamsville, Ont., was committed today for trial on a charge of murder in the beating last Oct. 13, of 30-year-old Mrs. Bertha Stone.

The woman died three days later of brain injuries which police said were suffered in a fight with Burnham in or near a taxi cab stand, Dr. W. J. Deadman, coroner, questioned by defence counsel as to whether Mrs. Stone's injuries might have been accidental, said: "Conceivably yes."

Police said Mrs. Stone was fatally injured when no driver was at the taxi stand. Several witnesses told of seeing a man and woman arguing prior to the alleged assault.

One of these witnesses was Patricia, 12-year-old daughter of Mrs. Stone. She said her mother and Burnham lived together a year about three years ago.

Admits Killing Ten, Gets Life In West Germany

Brunswick, Germany, Nov. 17 —AP—A German court today sentenced husky Rudolph Pfeil, who said he killed nine women and a man to obtain "sexual satisfaction," to a life term in prison.

There is no death penalty in West Germany.

The 28-year-old former blacksmith was brought to trial on the multiple murder charges after confessing while serving a 12-year-term for killing a German business man.

Pfeil's two accomplices, Karl Hoffman and Konrad Schuessler, also were sentenced to life terms.

Pfeil, who boasted that he will "kill again, this time I won't spare the children and old ones," told the court he had obtained sexual satisfaction when he killed a Russian soldier while serving as a policeman in the Russian zone.

From that time on, he said in lengthy statements written while in jail, he killed for that purpose.

His detailed confession, written under the title "Mein Kampf" (My Fight), he told of bludgeon-, knife-, strangling- and rape perpetrated by the brood-shoulder-ed moon-faced German.

Pfeil, who calls himself "the Totmacher" (Death Maker), received the verdict without change of ing expression.

His attorney, he said, is to become known as Germany's most famous murderer so that mothers will frighten their children in future generations with grisly stories about "Rudolph Pfeil the Totmacher."

Didn't Want to be Caught for Speeding

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 17 —(AP)—Police last night arrested a man for speeding after an 18-mile chase at speeds ranging around 100 miles an hour.

Police said W. C. Allen was overtaken only after a tire on his car blew out.

Officer Allen: "I just didn't want to get caught for speeding."

Safecrackers Set Off Siren Alarm During Break-in

Whitby, Nov. 17—(CP)—Safe-crackers fled empty-handed from the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Brooklin, six miles north of here, when they inadvertently set off a siren, during a break-in last night.

It was the fourth time in five years that thieves have tried unsuccessfully to rob the Brooklin bank.

Two villagers whose home is about 100 yards from the bank said they heard the siren but did not notify police because "it goes off every time the lights flicker and there have been so many false alarms that nobody pays any attention any more."

An unidentified Uxbridge man returning from work in Oshawa about 4 a.m. noticed a back door open and called police.

NOTICE TO HOUSEHOLDERS!!

DO YOU WANT 20c MILK?

As most of you know milk has advanced from 1c to 2c per quart in most Ontario markets these past few weeks.

The Belleville milk distributors are doing their best to keep the price from advancing and we don't think you appreciate our efforts. We are losing hundreds of bottles every week. Most of them are going into the garbage pail. Unless you co-operate and see that all bottles are returned to the dairies daily we will have no alternative other than to advance the price per quart, as these bottles cost the dairies 12c each in carload lots.

LET'S GET THESE BOTTLES WORKING AGAIN AND KEEP THE PRICE DOWN.

Shavian Play Given Fine Interpretation by B.C.I. Club In Collegiate Auditorium

By JACK BROWN

"A group of students with little or no experience have produced from amateur standing to veteran in the short three acts of George Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man." They gave a responsive audience a good show once they settled down and walked away with the Shavian humor.

The play was the annual production of the Belleville Collegiate Dramatic Club, and the choice this year was a fortunate one. It allowed the players to range from heavy drama to straight farce, and the school kids took advantage of both ends of the emotional scale.

The first act was a little rough, which was a natural thing, due probably to two things. In the first place, with the Broadway leading lights have first-night jitters, and the cast last night was no exception. In the second place, the ignorance of some of the audience threw them a little off their stride. Latecomers persisted in finding their own seats in the dark or whispering to each other, thereby spoiling the play both for the cast and the rest of the audience.

Few Cues Fluffed

As a result, a few cues were fluffed at the start, and the audience was distracted. By the middle of the act, however, everything was rolling smoothly. The players had regained their confidence, and the necessary levity started to come forth.

Mainstay of the cast when the going was rough, and the boy who made an outstanding first stage experience at all, was at his best with the humor dialogue. As the fugitive from the Bulgarian army, Howard got better and better as the night wore on and seemed to take the rest of the cast with him. His first act habit of turning away from the audience disappeared in the second and third acts, and although small in stature, he carried off his part very well.

Eva Hrachovec, as Raina, suffered from the same maladies as Howard, and overcame them to about the same extent. Her greatest fault is dropping her voice just when the audience expects her to boom out her lines, but she too kept getting better. Her sarcasm for an enemy failed her in the first act was well done and on the whole, her portrayal of a spoiled child was more than adequate.

Never Easy to Interpret

Shaw is never easy to interpret for an audience, but Miss Hrachovec did a very creditable job as a high-strung young lady who has always been treated too well. Her acting calls only for other person on stage was worthwhile but when the stage was well filled, she seemed to put much more into her part. Perhaps competition was doing her good.

A beautiful piece of work was done by Jarka Novak, as Louka, the maid. She too had her troubles in the first act, and failed to get some of her lines to the back of the hall. During the latter part of the play, however, she acted out excellently as the servant who had a mind of her own, determined to use it. She ranged from a sheer flirt to ingenue, and was in complete control at all times.

A Masterpiece

Louka's intrigue with Sergius Saranoff, Raina's betrothed, was a masterpiece, due both to Miss Novak and Bob Langlois, who took the part of Saranoff. Langlois' stuttering, let's who completely took charge of the stage when he was on it, played his part to a fine polish, and the audience was with him all the way.

Langlois strode on the stage in the second act, and immediately the vehicle began moving at a much faster and more pleasant pace. He took over in leading the cast where Jay Howard left off in the first act. His portrayal of a conceited pup, who had won honor on the battlefield by sheer stupidity and luck was the brightest piece of acting last night. He was alternately pompous and inane, as the part required and, in all, he did a wonderful job.

Both Take Parts Well

Bruce Smith and Marg Walkden, who played the father and mother of Raina, suffered merely because their roles were overshadowed by the others in acting. Both took their parts well, and Smith made certain that his part was done well put across. Miss Walkom suffered from a nervous start at first, but overcame it nicely later on.

Billy Cook, as Nicola, the manservant who had alternately engaged to and separated from Louka, provided the comic relief with his duck-walk and a recalcitrant lock of hair. His nicely-timed entrances and exits did much to liven up the proceedings. Bob Dutton, as the Russian officer, and Warner Finnegan and Bob McPartlin, as soldiers, were adequate.

Musical Program

In the intermission between acts one and two, Joan Shadlock and Ron Elmy, accompanied by Linton Read on the organ, sang "My Hero." They were very well received, as were the collegiate band, under the direction of Al-Cooper.

The sets designed by Arthur Shadlock and the Art Club were very good, especially for the second act. Others working behind the scenes were Carol Wishart, Margaret Benn and Margaret Trumpley, makeup; Gladys Anderson, Jean Puig and Phyllis Walmsley, properties; Bill Wesley, stage manager; Bill Shadlock, electrician; business manager, Janet Robertson; assistant h.m., Marcia Blathwick. The music at intermissions was directed by Messrs. Templer and Cooper, and ushering was done by the Keyette Club and the Girls' Hi-V.

Mr. Charles Sloan, of the collegiate staff ably directed the play, and said after last night's performance that he was very pleased. The play continues tonight.

The leaders displayed samples of dresser scarfs and contrasting colors for bedspreads. The girls were shown how to make a mitered corner. When the meeting was adjourned refreshments were served.

Holloway United Church W.A. Christmas Tea and Bazaar One of Charm and Color

The annual Christmas bazaar and tea sponsored by the Women's Association of Holloway Street United Church was officially opened Wednesday afternoon by the pastor, the Reverend Sidney E. Larman, B. Th. who extended congratulations to the convener, Mrs. A. Campbell, and her co-convener, Mrs. Cutting-dyke, and their assistant, Mrs. Larman, and to all those who had helped in the decorations which were so pleasingly attractive.

More Knitting

Mr. Larman suggested that a little more knitting of 'antimacassars'-(which are now called by the simpler name of 'chair sets') would do away with the attentions of the doctor for various nervous ills, as this occupation had kept our grandmothers on an even keel. He also hoped that the many guests and patrons had come with full purses, and that they would go away with empty ones, but with full arms. Mrs. Larman declared the bazaar and tea were declared officially opened, and when silence had reigned but a moment before, there was now a babel of tongues, as the throng of purchasers hovered around the various booths.

As one approached the outside entrance, the theme of the bazaar was plainly visible in two miniature Christmas trees which flanked the door, and which theme was continued as one entered, by the baskets of plump pines which nestled in every window, and in the colorful decorations of the several booths. These had their places of eminence in the little rooms opening off and surrounding the tea room, which was designated by rows of chairs forming a quadrangle. Above ran a wide valance of rainbow-hued fringe, looking for all the world like the colorful curtain aurorsboreails, or 'northern lights.'

Lovely Tea Table

In the centre of this quadrangle was the long, tea table, with its grape-design, Scotch lace cloth, centered by a gorgeous bouquet of baby 'mums, in rows of gold, bronze, mauve and yellow, accented by the oblate, waxy-like leaf of British Columbia bucklebury; while around the base of the pyramid was a circle of lighted tapers in shallow holders in colors of rose, green, white, mauve and yellow, the whole forming a striking picture of loveliness. Outside the quadrangle of chairs, were potted chrysanthemums of yellow and bronze in tall pedestals, placed at strategic points.

Receiving at the tea room were: Mrs. Pierce and Mrs. Downing; while those who poured were: Mrs. Posts, Mrs. Hilchon, Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Moynes. Those who served: Mrs. L. Van Osten, Mrs. G. Ackerman, Mrs. Simpson, Miss Hazel Smith, Mrs. Black, Mrs. Chaplin, Mrs. Shaw, Mrs. Harwood, Mrs. Oliphant, Mrs. McNish, Mrs. Dellies, Mrs. D. Cook, Mrs. F. Shorey, Mrs. G. Lee, Mrs. Craig, Mrs. D. White and Mrs. Orans.

Those who replenished the often emptied plates of dainty sandwiches and petit fours were: Mrs. Ethel Rickett, Mrs. W. Phillips, Mrs. McMurray, Mrs. Cavers, Mrs. Makepiece, Mrs. Canning, Mrs. Rayfield, Mrs. Doig, Mr., J. Beal, Mrs. Bawden, Mrs. L. Oliphant and Mrs. J. Benson. Delectable Fare

The homecooking booth was resplendent with the decorative balloons in pink, yellow and blue, plates of ruby-red apples, and delicious cakes and tarts, and many other varieties, all dainty and appetizing. This was under the convenership of Mrs. Chinney and Mrs. Weniger, with assistants, Mrs. T. Keleson, Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Pierson, Mrs. J. P. Clapp and Mrs. W. Jones.

The country store with its abundance of food-stuffs did a fine business in disposing of potatoes, cabbages, beets, turnips, canned goods, jellies, Camay, 'the soap for beautiful women, onions, parsnips, sugared popcorn, peanut brittle, eggs, carrots, and biscuit mix. In charge of this nicely decorated booth with its balloon cats, sprays of Bittersweet, were: Mrs. Ferguson, Mrs. Anderson, Miss Beth Robertson and Mrs. M. B. Weese.

The knitted goods booth with its brown, beige and gold decorations was a hive of activity conveyed by Mrs. Robertson, Mrs. Burrows, Mrs. Livesey and Mrs. F. Wilson. Here one might purchase both knitted and crocheted articles, including dollies, chair sets, (antimacassars), a lovely blouse done in coral knit wool; baby sets in pink and blue and white, tiny soldiers in yellow; little toques in green, mitts of all colors, bedroom slippers and baby bonnets.

Lovely Pillow Slips

The fancy sewing included lovely pillow slips having both crocheted lace edges and knit. Some were embroidered along with the crocheted edge, with blue birds of happiness among pink wild roses. All were well done, and just right for that special person. Mrs. R. G. Bell, Mrs. D. Fraser, Mrs. J. Grills and Mrs. C. Holmes were in charge here.

The gift and novelty booth had the showing of many nice articles. A pretty tea cosey in blue and white, fancy aprons, pot holders, and dolls dresses, as well as dressed dolls. This was in charge of Mrs. McMillan, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Denyes, Mrs. Wagg and Mrs. Poller.

The candy booth was a picture with its green and white decorations and golden butterflies hanging from the upright posts, and hovering over the dainty baskets of sweeties. There were flower-like cups holding creams, fudge, chocolates and other 'ill-bits,' all good, and enticing. Mrs. Townson, assisted by the Misses Betra Fairman, Dorothy Craighead and Mrs. Hamilton, were kept busy packaging and making change.

Throngs of Buyers

The apron booth, convened by Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. Sickle were three busy store-keepers, for the throng of buyers never slackened in their search for dainty aprons, heavy duty aprons, bib aprons, mother and daughter aprons, little girl aprons with those for the wee dollie, as well as those of the early morning variety. All were made carefully, and were of good material, colorful and pretty, just the thing for that extra gift at Christmas.

Those who received at the door were, Mrs. A. Campbell, president of the Women's Association, Mrs. Cuttingdyke and Mrs. S. E. Larman, wife of the pastor. The collection for the afternoon were Mrs. Moorman, Mrs. Symons, Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Regenstreif.

A charming tea, and colorful bazaar, pleasingly convened.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Going steady has its drawbacks

"Going steady" is lots of fun. There's nothing pleasanter than to feel that there's someone with whom and come first; someone who'll be waiting for you every day, so that you never have to wonder where your next date is coming from.

On the other hand, going too steady can have its drawbacks. When a boy and girl are going together so busily that they exclude all other friends, there are many disadvantages. While the concentrated friendship lasts, neither of them will believe it, but the day almost certainly comes when one tires of the other or both of them become irked at being tied down to one person.

Here, for example, is the sort of thing that usually happens:

I am a girl of 18 and have been going with a boy for nearly three years. We made the mistake of meeting each other every night, and now he tells me that he wants to run around with other boys and girls, although he says he still loves me and I believe him. Please don't tell me ours is the puppy love, because I have gone out with other boys and all I think of is him."

Just what the girl who wrote me this letter wants me to tell her, she doesn't say. I assume she wants to keep on loving this boy every night and wants to know how she can cope with his desire to have things otherwise.

Since she realizes herself, and admits, that it is less a mistake for them to see each other every night, her best bet now would seem to be to see each other less. That would mean, of course, that she would be willing to have the boy see other friends on nights when he was not with her, and she has said she hasn't. She also has tried going out with other boys, but keeps on thinking of the one she went with exclusively for so long.

Well, all right it won't hurt her if she does keep thinking about him for a while when she's out with others. If she gives herself half a chance, she'll soon find that it really is possible to enjoy other friends, too, and this is as it should be.

Moreover, the best way for both herself and the boy friend to find out how much they really do care for each other is to be apart some of the time. For then, they'll both of their devotion has real meaning to it and come together again, or they'll gradually drift apart and each will become interested in someone else. Either way the whole thing will solve itself.

All this is what I would say, too, to the 15-year-old girl who is sensible enough to be considering the same question herself—either she or her boy friend has shown signs of wanting to break up. She writes me:

"Because my boy friend, with whom I have been going for seven months, comes to see me almost every night, my parents think that we won't be going together very much longer. They say we are going to get tired of each other.

"Do you think I should tell this boy in a nice way not to come over as much as he has been doing? I like him very much and don't want to break off with him."

If this teen-ager is reading this column today, she will understand that I think she would be very smart to tell the boy exactly that, and let them both be free to see other friends if they wish. Contrary to what all teen-agers seem to think, it's a lot easier to tell how much you like a person when you're not seeing him—or her—from morning to night.

Fashion Flashes

RETURNING to favor is the cost fitted on princess lines, especially nice in velvet for dress-up wear. A handsome, full-length model has sleeves that are full above the elbow, tapering to the wrist. The skirt has bias-flared fullness. A big, curved, upstanding collar stands sway to hold a white ermine cravat.

EASY CHARM for informal evenings may be had with a dress skirt and a pretty blouse. White crepe for a pretty blouse brightened with a long, narrow insert of lace encrusted with pearls and rhinestones, and set between panels of bcc flat plaits.

NOTHING DULL about this season's casual hats. Bright orange matador hat has a brimmed casual with creased crown, trimmed with a band of gold bullion and pearls, and stabbed with pheasant quills.

GOING BIG is the small, easy-to-wear hat, and one of the most popular hats is the profile half-cloche, usually in velvet, the low ends curved and accented by a rhinestone pin.

'Bandbox' Look Worth Achieving

Every dress in your closet should be ready to wear at any time if you want to be well-groomed, says Screen Star Janis Carter. Avoid last-minute mending.

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO not fancy that the attractive quality of daintiness, that we so admire in a woman, is a gift of the gods, given to some, withheld from less fortunate ones. It is something that is cultivated by careful grooming, by fastidious attention to one's clothes, doing one's beauty duties without fail. It is the result of organization and considerable thought.

Its basic need is cleanliness developed to the Nth degree. The girl who would rather miss her daily meals than her bath carries a fresh look that nothing else but soap and water and vigorous scrubbing will give her. By scouring her skin all over her svelte anatomy she is giving her complexion a daily treatment because the skin is an organ of elimination, must function normally. Never does she fail to use a deterrent or deodorizer.

Never Forgets

She never forgets that a stitch in time saves nine, so watches from stray shafts.

her wardrobe carefully. She can take any frock from her clothes closet, know that it is in perfect condition. That means that she doesn't have to do any frantic mending when hurrying to get ready for the big date.

With her, cleanliness is "must". She has several hair brushes and combs, washes them carefully. She buys powder puffs by the dozen so she never has to use a soiled one, and she keeps them in a glass jar so dust cannot touch them.

She rinses her toothbrushes carefully after using them. Dentists stress the need of this practice as bacteria can cling to molar bristles. Germs, germesses and little germlets are a menace to mouth pearls.

Her stocking seams are always straight, hats are brushed. When dressed she wouldn't think of arranging her hair without some fabric protecting her shoulders from stray shafts.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

When relatives make "give" gestures only

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Most of my husband's relatives are delightful and friendly people and he and I see them quite frequently and thoroughly enjoy the get-togethers. But there is one family of close relatives who never come to see us, never invite us to come to see them, and indeed never pay any attention to us except when there is a "gimme" idea in the invitation or contact. For example, when there is to be a shower given for one of the several daughters in the family, or a wedding reception for a son or daughter, or the buying of tickets for some group or organization in which they are interested. My husband and I do not want to do anything we'd regret, but we would like your advice as to what is proper.

Grateful Readers

In the lives of most of us there are, alas, such families— very often relatives, very often in-laws, occasionally even acquaintances! The only response to these blatant and persistent gestures-for-handouts that makes sense is for you and your husband to do as you feel inclined. However, even if you prefer not to give gifts, you should respond courteously to the invitation — you shouldn't just disregard any invitation or other gesture from them. In response to a formal invitation, write a formal regret, for an informal invitation write a note of regret . . . this will imply that you are sending a present, say a shower present or a wedding present. And if you don't want to subscribe to tickets they send, just courteously return the tickets, politely thanking the sender and explaining that your budget is assigned to the service of the organizations in which you have responsibilities.

Which Initial?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'm a teenage girl. I'm planning to give several girl friends of mine each a box of note-paper or a handkerchief for Christmas. If the paper is stamped with only one initial and the handkerchiefs are marked with only one initial, should I choose the initial of my girl's first name or last name?

Eve B.

Choose the initial of the girl's first name.

Practical at home cards to enclose with announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are to be married here quite soon, and then we are going immediately to live in the new house we have bought and furnished in a town some distance from here. We are to have a small, informal wedding at my home, so will have no engraved invitations. But since we both have many relatives and friends who live in various parts of Canada and the States, we would like to send formal wedding announcements. And, to inform our friends of our new home address, we would like to enclose At Home cards in the announcements. Correct? What form would you suggest as most practical? Do we give the date after which we will be "at home"?

Myra D.

Yes, it's correct, and most convenient, to send At Home cards enclosed with your marriage announcements. Since they will be mailed after the ceremony has been performed, they would carry your married name. And since you and the bridegroom will be "at home" immediately after your marriage, it is not necessary to specify any date, such as "After December first", etc., suggest the following form (very practical, because the plate can be used for your Mr. and Mrs." cards, with your address):

Mr. and Mrs. John Paul Davis
The Thomas Street
Pleasant City
Connecticut

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking?

Fresh air is the enemy of fish. The instant fish is removed from the water it begins deteriorating. Its flavor is preserved for a short time only if it is covered with ice. In France fish are sometimes imbedded in a solid block of ice before being sent to the market.

From England comes the announcement of a new lightweight aluminum container for shipping fresh fish. The fish isn't "canned" in the usual sense but is merely protected by the light metal which is airtight and which reflects rather than absorbs heat. The fish is treated first with a mild solution to destroy surface germs and then spotted to the fish in their dark aluminum compartment.

When baking fish flavor is best retained if the pan or pot is tightly covered.

Fish wrapped and baked in parchment paper is a New Orleans specialty. Usually the fish is spread with a small amount of sauce before being baked. It may be wrapped in greased manila paper, in aluminum foil or in a vegetable parchment or bags. In either case the paper should be sealed as tightly as possible. The sauce should be thick since the juice of the fish will thin it somewhat during baking.

Lake Trout in Paper Case
Serves 4.

1 1-2 lbs. lake trout filets
1-2 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
2 tablespoons dry white wine
Salt and pepper

Wash lake trout filets. In a heavy paper bag put the flour, 1 teaspoon salt and paprika. Shake bag well to coat fish. Remove fish from bag. Pat off excess flour.

Melt vegetable shortening to a depth of 1-2 inch in a heavy frying pan. Brown fish lightly on each side. Do not cook through.

In a saucepan melt 2 tablespoons shortening. Add the onion and mushrooms Saute until mushrooms are tender, about 10 minutes Remove pan from flame.

Sprinkle 2 tablespoons flour over vegetables Gradually add hot milk, stirring well. Return to a small flame and simmer 5 minutes. Add parsley, white wine and salt and pepper to taste.

Put each filet on a piece of greased vegetable parchment paper about 10 by 15 inches. Spoon sauce over fish. Fold up paper, reinforcing fish. Fold edges of paper to seal.

Put on a baking pan. Bake in a moderate oven 375 degrees, 20 to 30 minutes. Serve fish on paper, slit crosswise.

Vegetable shortening
1-4 cup finely chopped onion
4 large fresh mushrooms sliced
2 tablespoons flour
1-2 cup hot milk

STRUCK BY TRAIN

Ottawa, Nov. 16—(CP)—James Lee, 23, of Chelsea, Que., was seriously injured last night when his automobile was struck by a Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train at a level crossing at Ottawa west.

He was taken to hospital where he was found to be suffering undetermined internal injuries and multiple fractures of both legs and severe shock.

BEAUTY

Safeguarding the child's beauty.

Time was when a little girl's interest in her appearance was shapped down, regarded as a sign of vanity. Now the wise mother endeavors to direct little daughter along the right beauty road. She not only takes fastidious care of the child's health, but keeps an eye on her habits and conduct. Personality is in the making even at the age of three or four.

Frequent medical check ups, examinations of the teeth and eyes, tests for hearing and consideration of posture are going forward off beauty grievances of the future. Postural defects, discovered early, are easily corrected unless they are due to illness. The feet are given the once-over and special shoes are prescribed if they are not normal. Skin troubles that come later on should have professional attention.

The wise mother will encourage fastidious cleanliness on the part of the child—she grins in good appearance. If the mother tells her she looks sweet and pretty after she has washed her face and combed her hair it will prove a better method than scolding her for neglect.

Tell the little girl that the daily bath is of cosmetic value, that it will give her rosy cheeks and a lovely skin, and there will be no protest when the scrubbing begins.

To keep the scalp in a healthy condition and to encourage a luxuriant growth of tresses, there should be a weekly shampoo. A mild agent should be used. A shampoo habit will keep the soap away from baby's eyes. Some kids hate this ritual, make a big fuss. The way to get around that is to make a game of it. A smart mother tells me that she plays barber shop and that the child's head gets scrubbed before she is aware of what is going on.

The child should have a say-so about the arrangement of her hair. She "simply must" look like the other kids. If she doesn't, she will feel like a social outcast.

Keeping fingernails clean is important, since the eaves are convenient lodging places for bacteria. A little girl five or six years old can be taught to shape her nails with an emery board, to clean the eaves with orange-wood stick, and she usually enjoys doing it. Nail biting must be discouraged. It is often caused by roughness of the nail eaves.

One way to overcome shyness and self-consciousness is to encourage a talent, if the child has one. It may create poise and confidence.

BANCROFT

Uniform Level in Two Lakes Assured by Repairs on Dam

Bancroft — A steady flow of water for the York River and a uniform level in Baptiste and Elephant Lakes is now assured with the completion of the dam repair and reinforcing job at High Falls. This week a crew of workmen completed the job of renewing the dam that was built in 1921.

If one had not seen the old dam in the spring or early summer, one would think that a new project had been completed. The two wings from the sluice-way have been lengthened and the entire superstructure has been resurfaced with concrete reinforced with steel.

It takes an expert to tell that a concrete facing that is two feet thick at the bottom and sloped to eight inches at the top covers the lower side as it looks like a new wall. Three piers three feet wide and seven feet long provide the extra strength to take care of any unusual spring floods.

The department of public works men in charge of the job have added two features, that will help minimize future repair bills. Loads of sand and fine gravel have been dumped just above the dam in order to lessen the pressure on the structure. Secondly, they have placed a heavy log boom a hundred feet up Baptiste Lake to stop driftwood and shifting ice.

Drop of 80 Feet

As there is a drop of 80 feet from Baptiste Lake to the York River in about 200 yards, a strong dam is required to both maintain the level in Baptiste Lake and Elephant Lake during the tourist season, and provide a reservoir of water for power during the remainder of the year. The connecting ditch-way is 24 feet wide with flanking arms of 90 feet and 170 feet. The dam is 24 feet high and the main section is 16 feet wide or more.

Ten men worked for three months to complete this job. Its cost was in the neighborhood of $8,000. This was one of the major conservation projects completed by the department of public works in Eastern Ontario this year. Work was carried out under the supervision of W. L. Rice of Toronto, chief engineer for the department of public works, and A. A. Boucher of Huntsville, district departmental construction engineer. The foreman, William L. Ellis of Bracebridge and Bancroft used mainly local labor and local materials where possible.

With this task completed, the crew of workmen move north to Algonquin Park to construct wooden dams on the headwaters of the Muskoka River. Here, the double task of maintaining the level of the park's many lakes, and providing for reserve water for the Muskoka area powerhouses is carried on during the winter months.

Fines Paid

Eleven people paid a total of $146 dollars in the semi-monthly Bancroft and district magistrate's court in Bancroft on Wednesday afternoon.

Robert Michel and Donald Selinas of Toronto, pleaded guilty to having liquor in a place other than a private residence and each paid fines of $15 and costs.

Donald Carter of Hollowsay and Ronald Sarginson of R.R. No. 2, Bancroft paid $10 and costs for careless driving.

For being found in a place where liquor was kept for sale, seven were found-ins each paid fines of $10 and costs.

Magistrate J. B. Garvin of Kingston presided and the crown was represented by S. G. Robertson, of Belleville, acting Crown Attorney for Hastings County.

PICTON

Clarence Milligan New President Conservatives

Picton— Hugh B. Lattimer, Toronto, speaker at the annual meeting of Prince Edward - Lennox Progressive Conservative Association here Wednesday night stated that there was a swing in sentiment to this party, and that Premier Frost enjoys the confidence of Conservatives and many Liberals. He referred to George Drew as a leader who has been right ten years ago in regards to the communist menace and later for his stand on the devaluation of the dollar. Mr. Lattimer stressed the need of organization.

Money for the armed forces must be found, but there must be economy in other directions, in order to restore taxation, declared T. W. Kinney.

Officers elected were: Clarence Milligan, president; Ronald Church, 1st vice - president; Ronald Jackson, second vice - president; Mrs. Gwen Trebell, 3rd vice - president; Kenneth Carson, 4th vice-president; Thomas Walker, secretary - treasurer; W. Higgs, assistant secretary.

CAMPBELLFORD

Santa Will Visit Town on Dec. 16

Campbellford— Arrangements are well under way for another Santa Claus parade in Campbellford again this year. Last year's parade was the largest and most successful ever conducted, and it is hoped that the parade this year will be just as colorful and successful.

Saturday Dec. 16th., is the day scheduled for Santa's visit, and if the weather is as favorable as it was last year, the event should be a huge success.

Of the three County Council Scholarships for Upper School students, two went to pupils of the Campbellford High School. The first of these went to Aldyth Arthur, who graduated with nine first-class honors, and the second went to Katie Moore, with six firsts, two seconds and one third.

The value of the scholarships is $100 and $60 respectively, with bursaries if the winner wishes to continue studies at a university.

FIRED SIX SHOTS

London, Nov. 17 (AP) —Raymond Emmett, 37, was charged today with firing six shots at another man outside a Soho restaurant where Princess Elizabeth was dining with friends.

Inspector A. J. Usher here bodyguard, rushed out and took part in the police chase after Emmett.

The man shot at was Charles Cozens, 29, who was walking with a girl. Three bullets went through his pants and three through his overcoat, but he was not wounded. Police gave no clue to the reason for the shooting.

OUR TOWN

CACTUS TRAIL

The travelling salesmen make it nicely in a day, since there's nothing worth stopping for in between, but a leisurely rate it's a two-day drive from San Antonio to El Paso, some 600 miles across the oven-baked plains of southern Texas.

You leave San Antonio in the early morning under a cool, silvery-blue sky. The car radio takes the happy, rippy-dippy sound of Mexican music. This will remain with you all the way. Highway 90 is never more than a few miles from the state of Coahuila and Chihuahua and the misty-blue sawtooth rim of the Sierra Madres.

High over the tan towers of San Antonio a jet plane is climbing up into the limitless blue of the sky. Its white vapor trail seems thinly out behind to leave a hundred-mile chalk mark in the blue.

In the country outside San Antonio the hawks are wheeling low in the morning hunt. One pursues a small, frantic bird directly across your path. The small bird makes a desperate, futile attempt to find safety in a thick grove of mesquite trees. It's a strangely violent scene on such a placid, peaceful morning. The hawk rises off with heavy wings into the sky.

The sun becomes more lively with each passing mile, the following more sparse. You stop for breakfast at a roadside inn a couple of dozen miles out of San Antonio. It is not yet ten o'clock, but four Texans are bellied up to the bar drinking beer. They have the look burned by the sun to a mahogany color, faded denim pants with a waistline just above the hip-bones. You wonder why no song-writer has penned a lament about the Texas sweetheart who was tall in the saddle but a half-pint on the ground.

When you return to the car the leather seats are burning to the touch. The heat has begun to shimer off the highway ahead. Cars approaching from the distance are wavering and distorted as if seen under water.

An Oasis

A large sign on the outskirts of one dry, sun-drenched hamlet, very Mexican in appearance, proclaims: "This is God's country. Don't drive through it like hell."

The temptation is to do just that. The magnificent highway unrolls like a carpet, stringstraight as far ahead as you can see across the dust-brown, grey-green landscape. You simply point the car and hang on, one eye on the scenery the other on the temperature gauge. As on other lonely roads, you raise a hand in greeting at each passerby.

By mid-afternoon you are a blob of heat. Outside the town of Del Rio you pull in by one of the many roadside parks maintained by the Texas highway department. Here is a strange sprung to life. A crystal blue stream, chest-high, slips through a small green park. Emerald bass swim about the pebble bottom. You ease into the stream and let is put out the fire. Then you launch under pecans on tables made of smooth concrete with a coolness that Mexican craftsmen seem to build into their masonry.

Then, reluctantly, back to the car and on the road again and the highway unrolls beneath your blistering tires through the afternoon.

You decide to spend the night at a sleepy little burg called Sanderson. After a dinner of chile concarne you sit in lawn chairs and watch the fierce sunset and the Texas night taking shape. The Texas who wrote that line, "The stars at night are big and bright" was not exaggerating. This is an incredible show and when the giant canary-colored moon comes up over the velvet black hills (silenty timed to Mozart's Symphoney in D Major from New York) you feel as if you could poke your head up among the stars.

The breeze now turns cool. You will need a sweater to sit outside. There is no sound in the night but the movement of the breeze through the stunted bush and the faraway horn of a Southern Pacific express cutting through the night. It should be a mournful whistle, of course, and not that ugly, new-fangled klaxon, but you can't have everything.

With Color

Again the lovely, bracing morning and the open road once more. Travellers who make this trip regularly complain bitterly that it is sheer monotony, but on this first and only passing you see beauty on every side.

Rolling east to El Paso (annual rainfall: six inches) you see beauty on every side.

Rolling east to El Paso (annual rainfall. six inches) you see the ceramic mountains ahead, some like sugar loaves, some like a child's sand-castles, sandy green, serrated and with a mere fuzz of foliage.

With each mound your car tops, immense new valleys open up, some with small towns roasting far off under the naked sun. Alongside run the fences of immense cattle ranches, the cactus, like thorny green mittens holding their palms up to the sun.

Your car hums across bridges over dried-up creeks and rivers and the twisted arroyos. The metal blades of the wind-mills turn slowly in the hot wind. Occasional bursts of burnt sienna dust dance a dervish across the desert. Noon comes and you see a Mexican work gang on the railway in siesta, looking as if they had been felled where they stood by some strange disease. The sun glints on the beer cans that line the old Spanish trail.

Color takes on a new meaning against this soft, bleached landscape. The bright cobalt shirt of a cowboy riding a palomino bonelessly across the mesa, the solid fire-engine red of a trans-continental truck, the faded blue of the denims worn in the railway gangs, the cotton bolls of the green fields in the irrigated land near El Paso, every color that is foreign to this land stands out brilliantly.

And so, at dusk, with the sky flaming across the Rio Grande you come into El Paso and begin to think about doing it all over again across New Mexico and Arizona.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was watching pop smoking to himself his private check, and I said, Hey pop, supposing found a dime but I couldn't find the owner. Would it be legally mine by rites? I said.

Before we delve any deeper into the academic aspects of the matter, let me assure you that any dime you've happened to find in this house belongs either to me or to your mother, pop said, and I said, G, pop, I wasn't even thinking of that house, I was thinking of out in the street at least a block away.

That's different, pop said. The street is the public domain, and the public is large and ever changing. Furthermore, there are millions of dimes in circulation, all with a strong family relationship as far as appearance goes. Ruffly speaking, the chances are several thousands to one that a dime picked up in the street could be successfully traced to its loser, he said, and I said, Well then gosh, do you meen I could keep it according to law and according to rites?

Well yes, if the situation contains no unusual complication, pop said, and I said, Well, there's one unusual kind of a complication, I saw the man trying to find it after he dropped it, but he got disgusted looking for it and went away, I said.

Do you know the man? pop said, and I said, No sir, I never saw him before and I'm never libel to see him again. But he had a nervius habit of twisting his nose, so I know I'd reckonize him just in case I do see him, I said.

You'd better put the dime in escrow for a while, pop said. In other words keep it safely in your pockit for about a week, and if the nose twister belongs in the nay-bourhood, he may show up again, he said, and I said, Well fimminies, pop, I haven't actually found it yet, but I look for luck at least once a day.

Not being quite the end of the subject.

Second of Triplets Dies, Mother Unable to Buy Coffin, Builds Tiny One Herself

Blind River, Ont., Nov. 17 (CP)—Two of the triplets born last May to Mrs. Phillip Lacourse are dead, and the 31-year-old mother, unable to buy a coffin for the second one, buried the baby in one, she made herself.

The pitiful story of the mother, whose husband was out of town and unemployed until last week, came to light yesterday in this northern Ontario community.

The triplets were born May 3. Lack of proper heating in their small frame home on the town's outskirts led to whooping cough.

Maxine, one of the triplets, succumbed to pneumonia Oct. 27. Barbara Ann died the same way last Monday.

Now Edward, the last surviving triplet, is ill.

When Maxine died, Mrs. Lacourse gathered $18 for a coffin. But she had no money when Barbara Ann died; she made a tiny coffin herself out of rough wood.

Freed on Charge, Resigns, is Fired

Washington, Nov. 17 — (AP)— Michael V. Lee, Commerce Department official, yesterday was cleared of disloyalty charges by his boss, and within minutes resigned and was fired from his $10,750-a-year job.

Informed of the discharge order issued by Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer, Lee's lawyer commented:

"How dirty can you get?"

The sequence of resignation and ouster came almost simultaneously, climaxed a bitter case involving charges of disloyalty against Lee.

Lee, 43, Harvard man — born son of Russian parents, was chief of the Commerce Department's Far Eastern (Asiatic) trade branch.

Sawyer announced he has cleared Lee of disloyalty charges but had ordered his dismissal "on the ground of security and the best interests of the United States."

The resignation and ouster broke almost at the same time, apparently by coincidence, with neither Sawyer nor Lee aware of the other's action.

Boa Constrictor Visits Barber Shop

Biloxi, Miss., Nov. 17. (AP) — Barber Anthony Taranto was cutting hair yesterday when he glanced up and saw a 7½-foot boa constrictor crawling in the front door.

The barber and his customer fled from the shop — while the snake slithered to the rest room.

They called Jack Adam of Gulfport, Miss., who captured the boa constrictor. Adam, handler of wild animals and reptiles, said it probably had escapd from some show in this area.

Accused Sent For Trial on Nine Charges

Peterborough, Ont., Nov. 17 — (CP) — Paul Imoling yesterday was committed for trial on nine charges arising from an alleged $100,000 used-car finance swindle. He pleaded innocent to five charges of forgery and four of false pretences.

Bail was set at $5,000.

Evidence was presented on only one charge of forgery.

Another man, said to have been a partner in the swindle, Aubrey E. Hancock, was present in court. Hancock is serving a three - year sentence, imposed May 4 when he pleaded guilty to forgery and false pretences.

At the time, police said money was obtained from finance companies in Toronto and Peterborough on automobile loans through the use of fictitious names.

205-Pound Clam Shell Missing

Seattle, Nov. 17 (AP)—For 35 years, a 205-pound clam shell almost the size of a bathtub—has been sitting in front of Ye Olde Curiosity Shop on the waterfront.

Joseph R. James, shop manager, told police today it's there no longer and someone must have walked off with it."

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—(CP)—Estate of the late Wolf Shenkman prominent Ottawa realtor, was valued at $333,979, it was disclosed yesterday.

Bulk of the estate goes to his three children — Samuel Shenkman, Joseph, Harold Shenkman and Mrs. Jaide M. Berwick, all of Ottawa. His widow will receive the income from $80,000 worth of life insurance.

BAD LUCK

Franklin, Pa., Nov. 17 (AP)—With luck like this, Desvard L. Russell, 36, of Glencoe, Ala., should give up driving. Police said he lost control of his car yesterday while passing the police station and sideswiped a truck belonging to the chief of police. Then Russell's car knocked a fender off a car belonging to a military policeman. Careening across the street, the Alabaman's auto finally brought up against another parked car — this one belonging to Russell's father.

ONLY TWENTY MILES TO REACH LAST U.N. OBJECTIVE

Slogging up a mountain road, just before slashing snowstorms slowed their progress, U.N. troops approach the vital Chongjin reservoir, main source of electrical power to northeastern Korea. Three power transmission stations on a hillside indicate to advancing troops they are not far from goal. Cold weather has slowed the U.N. armies now within 20 miles of the Manchurian border. The U.S. has announced it will not invade Manchuria. — Central Press Canadian.

38 Fellowships For Canadians For Study in U.K.

London, Nov. 17 — (Reuters)— A scheme for bringing more Canadian engineering students to Britain was announced yesterday.

Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, said its aim is to build up a greater awareness among Canadian engineers and buyers of Britain's engineering products.

Thirty-eight awards, to be known as "Athlone Fellowships," will be made to Canadian graduates each year for post-graduate training in Britain.

Some have been provisionally allocated to each engineering faculty in Canada for new graduates. Others will be reserved for graduates already employed in industry.

Training facilities will be provided at industrial establishments or academic centres. The awards will cover the cost of travel, maintenance and tuition fees.

Industrial firms and the government will share the cost of the scheme, which will start at the beginning of the 1951-52 academic year.

Two Giant Planes Collide in Flight 13 Airmen Killed

Tucson, Ariz., Nov. 17—(AP)— A collision in flight of two giant planes engaged in the United States air force's newest refuelling operations resulted yesterday in flaming death for 13 airmen.

Ten other parachuted to safety after the four-motored crafts smashed together 50 miles west of Tucson over the southern Arizona desert.

The planes, engaged in a routine refuelling operation, were seen to erupt in flames and plunge to the ground. The latter is believed to have exploded.

Some of the crew members jumped and might have reached the ground safely, but were apparently caught in a deluge of flaming gasoline that poured over the area.

None of the men reaching the ground after making a successful jump, was crushed to death by a piece of falling wreckage.

There were indications all of the men attempted to get out of the flaming craft.

Their blackened and smashed bodies, most of them wearing portions of parachutes, were scattered over a half-mile area around the crash scene. Bits of flaming debris were found as far away as a mile.

An air rescue team rushed to the scene found the dazed survivors.

'White Elephants' Good for Nothing Are in Demand

London, Nov. 17 (Reuters)— Wanted: Four machines, weird and wonderful but good for nothing; British-built to prove that Britain's line in eccentrics is the most eccentric in the world; for exhibition during next year's festival of Britain.

Laurie Lee, poet and one of the festival organizers, is searching for these white elephants of the workshop, because, he told a reporter, a tiny corner of the London festival exhibition will be devoted to "British fantasy."

"In the fine fantastic machines I want a whirl of cogs and wheels working full out—doing nothing."

Truman Assures Red China That U.S. Has No Intention Of Invading Manchuria

Washington, Nov. 17—AP—The State department radio today beamed into communist China president Truman's assurance that the United States has no intention of invading Manchuria, and will help protect China's interests along the Korean border.

Department officials, deeply concerned over the possibility that war will spread beyond Korea, privately expressed hope that communist China's leaders would consider the president's statement, issued at a press conference yesterday.

Truman said a professed belief that the U. N forces in Korea would carry the war into China was the "greatest" on which the Chinese communists intervened in Korea.

Insofar as the Chinese actually have such fears, the president's statement was designed to reassure them in the hope that they might then withdraw their troops and permit an early peace in Korea.

Normally such a declaration would be transmitted to another government through diplomatic channels. But the United States does not recognize the red regime at Peiping. Officials said the United States is relying on "Voice of America" broadcasts and on regular international channels of news to reach Peiping authorities.

Extremely Dangerous

The president's statement came a day after State Secretary Dean Acheson and Assistant Secretary Dean Rusk had offered similar assurances. They also warned that the situation growing out of Chinese intervention in Korea is extremely dangerous.

Acheson and Rusk made it clear that the U. S. does not know for certain what caused the Chinese communists to act as they have or what objectives they seek. If they are trying simply to protect their own territory and the Yalu River hydro-electric power installations or other so-called legitimate interests, the U. S. stands ready to negotiate a settlement through the United Nations.

On the other hand, if their purpose is to prevent a final U. N. victory in Korea, grave danger of a general war in Korea is seen here.

In his statement Truman pointedly noted that there now is before the U. N. security council a resolution which promises to protect legitimate Korean and Chinese interests in the frontier zone, to keep the Chinese frontier secure and to withdraw U. N. troops as soon as Korea is stabilized under a democratic government. On the other hand the resolution calls upon the Chinese to withdraw their forces immediately. The president said the U. S. fully supports this resolution.

Third World War Can be Avoided Beaverbrook Says

Toronto, Nov. 17 — (CP)—Lord Beaverbrook, Canadian-born publisher of the London Daily Express, said Thursday he believes a third world war can be avoided.

But, during a visit to Premier Frost's office, he recalled that he made a similar declaration prior to the outbreak of the Second World War.

He said he was amazed to see so small English-made automobiles on Toronto streets. Sales in Canada by English firms must be extremely satisfactory, he said, but he wished England herself would buy more goods from Canada.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON OF THE WEEK

The Lonely Worshipper

By ROY L. SMITH

It is a very remarkable thing that men should have wanted so desperately in behalf of the four freedoms, including Freedom of Worship, and that then we should neglect worship on such a wholesale basis. We have wasted billions of dollars in treasure if we do not take advantage of the privileges our sacrifices cost.

The Visions By Which Men Live

It is a common thing to hear men say that they can worship God just as well "out in the open spaces, or in the woods, as in a temple or church erected for worship purposes."

It is a fact, of course, that occasionally men do come upon a great idea, a profound concept, a transforming vision, while alone on some mountain, deep in the woods or beside a waterfall. But very few come back from a Sunday morning golf game to report a great vision of God which came to them while they were tramping over the links. Listen to the conversation in the club house after the game, and it suggests very little of God except perhaps occasional profanity.

On the other hand, the great visions which have come to men who have transformed the world have, in most cases, come to those who have been seeking God inside his temples.

The Sunday School lesson for November 19: "Christian Worship", Isaiah 1:11-17; Luke 4:16; John 4:19-24; Romans 12:1-8; 1 Corinthians 11:17-34; Colossians 3:16-17; Hebrews 10: 23-25.

Isaiah, the towering Hebrew prophet, who dedicated his life to preaching righteousness, justice, and moral integrity, caught his vision while in the Temple. It was as evil day in Hebrew history and he had gone to the holy house to enrich his soul and make sure of his foundations. What he saw that day transformed his life and made him one of the immortals.

True Worship

The Samaritans, a mongrel people, had a corrupt form of Hebrew faith. Between them and the Jews there was constant conflict and bitter feuds.

The shabby woman whom Jesus met at the well was anxious to divert him from any search of her soul by engaging him in the threadbare argument — was Mt. Gerazim (where the Samaritans contended) the proper place to worship or was it in the temple of Jerusalem (as the Jews declared it was)?

To this query, aimed at befogging the issue, Jesus made a simple answer. Neither Mt. Gerazim nor Jerusalem have any significance to that one who has never learned to worship truly.

The Contribution of The Crowd

It is a fact, of course, that men can worship God in the silences of the forest, for God will always find the man who is seeking him. But it is also a fact that each of us can find assistance by worshipping with a congregation, all the other members of which are also seeking the presence of God.

Compare, for instance, the difference between your experience in sitting alone in a movie and watching the unfolding of the drama, and sitting with a crowd and watching the same picture. Or, compare your experience when sitting alone on the bleachers and watching the team practise, with your experience when, as one of thousands, you watch the game!

Men who sit apart from their fellows, choosing the seat farthest removed, never get as much out of a worship service as does that one who sits with the group and shares the fellowship. There is something about the sound of your neighbor's voice lifted in song which urges you to sing or as he recites the creed which contributes confidence to your own soul.

There is a place in the life of every man for private devotions. The prayer that is uttered in secret and the scripture which is read in private reveals spiritual grace and beauty which is to be discovered nowhere else. But no private worship is ever able to substitute for some of the inspiration that is to be found in public worship.

Aids and Abuses of Worship

It is true, of course, that no man has worshipped just because he has gone through the forms of worship.

He who sings a hymn of love and continues to hate after the singing is done, may deceive himself but no one else is hood-winked. He who recites the creed and gives no thought to it is little better off than if he had not joined with his fellows in the sacred ritual. He who prays a prayer of penitence while others are also offering their humility, but who continues in his conceits, has not worshipped. He has only joined in a recitation.

It is much more likely, however, that a man will cease to hate because he joins others in a hymn of love, than might have been the case if he had nursed his hatred alone in the privacy of his home.

It is much more probable that the one who joins his fellows in a prayer of penitence will discover the needs of his own soul, than if he had remained silent and away from the house of God and the company of the contrite.

Toronto Lawyer Shot and Killed

Toronto, Nov. 17. (CP)—Nicholas Romanick, 55-year-old Toronto lawyer, was shot and killed yesterday when he and a friend were target shooting in a wooded area north of Toronto. Police Chief William Skidmore of Vaughan township said death was accidental.

Romanick's companion, Joseph Renaud, 47, told police they had each fired one shot. He said he was setting up a target on a tree when he heard a shot and saw Romanick falling, his face torn away by the rifle blast. Romanick's death occurred within 100 feet of a sign which said:

"Shooting and hunting prohibited by order of Vaughan Township police."

MAY LOSE EYE

Southampton, England, Nov. 16 — (AP) — Lewis Douglas, the retiring U. S. Ambassador to London, disclosed today he may have to have his left eye removed.

He has had several operations on the eye since he snagged it with a trout fly while fishing near here in April, 1947.

Prairie Frost Cuts into Heart Of Bread-Basket

Ottawa, Nov. 17. (CP)—One of Canada's best wheat crops is also one of its worst.

The Bureau of Statistics estimates this year's crop at 461,730,000 bushels; it's higher by 84,000,000 bushels than the 367,400,000 bushels produced last year. And the 10-year average is 394,000,000.

But the prairie frost cut into the heart of the bread-basket. An early estimate of 544,000,000 bushels of wheat was chilled by 80,000,000 bushels, and the remainder of the expected, near-record crop was knocked down in quality—and in price.

It still isn't known how much of the 1950 crop is low quality—below milling grade—but it is likely, according to inspections by the Board of Grain Commissioners, that only half of the new wheat graded No. 4 Northern or better, compared with 87.2 per cent last year.

But the grain picture was bright in some respects. Usually-high crop estimates were given for coarse grains. In other fields, records were reported for sugar beets and soybeans, both Ontario crops. A big potato yield was estimated, but this probably would be offset by the ravages of late blight which hit the Maritimes.

Though the All-Canada oats crop, at 420,228,000 bushels, was down from the previous estimate of 433,000,000, it was more than 17,000,000 bushels higher than the 10-year average.

Barley, at 171,328,000, was down from the 184,400,000 early estimate ,but some 10,000,000 bushels above the 10-year average.

Rye, at 13,346,000, was below the earlier estimate of 15,300,000.

MARRIED 65 YEARS

Peterborough, Nov. 17 — (CP) — It rained the day Mr. and Mrs. H. Yelland were married. But that omen of ill luck meant nothing to them. They celebrate their 65th wedding anniversary tomorrow and they agree they've been happily married all these years.

Mr. Yelland is 91, his wife 85.

FINEST IN ONTARIO

Brantford, Nov. 17 — (CP) — The Brant Curling Club's new, modern rink, built at a cost of $100,000 will be officially opened tonight. Nothing has been overlooked in making the five-sheet rink one of the finest of its kind in Canada.

Teacher Shortage Easing Despite Student Increase

Toronto, Nov. 17. (CP) — The shortage of teachers in Ontario is easing up despite a continuing increase in the number of students.

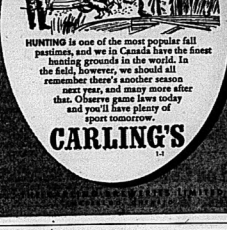
Figures compiled by the Department of Education indicate that the prospects of an adequate supply of teachers are brighter than at any time since the war.

At present there are 1,704 teacher candidates studying at Ontario's eight Normal Schools, compared with 1,641 a year ago. Enrolment at emergency summer schools for teachers is also up by 268.

The department summed up the situation this way:

Public Schools—The general situation seems to be considerably better than it was a year ago, and more qualified teachers seem to be available. So far as is known, no school is closed because of the inability of the board to obtain a teacher.

Secondary Schools—The situation has improved considerably since last year; the supply of Secondary school teachers almost meets demand.



Ontario has 6,600 Elementary schools with 20,000 teachers, and 412 Secondary schools with 5,400 teachers. These—are 800,000 Elementary school students and 127,000 Secondary school students.

Enrolments at the Normal schools this year were: Hamilton 246 London 232 ;North Bay 141; Ottawa 186; Peterborough 130; Stratford 132; Toronto 454; University of Ottawa 153.

HUNTING is one of the most popular fall pastimes, and we in Canada have the finest hunting grounds in the world. In the field, however, we should all remember there's another season next year, and many more after that. Observe game laws today and you'll have plenty of sport tomorrow.

Ezzard Charles Must Shave Off His Mustache

(By The Canadian Press)

Ezzard Charles, world's heavyweight boxing champion, must shave off his moustache before fighting Nick Barone of Syracuse, N.Y., in a title bout in Cincinnati Nov. 28.

The city boxing commission so ruled yesterday. Charles and the boys who boss the sport in that city have been fussing over the question for days. Charles is a real proud of the thing.

"This rule applies not only to the champion, but to all boxers who fight in Cincinnati rings," Hall said, commission chairman, announced. "The rules say the fighter must be clean shaven, and the examining physician for the commission has recommended that clean shaven means without any minute adornment whatsoever."

Toronto police say they intend cracking down on Grey Cup ticket-scalpers. They set prices for the East-West football final Nov. 25 are reported being offered by such speculators for $40 a pair.

The Canadian Rugby Union sold tickets by mail order for $3.30 and $2.60 a pair.

Last year's directives posed as prospective ticket-buyers in downtown Toronto hotel lobbies but only a few scalpers were picked up.

Murph Chamberlain, released at his own request as coach of Charlottetown Islanders of the Maritime Senior Hockey League says he has three "good offers" from clubs outside the Maritimes.

The former National Hockey League star said Thursday he was still negotiating with the three teams, none of which he named. He intends spending a few days on the farm before accepting any offer.

Chamberlain, who led the Islanders to the top of Maritime League with only five losses in 19 games, announced Wednesday he had accepted a "lucrative" offer to coach Vancouver Canucks of the Pacific Coast League.

However, Coley Hall, owner of the Vancouver Club, declared that Chamberlain had been hired. Hall said he had been negotiating with Chamberlain but their talks were broken off a week ago.

Chamberlain was successful as the Islanders' coach by Leo Lamoureux.

The stage is set in Manchester, England, for the Manchester Handicap Saturday which will wind up the 1950 British turf season—at times very sad for British owners, breeders and trainers.

For the first time in history, Frenchmen headed all three departments and in addition carried off four of Britain's five classic races.

Prime malefactor was textile magnate Marcel Boussac who topped money winners among owners and breeders and saw his orange-and-grey silks carried to victory in the Derby, Oaks, and St. Leger.

Boussac's jockey, Australian-born Rae (Snapper) Johnstone, won three classics for Marcel and added a fourth—the thousand guineas—for French owner M. J. Terrynck.

The other classic, the two thousand guineas, fell to the Aga Khan's colt trailed Boussac-a-both owners' and breeders' lists.

COUNCILLOR THREATENED

Orillia, Nov. 17 (CP) —Police Chief W. G. Carson said today his department is investigating a threat to Councillor William Cram. A brick was tossed through a window of the councillor's apartment early today. Tied to it by wire was a message saying: "You have 24 hours to get out of town or you die."

Mr. Cramp has been active in a campaign to have a liquor store in Orillia. The town will vote on the issue Nov. 28. Sale of liquor per beer in the town of 12,000 is banned now under local option laws.

SMUGGLING CONVICTION

Brockville, Nov. 17 — (CP)—Merrill Rosenfeld, 31-year-old Baltimore, Md., antique dealer, was fined $77 in magistrate's court Thursday and later deported back to the United States after being convicted on an attempted smuggling charge. He tried to smuggle 9,200 American cigarets and a food mixer into Canada by way of the Thousand Island bridge, some 21 miles west of here.

The goods were found hidden in his car by customs officers.

Electrics Cling To Slim Lead In Major 'A'

The Northern Electric team of the Major "A" Bowling League clung to its slim one-point margin at the head of the loop at the weekly session in the Bowl-O-Drome last night. The platers defeated its second place competitors of the CNR by a 4-3 count. Hobbs Glass Golf emerged from its doldrums and tacked a 5-3 defeat on Tobe's County Garden while Callaghan's Ice outpointed by Lawn Bowlers came through with a 4-0 decision. Moore's Chiselers turned back the Esquire for Men threat with a convincing 5-2 victory.

Canadiens Snap Loss Streak At Expense of Toronto Leafs, Detroit Whips Chicago Hawks

(By The Canadian Press)

Gaye Stewart is making crafty John Adams, manager of Detroit Red Wings, look pretty good as a master dealer in hockey players.

The speedy left-winger from Fort William, Ont., obtained in a National Hockey League five-for-four deal with Chicago last July scored two goals last night as the Red Wings walloped the Black Hawks 5-1.

It was the Wings' eighth straight game without a loss and their second over Chicago in as many meetings this season. That gives Adams a pretty strong argument that he got the best of the deal in his trade with the Hawks.

The victory recorded before 15,488 fans — largest Chicago week-night crowd of the season —also enabled the Wings to close ground on the league-leading Toronto Maple Leafs who were tripped up 5-3 by Montreal Canadiens.

Detroit now has 17 points, two back of the Leafs who have played two games more than the Wings.

In Montreal, a forum crowd of 14,533 saw Canadiens consolidate their fourth-place position worst defeat of the season.

The Canadiens, who hadn't been able to crash the win column since the Leafs tacked a double defeat on them on successive nights early this month, rained 39 shots on Turk Broda in the Toronto nets. The Leafs fired only 18 at goalie Gerry McNeil.

Curry Scores Twice

Floyd Curry tallied twice for Montreal and linemate Calum MacKay once. Leo Gravelle and Billy Reay counted the others.

Ted Sloan and Fleming Mackell scored for the Leafs.

Fifteen penalties were called, including a major for Maurice Richard of Canadiens for walloping Bill Juzda with his stick and a 10-minute misconduct to Mackell for passing referee Bill Chadwick. None of the penalties figured in the scoring.

Action also was rough at Chicago, 19 penalties being called. Detroit took a 2-0 advantage in the first seven minutes on goals by Gordie Howe and Stewart. Bill Mosienko scored the Hawks' lone tally in the middle frame when Detroit's George Gee also scored.

Jim McFadden and Stewart closed the scoring in the finals.

Terry Sawchuk in Detroit nets was called upon to handle 45 shots, Harry Lumley 21.

Back In Big Time

A six-player trade announced yesterday between the Leafs and Boston Bruins brought Bill Ezinicki and Vic Lynn back into the big league from the minors.

The Bruins got both forwards in exchange for defenceman Fern Flaman, centre Phil Maloney, left winger Ken Smith and the rights to Leo Boivin, a Port Arthur, Ont., junior.

In another deal, the Bruins obtained Dunc Fisher from New York—he was recently sent down to St. Paul Saints of the United States league—for Zellio Toppazzini and Ed Harrison.

The Rangers also announced they had purchased defenceman Wally Stanowski to Cincinnati Mohawks of the American league in exchange for Jack Evans, a 23-year-old rearguard.

Boxer Heralded As Another Jack Dempsey

New York, Nov. 17 — (AP) — Rex Layne, a fresh new face to the jaded fight game, met the boys at the International Boxing Club office. The handsome 22-year-old farm boy from the sugar – belt and cattle country of Utah had stepped off a plane.

Out in Salt Lake City they ask "Is Layne another Dempsey?" Not since the old Manassa Mauler swept out of the west has a fighter so captivated the fans in that section of the country.

Now he's in New York to get ready for his first real big test—a Madison Square Garden date with Jersey Joe Walcott a week from tonight.

"No, I never saw Walcott fight" he said. "I met the movies. I watched him in the movies quite a lot. Especially lately.

"No, I don't want anybody to worry about me fighting an experienced fighter like Walcott. I fought some pretty good guys too. Fellows like Turkey Thompson in the 1949 Layne won the Amateur Athletic Union title at Salt Lake. He went on to Boston and won the A. A. U. nationals. Marvel Jenson, his manager now, promoted a fight between Rex and the Boston Golden Glove champ, and Rex knocked him out. That was the deal that made him turn pro, May 23, 1949.

Layne was brought along slowly by Jenson, making most of his starts at Salt Lake. He went out on the west coast, then moved into Chicago to fight a 10-round draw with Dale Hall as the semifinal to Rocky Graziano's fight with Gene Burton Oct. 6.

He's had 28 pro fights, winning 25, losing one and fighting two draws. He's knocked out 19 of his 25 victims. Dave Whitlock beat him in 10 rounds Feb. 20 but he holds two decisions over Whitlock.

Sport Shorts From Britain

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 17 (CP)—Eleven years ago a strapping Welsh youngster from Swansea and his pal, a slim Yorkshire lad from Bradford, shuffled dejectedly out of Arsenal Football Club's business office, which them went two battered bags containing their playing kit and shattered hopes. Their bid for a berth with London's famous "Gunners" of the English first division, had been turned down.

Although both were then rated as fair prospects, the Arsenal management showed no interest at the nominal signing-on fee of $30.

Today, the same lads—Trevor Ford and Len Shackleton — are riding the crest of fame and success, but not with "Gunners."

As the spearhead of Sunderland's reconstructed forward line have become known as the "Golden Boys" of British soccer. The tag is appropriate — they represent a partnership that cost the Durham club $150,000.

Acquisition of Ford from Aston Villa was the surprise of the early season. An automatic choice to represent Wales in the all-star international tests, his services had been eagerly sought by several first division clubs including Chelsea and Sunderland won out by plunking $90,000 on the line, an all-time record. Shackleton, acquired from Newcastle United in 1948, came at a comparative bargain price of $60,000.

Hostile Crowd

In his first game with his new team-mates Ford came under a glaring spotlight at Stamford Bridge, before more than 50,000 Chelsea supporters.

It was a particularly bad day for the man who overnight had become the costliest soccer player in the world. His every move was jeered by the hostile crowd, apparently laboring under the impression he has spurned an enticing offer to join the Chelsea club. With Ford hotlisted up on almost every play, Sunderland lost 3-0.

Bewildered by the sudden attention focused upon him and "it" ined by the reaction of the Chelsea fans, the Welshman who has a wife and infant daughter, tried to put things right.

"I would have been exceedingly happy to play for Chelsea," he said. "But after all I have the responsibilities of a family man and Sunderland offered me security after my football career is over. That is what I was after." Ford said it was his intention to settle down, do his best for Sunderland and not let the label of "top-priced player" worry him too much.

Petawawa, Ont., Nov. 17 (CP) — Some 1,500 officers and men of the 2nd Battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment, a part of Canada's special United Nations force, left Petawawa military camp last night by special train for Fort Lewis, Wash.

The men have spent three months at Petawawa and will be given further training at Fort Lewis.

NO CHANGE REPORTED

Toronto, Nov. 17—(CP)—Little change was reported today in the condition of Most Rev. George P. Kingston of Halifax, seriously ill in hospital here following a heart attack Monday.

However, friends said Dr. Kingston, Anglican primate of all Canada and Archbishop of Nova Scotia, showed a little brighter last night.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

NYLONS NOCTURNE

Tonight the proud Nylons of Kingston parade their hockey wares before, what is hoped, a crammed Arena in a scheduled clash with the Redmen. It is the first meeting of the senate this season, and tothe resurgence of the long-standing feud between these rivals of the ice-lanes should produce a stirring battle. The Nylonese have been to the barrier four times this season in senior play, and have emerged victors on but one occasion. They'll be out for blood, especially the Belleville type, and with the win-hungry Reds in the same category, the outcome should be a right lusty tilt of the ice-lanes.

ALPHONSE-GASTON?

Meanwhile up in Peterborough the Petes and Eagles meet in their second joust of the season in what, according to optimist Pal Perdue should be another "playoff rehearsal". Imagine the nerve of the guy at this stage of the game! As a matter of fact, since the Petes junior "B's" took the measure of our Rockets Wednesday night, and despite the honeyeyed words of Mr. Petes covering newsman that "Belleville will improve", it could be that soon Peterborough fandom will celebrate a defeat instead of victory. Damme, winning hockey games is getting to be a habit up in Perdueville.

NO KIDDING, FELLAS!

To settle that dressing room argument of Wednesday night, Section (a) Rule 15, (a new one) states, "At the beginning of each game, clubs shall have not more than fifteen players in uniform, which shall include two goalkeepers, who shall be eligible to play in the game as goalkeepers ONLY."

A footnote at the end of the rule states "Clubs are allowed to carry a spare goalkeeper if they so desire, and he can be used at the club's discretion, but will not be permitted to replace a goalkeeper who receives a match, or match misconduct penalty".

In other words a club can alternate goalies during a game.

REMEMBER THIS!

The Ontario Minor Hockey Association which is holding its annual conclave at the King Edward Hotel tomorrow is introducing a similar rule, with the exception that it will ask that eighteen players be signed, and fifteen to be dressed for a game. A spare goalie, according to the amendment can be dressed and sign the referee's report previous to the game and may play no other position.

A GOOD SHOW!

Speaking of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association Convention, it is expected the largest number of delegates in the history of the association will converge on the "King Eddie" tomorrow morning. Eight amendments to the regulations of the association will come under fire during the morning session. Follows the luncheon and election of officers, then the regular "bull session" upstairs. Herb. Parker of Stratford, a breezy broth of a boy is the new prexy succeeding the capable Otto Hardwick of Bolton. Herbert's a grand fellow, a keen sportsman whose interest and activities in the hockey mongrels is tremendous, and he will fill the presidential shoes very capably.

IN GOOD HANDS

And so until Monday, we'll be in Toronto with OMHIA executive member Sam Carry of Tweed, and Fred Eigle, accredited member of the Belleville Hockey Association who will represent his organization's minor hockey interests.

Three Football Titles Will Be Decided Saturday With Argos Favored to Beat Beaches

(By The Canadian Press)

There's a familiar "foregone conclusion" feeling around Toronto as Argonauts and Beach Boys prepare for Saturday's Eastern Canada senior football final at Varsity Stadium.

The feeling is familiar because it crops up about this time every year when the perennially-underdog ORFU champions come up against the highly-rated Big Four winners.

Ask just about any football fan who he thinks will mess Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Grey Cup final Nov. 25 and he'll say Argos are a cinch. But then just watch the smile when he adds sheepishly: Wouldn't it be funny if the Argos' farm club, Beaches, were to upset them?

That about sums up the sudden-death playoff. Argos, who eliminated Hamilton Tiger-Cats in convincing style last Saturday, appear to be in. But the Beaches, with some players who would have been in the Big Four this season, might pull a big surprise.

In general, it could be last-laugh weekend on several football fronts.

The college league winds up Saturday with McGill University Redmen, beaten only once in the six-game regular schedule, playing host to University of Western Ontario Mustangs in a post-season sudden-death playoff.

Must Favor McGill

The McGills must be rated as favorites in this one as a result of their regular-season performance, but Western, winning 21-11 proved last week that the Redmen can be beaten.

That victory gave Mustangs second place in the four-team conference and earned them the right to play the league leaders in the final. Under college rules the second place team must defeat the first-place finisher by at least once in the season to force a playoff.

The other football feature is a miniature East-West game, with Vancouver Blue Bombers meeting Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the Canadian junior final.

The principals are the same as last year when the Hamilton Tigers won it. Only difference is the locale, in Hamilton instead of Vancouver. With little basis of comparison it's a toss-up, although Hamilton might be given an edge off past performance, having won the title for the last three years running. The Bombers, after eliminating Winnipeg, entrained for Hamilton Wednesday night.

Take a look at the Beach backfield which includes Carl Galbreath, one of the best all-round backfielders in Canadian football. The only reason Hamilton let Galbreath go this season was that they had to choose from among such American imports as Bill Gregus and Special Delivery Jones as well as Galbreath.

Tuttle Great Passer

Then there's quarterback Gerry Tuttle, who can toss a pass like a bullet, accurately so. He weren't for import Al Dekdebrun who holds down that spot with Argos, Tuttle probably would have been the man at quarter for the Big Four champs.

Tuttle and lineman Dwight Follin, both imports, did wonders with the Beaches after they took over part way through the season. The team is unbeaten since then and the Beaches would like more than anything else in the world to knock off their big brothers Saturday.

The reason Argos are odds-on choice, however, are obvious. They include ageless Dekdebrun, ever-dangerous Ulysses Curtis, big booter Joe Krol, little Billy Bass and the rest of a smooth-working backfield frosted by a line that showed Hamilton how to overcome size with fight. And don't forget Frank Clair, the coach. He's not taking the game for granted and he's trying his darndest to see that Argos don't either.

Inside—Wally Kowal, McGill
Inside—Vince Capogreco, McGill
Middle — Dave Tomlinson, McGill
Middle—Bill Ford, Western Outside—Jim Mitchener, McGill
Outside—Tip Logan, Queen's.

It was the third All-star selection for two Western players — London-born Bob McFarlane, 192-pound halfback who led the league in scoring, and team-captain Bill Ford, 24-year-old 190-pound lineman, also of London.

Other repeaters are Tip Logan, a 22-year-old 185-pound native of Fort Erie, Ont., who handled placement kicking duties for Queen's as well as starred outside; 21-year-old Jim Mitchener, from Vancouver, who stands 180-pound end, and Wally Kowal, a Montreal-born inside at 214 lbs. The three were on last year's All-star squad.

Stamps Supply Four

Calgary Stampeders of 1948, a star-studded Grey Cup winning team, contributed four of the players who made McGill an intercollegiate power this year and who were named to the dream team.

Known as the dead-end kids, they include Mitchener, quarterback Harry Irving, Middle Dave Tomlinson and flying wing Fred Wilmot. Irving, a 170 - pounder, and undersized to Stampeder quarterback Keith Spaith, called the plays for McGill last year.

Vince Capogreco, a hefty 200-pound lineman from Ottawa who plays lacrosse, in the capital in the off season was a tower of strength at middle for McGill this season.

Bob McFarlane, the scoring ace on the team and a native of Toronto, He weighs 205 pounds, is 30 and stands six foot, two.

Pete Robinson, known as Pixie by his teammates, was one of the best running halves in the league, particularly on 40-to-45-yarders. He is 170-pound Montrealer.

The other backfielder is Doug Gray, a native of Sarnia, Ont., who has far more power than his 135 pounds would portend. Gray may be best remembered for his performances in the playoff between McGill and Western at Toronto last season when he replaced the injured Jack Parry and though injured himself. Gray, who helped Western win the championship, played with his injured arm drugged to kill the pain.

Closest to unanimous selection for the team, was popular Bob McFarlane who received 45 of a possible 48 points in the voting.

Balloting for the All-star team was weighted to give equal voting strength to each of the cities — Montreal, Kingston, Ont., Toronto and London, Ont.

1950 Team

Here's the 1950 team:
Flying wing — Fred Wilmot, McGill
Half—Bob McFarlane, Western Half—Pete Robinson, McGill
Half (secondary)—Doug Gray, Western Quarter—Harry Irving, McGill
Snap—Bob McLellan, McGill

finishing in third place.

Fans Will Like Place Kicking Of Joe Aguirre

Winnipeg, Nov. 17 — (CP) — Football fans at the Grey Cup final in Toronto Nov. 25 are in for a treat if Winnipeg's Joe (The Toe) Aguirre gets a chance to unkork a few field-goal attempts.

In the regular western football season, the six-foot, nine-inch, 200-pound electrified crowds time and again with his booming kick-offs or placement attempts.

One of his best efforts was a one-point single on a kick-off at Regina against the Saskatchewan Roughriders.

That's a difficult play not seen often because if the kick goes out of bounds over the goal line or into the deadline, the kickoff must take over again from 10 yards farther back.

On this occasion, Joe's first boot went out of bounds.

The second, from 10 yards farther back hit the goal posts and was nullified.

The third was a high ball that Bomber tacklers had plenty of time to scurry down under and nullify.

In Winnipeg's Osborne Stadium, dubbed the "bandbox" of the western league, his converts invariably sail over the fence.

Joe recalls that his longest successful field goal was "around 45 to 50 yards" when he was playing professional football in the United States. But Aguirre's a modest fellow—so maybe it was longer.

Captained Red Tilley

In his first year in Canadian football, Aguirre captured the Western Football Union scoring title with 57 points, made up of two touchdowns, 22 converts, 10 singles and five field goals.

Aguirre says he believes Bombers can upset the eastern team—Toronto Argonauts or Balmy Beach—in the Dominion final at Varsity Stadium.

And many Bomber fans think Aguirre's accurate kicking might just spell the difference. He turned in a commendable effort in the three-game western final series against Edmonton, netting 16 points on one placement, eight converts and five deadline kicks.

As for the Toronto jinx—Winnipeg has never beaten a Toronto team—as passes it over as: "It doesn't mean a thing to us. We're not playing any team."

Aguirre broke into college football with St. Mary's. He turned professional with Washington Redskins, team-mates included Frank Clair, Argo Coach; Frankie Filchok of Montreal Alouettes; and Bob Masterson, coach at the University of Toronto.

The 228-pound Aguirre jumped to the All-American loop in 1946 with Los Angeles Dons. When the All-American and National Leagues amalgamated this year, he was drafted by New York Yankees.

It was at the Yankees training camp that the 31-year-old Aguirre decided to throw his lot in with Winnipeg. Previously, he had turned down offers by the Alouettes.

Aguirre missed the first three games of the W.I.F.U. schedule but managed to win the scoring crown. Too, he played the last few games with a broken finger on his left hand in a cast.

McGill Redmen Place Eight Players on Mythical Squad

By MEL SUFRIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer)

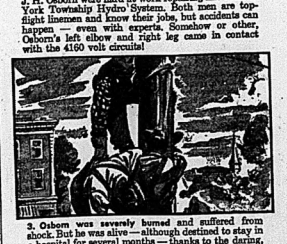
Toronto, Nov. 17 — (CP) — McGill University's outstanding performance in intercollegiate football this season is reflected in domination of the league's 1950 all-star team.

The Redmen, who led the league right through the six - game schedule, placed eight players on the mythical squad, it was announced today.

University of Western Mustangs, who earned a post-season playoff with McGill by defeating them in the final game of the season and finishing in second place, contributed three players while the last-place Queen's Golden Gaels had one.

The team, selected annually for the Canadian Press by football writers and coaches in the league's four cities, was void of diversity of Toronto Blues, an underdog outfit that surprised by

LINEMAN RISKS DEATH TO FREE CO-WORKER FROM LIVE WIRE



Roy E. Archer, of Toronto, Ont., gambles with electrocution as he rescues fellow lineman from live circuit

1. At the top of a pole on Toronto's Eglinton Avenue, Grade "A" Lineman Roy E. Archer and co-worker J. H. Osborn were hard at work repairing lines for the York Township Hydro System. Both men are top-flight linemen and know their jobs, but accidents can happen — even with experts. Somehow or other, Osborn's left elbow and right leg came in contact with the 4160 volt circuits!

2. Osborn was almost completely paralysed and incapable of moving. Roy Archer knew that in a few seconds his friend would be dead . . . and that if he touched him he, himself, would also take the chance of being fatally burned. But he did not waste time worrying about his own safety. He struck Osborn on the shoulder. It didn't work . . . but the shock he received didn't deter him. Next time, he kicked . . . and he was successful!

3. Osborn was severely burned and suffered from shock. But he was alive — although destined to stay in a hospital for several months — thanks to the daring, quick action of his comrade. To Roy E. Archer, Grade "A" Lineman, whose unselfish bravery saved the life of a fellow Canadian, we are indeed proud to pay tribute through the presentation of THE DOW AWARD.

Shore Likes Present-Day Hockey but Not the Coaching

Lindsay, Ont., Nov. 17—(CP)—Eddie Shore, one of hockey's all-time greats, says he likes hockey the way they play it now, but he doesn't think much of the coaching.

"Shore believe the old game had more, pretty passing plays and better body checking." Shore said Thursday at the wind-up of a three-day hockey school here. "I think today's game is better because the puck travels faster However, the plays are not kept up with the puck. We have lost the power of reasoning, and few coaches take the time or have the knowledge to correct players' mistakes or find out what they do wrong."

Shore, owner - manager of Springfield Indians of the American Hockey Association and a veteran defenceman for 19 years in pro hockey, said he thinks coaches have misconstrued the word "streamlining."

"The game today is all go, go, go, and the players are bending over in attempts to gain more speed ." However, this had the effect of slowing down some players.

Wants Upright Skaters

"A player who skates in the straight-up position will last from five to 10 years longer in professional hockey and will be able to add from $35,000 to $50,000 to his earning power. It is to our advantage to teach this style of skating and to the players' advantage to learn it."

He said that with few exceptions the outstanding players of the past skated in the upright position, including the late Howie Morenz, the Cook brothers, Frank Boucher and Ching Johnson.

"Nobody can tell me today that anyone could skate faster than Morenz, said Shore. "It is not humanly possible. Howie was an upright skater and when he brought those knees up nobody flew. He had terrific power and wonderful grace."

Shore tempered his liking for present-day hockey with the observation that there are "only five really outstanding stars in the N. H. L." although there are 70,000 hockey players in Canada. He didn't name the five.

Player Makes 125-Yard Run For Touchdown

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 17 — (CP) Doug Arniel's 125-yard run for a touchdown Thursday gave Kingston Collegiate and Vocational Institute a 6-0 victory over Pembroke Collegiate Juniors and the Eastern Ontario Secondary School Association junior football championship.

Playing on a field which was turned into a patch of mud and water by a continual rain, both teams used the two-plunges-and-a-kick system with the odd pass thrown for variety. None of the passes was complete.

After a scoreless first half, Arniel kicked a single point five minutes after the third quarter opened. In the fourth quarter, Pembroke were able to get as far as Kingston's 10-yard line but had to kick on the last down.

Arniel took the ball 15 yards behind his own goal line, eluded the first tackler, dropped the ball, picked it up, dodged the entire Pembroke team and scooted up the field with Pembroke players after him. When he reached the Pembroke goal-line, Arniel just fell over the line.

Redmen Present Strong Lineup For Nylon Game

Acting coach Walker Bent of the Belleville Redmen released a lineup for tonight's game with the Kingston Nylons that indicates a shakeup. Maurice LeForte will move into the nets for the first time this season, and Tim Williams has been moved back to defence, to pair with big Vern Goyer.

Tommy Schreider, husky defenceman, will be out of tonight's go, with a broken collarbone. The fracture is believed to have happened in Peterborough when the Redmen played the Eagles. Schreider has been complaining about the shoulder, but the injury was not defined until this morning.

The second defence pair tonight will be Lou Schmidt and Doug Bastedo. On the first line, Jackie Wardhaugh will centre Johnnie Green and Brian Mulvihill. Marcel Sawyer, Keith McDonald and Doug Day will go as a unit on the second line, and the third trio will be made up of Doug Free, George Graham and Peter Jones.

Game time tonight is 8:30.

Providence Reds Beat St. Louis By 5 to 3 Score

(By The Canadian Press)

Three goals in two minutes last night gave Providence Reds a 5-3 victory over St. Louis Flyers in the American Hockey League.

Jack Stoddard, Jackie Hamilton and Roger Bedard led the successful assault with the first two counters coming within 29 seconds of the final period. Hamilton and Bedard each scored twice. Jean Lamirande, Vic Gregg and Sherman White counted for Flyers.

Cincinnati Mohawks, toppling the league's western division, whipped New Haven Eagles 4-2. The Eagles are in last place in the eastern division. Leading Mohawks scorers was Fern Perrault with two while Jack Gordon and Frank King got the others.

Sam Mullholland counted twice for New Haven.

Springfield Indians, in third place in the eastern division, shaded Indianapolis Capitals — cellar dwellers in the western section—3-1. George Ford, Ken Hayden and Bill Gooden counted for the winners. Larry Wilson scored the lone Indianapolis goal.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Cal Gardner of Toronto picked up an assist last night to move to within four points of teammate Max Bentley, the National Hockey League's leading sniper. Bentley has five goals and a pace-setting 14 assists for 19 points and Gardner now boasts six goals and nine assists.

Tod Sloan of Toronto and Gordie Howe of Detroit each picked up a goal to bring their totals to 14 and move into a third-place tie with Ted Kennedy of Maple Leafs, leaving Montreal's Maurice Richard in next position with 13 points. Richard is top scorer with nine goals. In seventh place is Sid Smith of the Leafs with 12 points.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Nov. 17 — (AP) — For the first time, a top - notch movie producer is making a film for television.

The movie maker is Walt Disney, whose career includes a large number of "firsts." Not only is he making a picture for television, but he is appearing in it himself.

"I've got as much han as anyone," he confessed on the set at his studio, while having his make-up applied.

He emphasized that the TV venture does not mean a merger with the new industry.

"Our business is still making pictures for theatres," he said. "But we are not afraid of television. I think we can use television the same as we have used radio — to get people interested in seeing our pictures.

No Danger

"I don't think television presents much more danger to the movie business than radio did. Hollywood was just as much afraid of radio as it is of TV today. Somehow we survived.

"I think if you have a good picture, people are going to want to see it. And we should use radio and television to let them know about our pictures."

The first Disney TV splash will be a one-hour show with Edgar Bergen on Christmas Day. Some of the famed Disney characters will be seen on TV screens for the first time.

Capsule Review

"Born Yesterday," is a faithful adaptation of the play about the junk dealer's babe who gets educated by a newspaper man. The show comes off as one of the best comedies in recent seasons. This is largely due to a sparkling portrayal of Judy Holliday as the dumb blonde. She is wonderfully funny. Only drawback is that her lines are sometimes indefinite. Broderick Crawford plays the junk manwith full voice all the way and William Holden is a newspaper man.

ACQUITTED OF CHARGE

Ottawa, Nov. 17 — (CP) Hector Lavigne, 21, of nearby Brockville, Ont., was acquitted yesterday by a Court of King's Bench jury of a charge of manslaughter arising from the traffic death last March of Kenneth Kelley, 19, also of Brockville.

Kelley was a passenger in Lavigne's car when it rammed the rear of a parked truck.

The jury recommended the Lavigne's driving licence be suspended.

AT THE BELLE — Barbara Stanwyck, starred with John Lund, Jane Cowl and Lyle Bettger in Paramount's "No Man of Her Own," the story of a woman engaged in a desperate masquerade. The film is showing with an excellent array of short subjects tonight at the Belle.

AT THE McCARTHY—Dorothy McGuire takes delivery on a spinning wheel from junk dealer Edmund Gwenn who is also a part time counterfeiter, leading the T-Men a merry chase in the 20th. Century Fox comedy "Mister "880", now playing at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre. Burt Lancaster is the T-Man assigned to the case. Robert Riskin wrote the screenplay from a New Yorker Magazine article by St. Clair McKelway.

HIGH CHEESE PRICE

Listowel, Nov. 17 — (CP) — Cheese skyrocketed to 45½ cents Wednesday — the highest figure in the history of the Listowel Cheese Board — as the first open market was held since lifting of export restrictions. A record of 66 bids were made for 1,341 boxes by buyers representing six companies.

ROTARY RECOGNIZED

Hong Kong, Nov. 17 — (AP)— Rotary International has been "recognized" officially by communist China. R. H. Jones, president of the Kowloon Rotary Club, told a meeting of the club yesterday that Peiping has granted International Rotary the first licence to operate in China as a legal private organization.

FILMS FOR SCHOOLS

London —(CP) — A plan to enable British schools to make more use of educational films at cheap rates has been adopted. The plan proposed by the Educational Foundation of Visual Aids offers local authorities the choice of a fixed rate on each school projector, or else a fee based on the number of registered pupils.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Saturday, Nov. 18

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Stimulating influences for your talents, capability. Some extra generous rays for personal advancement, favors from others. A good day. Keep calm, genial.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus) —You can be well pleased with yourself by nightfall if you do your best, live up to high Taurus standards. Use that God-given ability in right way and gains will come your way.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)— Not an easy period but with a little patience and extra effort blended in with your natural ability to sense openings quickly you should move forward. Be honest in all things.

June 22 to July 22—(Cancer)— Sort of run-of-mill day. Good for energetic thinkers, so-so for the lackadaisical, happy - go - lucky ones. Professional, artistic pursuits, journalism, public relations highly favored.

July 24 to August 22— (Leo)— Don't stay in the old rut when good new ideas and devices are available. Times, modes change; so do possibilities. Be alert, ready for the urgent and not bound by antiquated customs.

August 23 to September 22— (Virgo)—Not unfriendly, even the uncertain hours. Aspects improve as day progresses. Keep trying and benefic new aims will materialize.

September 24 to October 23— (Libra)—Be up and doing early, face facts firmly, especially in business, with money. Stars favor unction. Give new, artistic touch to the old, but don't forget to think well before acting.

October 24 to November 22 — (Scorpio)—It can be a gainful, pleasant day. Be yourself, original, make your ideas felt but don't force them. Try the unusual but respect the tried and now profitable. Good possibilities.

November 23 to December 22— (Sagittarius)—Excellent day for good ideas, proportions concerning the public. Favorable for community, national interests. Let your inventive imagination have sway, with practicality.

December 23 to January 21 — (Capricorn) — Opportune time for exploring new ground, rousing dormant talent. News may work into this picture, be alert to advantages. Gentle, considerate manner urged in domestic matters.

January 22 to February 20 — (Aquarius)—An interesting, challenging period that can be bettered with patience, sound judgment. If necessary, ask advice—this will not lower but rather raise your standing. Pep up imagination.

February 21 to March 20 — (Pisces) — Industry, mechanical trades, labor matters generally need close attention. Skill, finesse in any and all work will bring bigger returns. Stick to high standards throughout.

You born today: Have great personal magnetism, artistic and musical talent. Could become good lawyer, doctor, nurse or business executive. Dynamic, energetic, you often overdo. Try to do a top job always but also consider nerves, general health. Make it a point to get proper rest and relaxation, regularly, and be more moderate in all activities. You can accomplish more if you have system and evenly allocate the day's schedule. Overcome tendency to wasteful anger, worry. Birthdate: Sir Wm. Gilbert, playwright, humorist; Ann Gray, noted author; Nicholas Rimsky-Korsakof, Russian composer.

Alberta Govt. Retains Seat, Margin Reduced

Olds, Alta., Nov. 17 (CP) — The Social Credit government retained its Olds seat in the Alberta Legislature in yesterday's provincial by - election, but its winning margin was reduced from the 1948 provincial election.

Fred Niddrie, 60-year-old farmer of Mound, Alta., was the successful Social Credit candidate. A veteran of 14 years as a municipal councillor and 25 years as a school board member, he defeated Liberal candidate Martin Winther of Huxley, Alta., a 58-year-old farmer.

Incomplete results — 38 of 41 polls—gave Mr. Niddrie 2,032 votes to Mr. Winther's 1,399. There were about 7,500 eligible voters. Mr. Niddrie's election was reported by The Canadian Press about two hours after the polls closed.

The seat was vacated by the death last summer of Social Crediter Norman Cook of Olds, who had held the seat since 1940. In the 1948 general election, he received 2,300 of the 4,314 votes cast, the Liberal candidate getting 690 and the CCF 424.

Standing in the Alberta Legislature now is: Social Credit 51, Liberal 2, CCF 2, Independent Social Credit 1, Independent 1 — total 57.

The lighter vote yesterday reflected a dull campaign and adverse weather conditions. Near-blizzard conditions prevailed in the western part of the rural riding yesterday.

I Hear Adventure Calling

By Emilie Loring

"Ask thy soul if we should part, and the scrape of a boat across a beach.

At the time he had suspected that the song had been a signal for a hectic instant had thought it might be connected with news of Ken, had dismissed the idea as impossible. Man and girl rendezvous, doubtless.

"His brown outfit was so like the color of the rocks," Fran had said on the terrace of Shore Acres. Perhaps she was right, perhaps the man was a spy, they were operating on both sides of the Atlantic.

"Miss Trent engaged me to help out the servants," Barth added as if his presence rated explanation, as if he had read Myles's mind.

"Thanks, but I'll look after myself."

"Quite a crowd around the table sir. I can bring something from the pantry."

Darn the guy's persistence. Myles opened his lips to assure the waiter that a pretzel didn't fill him with terror, closed them as he met the man's steady eyes.

"What goes? What goes?" he asked himself. More behind this than meets the ear?

"Something tells me you're right, Barth. If Susanna's chicken salad, plus pecans, is on the menu I'd like that with anything else you recommend.

"Very good sir. There is a table at the right end of the terrace, quite secluded in case you prefer it. I feel sure I'll agreeable to you I'll bring a tray there in about ten minutes. Ten minutes if that will suit you sire."

He didn't wait to learn if it would, which made for more attentive more of an order than a suggestion. Myles's eyes followed his black shoulders and white head as he edged his way toward the pantry door between laughing, chatting, eating groups. What in thunder had he meant by steering him to a certain table?

"Ten minutes," the man who called himself Barth had emphasized. He checked by his watch. Battles had been won and lost in less time than that. What would the next ten minutes disclose?

He returned to the drawing room with its soft gray walls and tourmaline pink hangings at long open windows.

Tonight Miss Tassle was resplendent in light blue net with silver sequins which glinted with each motion of her restless body. A narrow coronet of diamonds encircled her mousekissus black hair-do. Eckhard, in white dinner clothes, and a state of pride and excitement, was beside her. Would she have worn that huge brooch and the long bracelets of squamarines and diamonds had she known of the theft of the gallery? Had Merry Sargent the right to keep under cover the fact that his property had been stolen?

"Hi Myles!" Morrison Grove stopped beside him, his sunburn brought into high relief by his white coat. "Hear you've been trying to contact me. Anything important?"

"Thought it was at the time, but it's been over." No late to bring up the question "how account for your drenched suit the night of the storm?

"This is strictly off the record." Grove moved a cross starter and spoke in a low voice. "When I was on the newspaper I helped the FBI with a little information. Thought they might be able to reciprocate. I got alarmed uneasy about our mystery man, have been trying to check on him."

"Mystery man?" Myles's eyes and voice registered bewilderment though he knew quite well well of whom Grove was speaking.

"You haven't forgotten Fran's visiting fireman, with his assortment of jobs, have you?"

"Oh, that guy. Thought you had him filed as a psychopathic case. He's here tonight."

"You're telling me, and Miss Tassle plastered with diamonds. I have a hunch we may need a couple of strong boys before the evening is through."

"Did you get the godos on—" Myles left the sentence unfinished as a man and girl stopped near them.

Eckhard is the white haired boy tonight," Grove asserted jovially as if unaware that Myles had ceased speaking bruptly. "Quite a party. Miss Tassle is the top patron of the arts in this community, always giving a hand up to strugglers on the ladder of fame. Eckhard's no longer a struggler though. He's quite a guy even if he can't talk without a pipe in his hand. He's giving the works of art in this house the once over. Queer specialty, running down art fakers."

"He appears to have a lot on the ball. I was here for lunch the day after the record breaking storm. He told me he was drenched in the downpower, said you had been too."

"Did he? How did he know that my car had a blowout and I changed a tire near a hedge?" Grove's question was low and eager. The couple near moved on. "Did he tell you why he was huddled beside the shrubs outside the Digby's door at the gallery during that same storm? I'd give dollars—"

"Major Jaffray, at long last. Why so late arriving Myles?" Gene Sargent tucked her hand under his arm and regarded Grove with unfriendly eyes. "I've seen you before this evening, Morrie."

"Sdeath, I'm going, lady. Your suggestion was so subtly phrased you rate the diplomatic service." He resettled the bachelor's buttons in the lapel of Myles's white dinner jacket.

"My boy, all in good time will be given to you the knowledge about to be passed on when so rudely interrupted, but, to one who shall be namely there shall be no enlightenment. Selah."

The corners of Gene Sargent's lovely mouth tipped down, two sharp lines cut between her black brows.

"What did he mean by that rigmarole, Myles?"

"Search me, I can't follow Morrie when he talks in parables."

"Who can? Miss Tassle was threatened with a nervous breakdown when you didn't appear. Her hand tightened on his arm. "I suspect you are the heir apparent of the banquette. You're the hottest thing in popularity in this house."

"And you are something to write home about in that deep rose color frock, Gene. It does a lot for your dark eyes and hair which need nothing in the way of charm that nature has not already provided. After which exchange of courtesies I will explain that I had to wait at home for a long-distance call, Lucky I didn't have the pain to come. I cut through the gate in the hedge between the two places. What a crowd. Looks as if all the local and his wife of this community had turned out to give Eckhard the glad hand."

"And incidentally gorge on one of Miss Tassle's out-of-season suppers. Everyone is here but Fran Phillips and Blake Sinclair. Myles swallowed an emphatic "you're telling me," and substituted what he hoped was a surprised "weren't they invited?"

"Of course. I don't know what to make of Fran. She was such a mouse when her aunt was alive, now instead of being a negative person she's positive—and how. When Blake came she declared she wouldn't go out with him, via grapevine I hear that they play tennis together every afternoon when she is through work. Perhaps you can explain her change of heart, I can't."

Had Fran discovered that she loved Sinclair? Was that why he had been unaskable? Teach her or was the reason tied up with the theft at the gallery?

"He is an old friend," he commented casually. "Maybe she is worried about that thousand dollar debt? Perhaps she is confiding in him."

"That's taken care of." Her voice had the buoyancy of a balloon released from captivity. "Fran phoned me this morning that she wouldn't have to lie awake worrying any more. The money is in sight with which to pay it, without benefit of her trustee, I gathered."

He ignored the thrust. He'd bet Fran wasn't the person who could stop worrying, it was Gene. Judge Grimes had phoned him this evening that he had sold bonds on Fran's order and suggested that he find out why. He suspected she was helping Sinclair.

"I'm glad she has the payment for the stunning ring off her conscience. Now she can enjoy it. Unpaid for possessions are not much fun. If she worried enough it may be a lesson to her not to get into debt. As Ken isn't here perhaps I'd better speak to her—"

"No, Myles, no. She told me she never wanted to think of it again. Speak of the angels, here they come." She clasped her free hand over the other on his arm. Her raised face almost touched his bent to hear her whisper.

"That intense blue-with-green chiffon she is wearing would be a lot more becoming to a girl more blond, don't you think?"

He looked up and met Fran's eyes. He didn't like the little contemptuous line of her lips. He didn't like the way she looked up at Sinclair and asked a question. Neither did he like the hands on his arm. He gently but firmly shook them off.

"KING'S BARBER" RETIRES

Paul E. (Red) Tasse, often called the King's Barber, has retired as head barber in Ottawa's swank Chateau Laurier Hotel. He served on the Royal Train which carried King George and Queen Elizabeth across Canada in 1939. But the 63-year-old barber is proudest of his long association with two of Canada's prime ministers — Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and R. B. Bennett — both of whom went to him for haircuts and sometimes advice. Each of them gave him autographed photographs and he attended Mr. King's funeral at the willed request of the late prime minister. — (CP Photo.)

Communist Resistance Fades as U.N. Forces Move Forward in Northeast Area

Seoul, Nov. 18 (AP) — Communist resistance evaporated today ahead of United Nations forces closing in on Chosen reservoir, an ice-clogging through new snow in northeastern Korea.

But on the western end of the slanting 250 mile front 100,000 Korean and Chinese communists were reported digging into a low mountain defence line south of the Yalu River's international power site on the Manchurian frontier.

Red Objectives

The red objectives appeared, on the basis of intelligence reports, to be:

1. Let U.N. forces get ahead under harassment into the higher mountains where the northeast, where they might be tied down through the bitter-cold winter at the end of snowbound supply lines.

2. Resist on a 50-mile line running through uplands from Chechon on the southwest to the Pokchon and Unsanchon fighting area.

United States intelligence sources estimated about 28,000 Chinese in three division-size task forces are on the Taechon-Tokchon line with about 70,000 North Koreans. Other units are in supporting positions. There was no reported evidence of any communists pulling back to the Yalu in that area 75 miles northwest of Taechon.

The Yalu power site area apparently is the point of greatest sensitivity for the Chinese reds.

On the northeast battle lines, there were no indications of any new red build-ups to stop advancing U.N. forces.

Observer and intelligence reports indicated nothing but snowy lay between tattered forces of the American 7th division, and air-struck and burned out Kapsan in the northeast. Kapsan is 21 airline miles short of Manchuria on that track through valleys among steep mountains.

AP correspondent Tom Sloane, in Kapsan front, reported the 7th's advance will be delayed three hours Friday to let Sherman tanks wheel off the road and help clean out entrenched reds. The communist ambush was logged in the hillsides above the mountain gap road.

128 Reds Killed

The tanks were supported by artillery fire and allied air attacks. After the skirmish 128 reds were counted dead, more were wounded and American casualties were assessed as comparatively light.

Then the 7th went ahead and kept going Saturday after an all-quiet night.

Front observers reported no signs of enemy life clear up to the Yalu River. The 7th expected to reach the near side, opposite Manchuria, not later than Monday on a slow march with an eye cocked for ambushes such as it encountered Friday.

The clogging snow was accompanied by milder temperatures — a rise above freezing at some places from near-zero during the week. But the respite for the troops is expected to be brief. The prediction was for more dry with large drop in temperature."

Investigate Blast Which Wrecked House in Windsor

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 18—CP—A thorough investigation by fire department inspectors into the cause of the blast that wrecked a two-family brick home on Wyandotte Street West Friday continued today.

Members of the inspecting party that spent most of yesterday in the ruined house said they are certain the blast occurred in the basement of premises occupied by R. E. Howe. They said the furnace provided the ignition spark for whatever substance was responsible for the explosion.

Contrary to reports following the explosion, gas mains on Wyandotte Street, directly outside in front of the Howe residence were charged with gas. Officials are not discounting the theory that gas seepage from this source might have played its part in the disaster.

Captain Emmett Bryne, one of the inspecting party, said charred wood in the basement and smelled metal indicated "a most intense heat" in the vicinity of the original blaze. He said the sub-floor between basement and first floor was entirely burned out.

Canada's Sales to U.S. More Than Offsetting Downward Drive in Sales to Britain

Ottawa, Nov. 17—(CP)— Canada's trade in 1950 sales to the United States, riding at record shattering heights, are more than offsetting the sharp downward drive in sales to the United Kingdom.

The bureau of statistics reported yesterday that Canada's exports to the United States during the first 9 months of 1950 reached a record $1,453,700,000, a climb of more than $400,000,000 from $1,038,900,000 in the same period last year.

That gain in sales was big enough to overbalance the drop in sales to Britain to $345,900,000—down about $183,000,000 from last year's $529,200,000.

Canada's exports to all countries reached a peacetime record of $2,248,000,000 in the nine months, but her imports of $2,259,500,000 climbed in the same period, she had a surplus of $93,100,000; and in the year before, $261,600,000.

Imports from the United States ran to a high of $1,523,100,000 for the nine months, compared with last year's $1,470,600,000. Imports from Britain dropped up to $290,400,000 from last year's $240,700,000.

The net effect of Canada's buying and selling in the traditional trading triangle was a surplus of $55,500,000 with the United Kingdom—sharp down from last year's $288,400,000—and a deficit of $71,400,000 with the United States—another downward sweep from last years $431,700,000.

The records Canada has been developing all through 1950 in sales to the United States continued in September, when domestic exports hit an all-time high of $182,800,000, compared with $113,100,000 last year.

Imports from the U.S. in that month, at $177,400,000, were about average for the year. They compared with $154,500,000 in January and $195,500,000 in May.

Highest in value of all items Canada imported from the U.S. in September was the group iron and its products. At $63,668,000, it ran to a high of $81,441,000 last year.

Gunman Fires Three Shots into Cashiers Cage

Toronto, Nov. 18 — (CP)— A gunman yesterday fired three shots into the cashiers cage of an east end theatre when the girl cashier refused to hand over the money he demanded.

Police believe the bandit, armed with a German Luger, is the same one who earlier held up a cigar store, scooping up $2,500 in bills from the till.

The vicious gunman, thwarted in the attempt to hold up the Allenby Theatre, made his getaway from the cigar store after threatening a school children in the street if the proprietor gave chase.

It was Mrs. Betty Dodds who foiled his attempt at the show. When he demanded the money, she said it was on the floor. She bent down and cowered on the floor. Angered by her evasion, the thug fired the three bullets toward the floor of the cage, but all missed his frightened cashier.

Description of the man given by Mrs. Dodds of a man with pock-marked face tallied with one given by Albert Recket, whose cigar store was held up.

Says Chinese Are Resettled In Czechoslovakia

Vienna, Nov. 18 — (AP)—The Volksdeutsche (Ethnic German) refugee paper "Neue Heimat" today claims that several thousands of Chinese are being resettled in Czechoslovakia.

Practically all of them, the paper says, are being moved into the former homes of the Sudeten Germans who were driven from that country after the end of the Second World War.

Earlier this year diplomatic sources reported that 24,000 Chinese laborers were being resettled in Poland where they were working in coal mines. At that time, the sources said the resettlement was the result of a three-power agreement between Poland, China and Russia.

Gallacher Not Running

London, Nov. 18—(Reuters) — Willie Gallacher, chairman of Britain's communist party will not again seek election to parliament, it was announced today. For many years he was the only communist member of the House of Commons.

The fiery 68-year-old communist leader represented the Scottish constituency of West Fife from 1935 until February's general election when he was defeated by a labor party candidate.

Pauline Drope District Winner Public Speaking

Miss Pauline Drope, from S. S. No. 10 Tp. Hamilton, Northumberland county, will represent the Belleville district in the provincial public speaking contest to be held in Toronto next Easter.

The twelve-year-old Northumberland county girl won the right to represent her district at the district public speaking contest held Friday night at Havelock when eight contestants from six Central Ontario counties competed.

Second and third place winners in the contest were Gerry Armstrong of county with Jimmy Stafford, age 11, a Grade 7 pupil from S.S. No 29 Tyendinaga, at the second prize and Miss Sheila Currie, Grade 8 pupil from S.S. 4, Marmora, taking third place. The first three winners in the competition received silver cups, while all contestants were the recipients of ball point pens.

Fire-Damaged Building Kills Man

Cowra, Australia, Nov. 18 (Reuters) — The black flag of mutiny fluttered today over an immigration camp where white Europeans are on a hunger strike.

The immigrants lowered the Australian flag and raised their home-made standard in protest against the food served.

About 3,500 other inmates of the camp threatened to join the strike unless grievances were remedied.

The camp 'official denied rations had been cut.

Told to Concentrate On Joe's Birthday, Not on Christmas

Berlin, Nov. 18 — (AP)—East Germany's communist free German youth is under instructions to mobilize Christmas for the little bourgeois affair" and concentrate instead on the birthday celebration of Prime Minister Stalin. Stalin's birthday is four days before Christmas. He will be 71.

On that day 4,000,000 members of communist youth unions in the communist - ruled East Germany will march in parades without pay as a tribute to Stalin.

DRIVER KILLED

Peterborough, Nov. 18. (CP)— Claude Lidgstrom, 43, of Toronto, was killed when other persons suffered serious injury yesterday in an automobile-truck collision four miles west of here.

In hospital are Lindstrom's widow, Mrs. May Lindstrom, and John W. Dexter, of Levack, Ont., occupants of the car driven by Lindstrom.

Police said the truck was driven by Allan Dillion, Oshawa.

ABBOTT'S SURPLUS 25 TIMES HIGHER THAN TARGET AIM

Likely to Shrink Sharply Before End Fiscal Year

Ottawa, Nov. 18 — (CP) — Finance Minister Abbott, aiming at a $15,000,000 budgetary surplus in the current fiscal year, has chalked up a credit of about 25 times that amount in the first seven months.

But the April-October surplus of $363,100,000 announced yesterday, higher than the $303,800,000 in the same period last year, is likely to shrink sharply before the end of the fiscal year rolls around next March.

Past experience has shown that most of the heavy government spending develops near the end of the year, when annual accounts are closed and bills coming up in batches for government payment.

Mr. Abbott's treasury statement of revenue and expenditure showed an increase last month in spending for defence, old-age pensions, unemployment insurance and family allowances.

All revenues were higher.

Expenditures for the first seven months, at $1,171,900,000, were about $35,000,000 higher than the $1,138,500,000 in the same period last year.

Defence spending climbed to $229,165,900 from $172,158,700; old-age pensions to $49,800,000 from $39,700,000; family allowances to $179,200,000 from $172,000,000, and unemployment insurance to $28,200,000 from $25,300,000.

The increase in spending was more than offset by higher revenues. At $1,500,000,000 for the first seven months, revenues were about $90,000,000 greater than the $1,440,000,000 in the same period a year ago.

Revenue increases were noted all down the line, from corporation tax which jumped to $371,-700,000 from $334,600,000 to customs import duties which climbed to $147,800,000 from $127,900,000.

Seven Persons In Hospital After Accident

Woodstock, Ont., Nov. 18—(CP) A five-car pileup on Highway 2 at Beachville, five miles west of here, sent seven persons to hospital early today. Extent of their injuries was not known but several of them were in an attempted exit with extra bullets which made it, in effect, a sub-machine gun.

"I'm the one you're looking for," Ingenito said calmly as he surrendered without a struggle.

On Ingenito's left wrist were slight scratches brought on the one seat was a barber's-type razor. Police said he had tried to commit suicide.

Estranged Wife's Family Victims Of Machine Gun

Refuses to Admit Shootings Or to Make a Statement

By FRANK O'BRIEN

Vineland, N.J., Nov. 18, (AP)— In a crazed tour of three homes, a "pleasant faced" young man last night machine-gunned to death five members of his estranged wife's family and wounded her and three others.

He was captured 4 1-2 hours later by two New Jersey State troopers after an automobile chase down a country lane.

The 25-year-old gunman Ernest Ingenito, was taken under heavy guard to State police barracks for questioning.

Drawn and haggard after his ordeal, he made no statement and refused to admit the shootings, police said.

Authorities pieced together the story of the horror-filled moments that brought death to:

Michael Mazzoli, 44, Ingenito's father-in-law.

Mrs. Pearl Mazzoli, 45, Ingenito's mother-in-law.

John Pioppi, 46, uncle of Ingenito's wife.

Mrs. Theresa Pioppi, grandmother of Ingenito's wife.

Marion Pioppi, 28, John's wife.

Wounded were the gunman's wife, Tessie, 23; a nine-year-old cousin, Jean Pioppi; Frank Mazzoli, 23, Michael Mazzoli's brother, and Frank's wife, Hilda, 34.

All Wounded Critical

Frank Mazzoli and Jean Pioppi underwent emergency operations shortly after being taken to hospital. All wounded except Mrs. Piomello were listed in critical condition.

The shootings occurred less than 20 miles from the scene of another massacre. Sept. 6, 1949, Howard Unruh walked grimly down Camden's river road, killing 13 victims with a pistol—even with a Luger pistol. Unruh now is held in a hospital for the insane.

Police said Ingenito was heavily armed when captured by two State troopers.

The two spotted a car answering the description sent out when Ingenito fled the scene of the slayings. The policemen forced the car to the side of the road and held Ingenito at the point of a sub-machine gun as he climbed out of the car.

Had Pistol in Belt

In his belt, Ingenito had a .38-calibre pistol. In the car were a .30-calibre sub-machine gun and a .32-calibre carbine. Police said the submachine gun had an attachment with extra bullets which made it, in effect, a sub-machine gun.

"I'm the one you're looking for," Ingenito said calmly as he surrendered without a struggle.

On Ingenito's left wrist were slight scratches brought on the one seat was a barber's-type razor. Police said he had tried to commit suicide.

Defer Sentence For One Week On Theft Charge

Kitchener, Nov. 18 — (CP) — Sentence was deferred one week by Magistrate Hugh Polson here Friday in the case of Robert Hyatt, 32, of suburban Kingdale who pleaded guilty to theft of $10,000 from the mails.

Evidence showed Hyatt, driver for a contractor trucker of the Kitchener post office, fabricated a story of a hold-up Monday night and took the money from a bag of registered mail.

The money, found slumped over the wheel of his truck about a mile from the C.N.R. station, told police he had been held up and slugged while en route to the station from the post office.

Under police questioning Hyatt, a few hours later said his story was a hoax. He led police to a field near where the truck was found and the money was recovered.

Gordon MacKay, defence counsel, said the court that on the day of the theft, Hyatt's three children were ill and he had feared one would have to undergo an operation.

Crown Attorney W. P. Clement suggested the accused had been under a financial strain which might have accounted for the "sudden brainstorm."

Magistrate Polson indicated that but for the special category in which theft from the mails has been placed, he would not hesitate in granting suspended sentence.

'Beboppers' Find Unwelcome Sign In Many Schools

Milwaukee, Nov. 18 — (AP) — Tee-age "beboppers" are finding themselves unwelcome in Milwaukee schools.

They became objects of unfriendly attention yesterday in both public and parochial (separate) school officials and even a group of students leaders joined in a campaign against "beboppers."

About 50 student council representatives of 14 Roman Catholic high schools met with Msgr. Edmund J. Goebel, Archdiocesan superintendent of schools. He said the group decided on a ban against "all dress that goes with bebops."

Such youths are said to wear sloppy army field jackets for both sexes; rainbow-hued drape pants, loud sports jackets and "duck-tail" haircuts for boys, and long, tight skirts, babushkas and saddle shoes for girls.

Harold B. Vincent, superintendent of public schools, said after a meeting on the subject with principals that their goal is "proper decorum." Items of dress would be left up to the principals.

Msgr. Goebel told 200 Roman Catholic parents that bebop leaders and members perform "vicious or obscene acts."

Entertainment Costs Low in Tokyo, Carnival Atmosphere by Night

Tokyo, Nov. 18—CP—This vast city is a fascinating spot at night. The streets are a jumble of bright, color and action. Electric signs flash; hawkers shout and display a thousand-and-one gimmicks and doo-dads; the streets are packed with jostling, chattering crowds.

Most night clubs open around 6:30 or 7 p. m. and close at 11 p. m.

Inside there are balloons hanging from the ceilings and fire crackers and paper hats at every table. The firecrackers, when set off by pulling a small string, shoot out streamers and a noisy spark for whatever substance was responsible for the explosion.

Another said: "I don't care whether they (the guests) are Japanese, white or black as long as they spend money."

A fair-sized club employs about 100 girls who can make about 400 yen a night—slightly more than $1. They get a cut of the club's take.

Few speak some English, but all have learned at least two English phrases: "Good evening" and "Thank you." I do hope you will come again."

A Japanese night club is no decorous place. It is loud, and the floor show consists only of a ragged stream of strippers, some amateurish.

One of the main sports for drunks is to shoot streams of paper from the firecrackers at the strippers.

The bands—there are usually two or three—play mostly American jazz.

If a patron doesn't care for the girl who sits down with him, he merely asks her to leave and he selects another if he wishes.

An evening in a club costs about 1,500 yen, or $4, and you can do it on much less.

One of the main differences from a Canadian club is that the foreigner can discuss the women openly without having to drop outside to do it.

20-Year-Old Soprano Making First Appearance at Met Gets Ovation

New York, Nov. 18 — (AP) — All dreams came true last night at the Metropolitan Opera for Belleville's Mildred Roberta Peters.

With only last minute notice, the little 20-year-old soprano walked onto the Met's huge stage and made her long-awaited bow as Zerlina in Mozart's "Don Giovanni."

It was three lifetime "firsts" for Miss Peters, who is hardly out of school. It was her first stage appearance, her first concert, and her first opera.

Last night her performance, it guaranteed her a first contract.

Last January, the Met's new manager, Rudolf Bing, heard Miss Peters sing in an audition, liked her voice, and added her to the roster for some tentative work.

Yesterday, only a few hours before the Metropolitan's first "Don Giovanni" of the season, soprano Nadine Conner was stricken with food poisoning and had to cancel her appearance.

Bing summoned Miss Peters backstage and asked her if she could sing the part of the pretty little country bride who manages to escape the clutches of the lady-killing Don Giovanni.

Miss Peters said she could, she crammed for the role, which she knew by heart, and spent two hours' hopeful singing practice.

First the stage director to show her curtain, spotlight and traffic for costuming. Finally, just an hour before curtain time, conductor Fritz Reinder sat down at the piano and gave her a quick musical rehearsal.

Zerlina has three big numbers in the duet with the wicked Don, "La Ci Darem La Mano," and two tender solos, "Batti, Batti, O Bel Masetto," and "Vedrai Carino."

With each one the applause grew and grew, until after the last she got a real ovation — the biggest demonstration of the evening — and was brought back for four curtain calls, blushing and smiling.

Market Research Subject of Talk To Sales, Ad Club

J. H. Sunley, sales promotion manager of the Canadian division of American Can, spoke to the Belleville Sales and Ad Club monthly dinner meeting last night at the Quinte Hotel. He spoke on market research and it applied to the salesman and the sales manager.

Mr. Sunley divided market research into two categories —what it, meant to an advertising man, and the sales approach. "Various techniques in practice today in market research can be drawn together to spell the difference between industry disaster and business success," Mr. Sunley said.

"The market expert illustrated his points with several case histories. Most outstanding of the cases showed how a company with the principal to be hired would not necessarily be head of the new school now under construction.

C. L. Hyde and Son were awarded the contract to install a new washbasin in a room at King George School and to repair the cracks in the cenater piping at Queen Alexandra school to make for more efficient operation of second floor water fountains.

The board refused to pay a bill submitted by Electric Service for work done at the Prince Charles School, noting that the proper procedure was for the bill to be presented through the school architect.

The board received communication from the city clerk noting that Alderman R. J. Clarke had been named to the Quinte High School area committee and also received a letter from Major H. J. Allin expressing appreciation to the Board for its assistance in making the recent visit of Prime Minister St. Laurent a success.

Night Class Instructors

Approval was given by the board to a recommendation from the advisory-vocational committee recommending the names of R. H. Vaughn and A. E. Hinchliffe as instructors in the night school classes at the collegiate.

Seek Royal Assent to Name New School in E. Belleville After Queen Elizabeth

Application for Royal consent to use the name "Queen Elizabeth" for the new public school now being erected in East Belleville will be made by the board of education. Choice of the name "Queen Elizabeth" for the school was made at the regular monthly meeting of the board held Friday evening with decision being made to apply for consent to use the name.

By way of making preparation for the opening of the new school on its completion the board announced it would give consideration to applications for the position of an additional public school principal at a special meeting of the board to be held on November 22nd. It was noted that the principal to be hired would not necessarily be head of the new school now under construction.

Night Class Instructors

Approval was given by the board to a recommendation from the advisory-vocational committee recommending the names of R. H. Vaughn and A. E. Hinchliffe as instructors in the night school classes at the collegiate.

Approval for the purchase of one new sewing machine and for a program of repair for other sewing machines at the school, was also given.

The resignation of Mrs. W. J. Berry as public school teacher, effective Dec. 31st, was accepted. The board commended Miss Phyllis May for her proposal of an in-service training in vocal music and recommended that teachers be notified of co-operate.

The board accepted with appreciation the offer of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association to donate $150 in cash and value toward the installation of a public address and intercommunication system and recommended that the board proceed immediately with the purchase of a suitable unit.

City council will again be asked to see that the board is anxious to see the formation of a city department of health and will extend its co-operation in the formation and duties of a department.

T. F. S. Enrolment

An enrolment of 2,177 pupils in the public schools of the city was reported by inspector Administrator L. J. Kells. Attendance for the month of October was 97.37 per cent.

The number reported that local teachers are continuing their activities both in the construction of curriculum and in the necessary response to requirements made by the minister. A preliminary report on grade 7 science has been presented and the committee on social studies has announced its intention to report.

An enrolment of 600 students was reported at the collegiate, exclusive of the vocational school, and word from Miss Josephine Tuckell, chairman of the collegiate management committee.

The board's report, submitted by Mrs. B. Watt, public health nurse, showed comparative absence of communicable diseases with only three cases of whooping cough made by the school infirmary being reported. Forty-two pupils were examined but been given during the month with 34 vision tests and three hearing tests being given.

Koreans - Baffled By Scots Words Of Burns' Song

Seoul, Nov. 18—(Reuters) — The broad dialect of Scotland's national poet, Robert Burns, proved too much for Koreans' shaky English.

An English-language news sheet, the pride of this city's Korean English students, today printed Burns' "A Man's a Man For A' That.".

The Koreans were baffled.

Finally Scottish troops of the British brigade were called in to translate.

The newspaper promised to print "English translations" with all future Burns excerpts.

Early History of the Moira Valley

From Moira Valley Conservation Report

(12th Instalment)

MILLS

Since the Moira River was turning the wheels of about 28 mills in 1836, it was already one of the most important mill stgeams of the province. The new mills were built until after 1842, for there were now quite enough grist mills for the needs of the settlers and, though the lumber trade was growing steadily greater, most of the timber was shipped out without being sawn.

During the next three years, however, about a dozen new mills were built, (most of them saw mills), some of which were certainly added to existing mill-dams. In 1846 there seems to have been about 40 water mills on the river and the tributaries. The number of grist mills remained about the same, but there were now 15 saw mills in Thurlow township. Four of these were in Belleville (one a steam mill) and one may have been outside the watershed. About half the rest were small mills, often attached to grist mills and supplying a local demand for lumber, but the mills at Cannifton and one or two others were already producing lumber for export. A new dam had probably been built at "Yankee Mill" (Plainfield) while the other new mills were on old millsites.

There was now a sawmill in the first concession of Huntingdon, south of Moira, another at Chisholm's Mills in Tyendinaga and one in Sidney township, where there seems also to have been a small grist mill. There were four saw mills in Hungerford, but as yet only two in Madoc township. The location of the Hungerford mills is uncertain; the second saw mill in Madoc was probably Van-Kleek's near Cooper. (Barnabas VanKleek had settled there in 1841. The Flints saw mill, northwest of Madoc village is also a very early mill and may well be one of the three listed in 1850. This little mill is still standing with its upright "Muley" saw still in place, a most uncommon survival in Ontario. The whole group of O'Flara buildings, with their attractive setting, might be worth preserving as an excellent specimen of a homestead of about a century ago.)

It is possible that there were now one or two saw mills on Parks Creek in Tyendinaga. At this time there were three woollen mills in Belleville (listed as "cloth factory", one paper mill, and a planing mill. Two axe factories, a pail factory and a chair factory were also there. Some more use of waterpower, but cannot properly be described as mills.

Five saw mills were reported from Madoc and Elzevir township in 1851. There was certainly a saw mill at Queensborough and probably another in Elzevir. There were now six saw mills in Hungerford and two or three in Rawdon in the watershed. These new mills, with one on the Clare River in Sheffield township, brought the number of saw mills up from 25 to 31 (omitting Flint and Yeoman's steam saw mill at Belleville.) A grist mill newly built or re-opened at Belleville and a new one at Plainfield brought the number of this type of water mill to 13 and the total of water-driven mills was now about 50.

The numbers of water mills in the Moira was possibly highest about 1856. Steam saw mills were already coming into use and there were three or four on the Moira at that time. Some of these steam sawmills were already "portable" though hardly so easy to move as those now in use. (Judging by the advertising cuts the "portable" saw mills of the late "fifties" had their boilers set up on a brick base and had to be dismantled before they were moved. There were no permanent saw mills in Belleville and one or more in Thurlow township.)

The improvement of transportation and the depletion of the woodland did away with the need for many scattered mills in well settled areas and when the great building period of the "fifties" and early "sixties" was over the local demand for lumber grew less. Lumbering went on actively north of Number 7 Highway and saw mills continued to be built on the streams there and in other undeveloped areas, but in the older settled regions saw milling tended to be concentrated in the larger and more accessible mills. In 1856 there were at least 35 water saw mills in the watershed and this is probably the largest number to be found there at any one time.

Among the new mills were two in the northwest corner of Rawdon township above Moira Lake, and two built by the Honorable Billa Flint. The Flint mill at Troy (Actiolite) was built in 1847 and that at Flints Mills (Flinton) in Kaladar township, perhaps a little earlier. Grist mills had been added to the saw mills at Queensborough, Bogart, Troy (there may have been a saw mill at "Troy" before Flint built his mills there) and Clareview. There was a carding and fulling mill at Tweed and cloth mills at Cannifton and Belleville. The total of water mills was about 57 and this also very probably represents the largest number of mills ever to be found on the Moira.

The expansion in milling was leading to improvements in technique. This was most noticeable in saw milling where speed was essential since the log-running season was brief and the shipping period limited. Shortage of water sometimes increased the need for quick production, but there were few mills on the Moira that suffered from this inconvenience. The old "sash saw" or "gate" and "Muley" saws, "gate" and "Muley" saws are simply modernization of the two types of rip saw used in pitsawing by hand. (Gate saw blades were strained in a frame or "gate" on the same principle as the buck-saw. Free action of the "Muley," derived from the ordinary "drag" saw, made it very popular in Canada, especially for small mills. Gang saw blades were also set in frames or "gates" and were exceedingly slow. A man could keep a rip or gang saw and have his dinner while the saw was working its way through the several logs.)

"Gang" or multiple saws were introduced very early in an effort to speed things up. These moved no faster but made 12 cuts at once. Circular saws had been used in the "forties" but the "Muley" saw continued in use for more than 20 years. Water turbine wheels or a crude type began to replace the wooden "thirler" and "tub". (Flutter wheels were small wheels working on the undershot principle. It was used to work the saw, while a "tub" wheel — a kind of a primitive wooden turbine — was used to run the carriage. Undershot wheels are turned by the force of water running under the wheel in a "race" and striking flanges on the rim. They required little "head" but had to be of great size to develop enough power for grinding. Overshot wheels were turned by the weight and force of water carried over the wheel in a "flume" and falling into buckets on its rim. They developed much more power in proportion to their size which depended on the height of the dam. The "breast" wheel was a compromise between the two systems. The water struck the buckets half way up the wheel and flowed away beneath it,) which had come into use in saw mills from the "thirties." Turbines and overshot wheels made a great increase in the rate of production but both water and steam driven saw mills were rare even 20 years ago than they are today.

Few changes were made in the power machinery of grist mills at this time. The "undershot," "overshot" and "breast" wheels continued to be used, the type being determined by local conditions. Improvements in the "turbines" and "fifties" were mostly directed at increasing quantity and improving quality. Flour mills were provided with more "run of stones" with finer stones and finer stones and bolts were procured. More of the grist mills were producing white flour as well as the whole wheat flour, which was all they had formerly produced. Steam power was not used for mills other than saw mills, at any rate outside Belleville, and steam mills were not common in the watershed during the 19th century.

Afternoon Aux. Hears Talk On Japanese

The Afternoon Auxiliary of the Tabernacle United Church Women's Missionary Society held their November meeting in the ladies' parlor on Wednesday with the president, Mrs. W. J. Harrison, presiding and Mrs. M. P. Duff, at the piano.

Mrs. K. D. Archibald, for Christian Stewardship, read a letter by Mrs. Gordon H. Watts, Dominion Board secretary of Christian Stewardship, from the Missionary Monthly. Mrs. William Baird, Literature secretary, was requested to purchase 50 calendars to be resold. Mrs. Harrison reported the need for overseas clothing after which she introduced the guest speaker Miss Clazie, who expressed her appreciation of the fine play which the Mission Band children of the church had put on at the sectional rally, and showed that God had made of one blood all the people of the earth. It is only beneath the skin that people are different.

Fies for New Canadians

Miss Clazie made a plea for all new Canadians, who have left their native homelands, and are strangers in a strange country. They want to be friendly, what is being done for them? A handshake, or a kindly smile means more than one can imagine. There are several of these strangers in the city.

About the Japanese of whom mention was requested, the speaker brought greetings from Mrs. Nakada and her husband who is a fine musician teaching Christian music to choirs in Japan. Mrs. Nakada has trained several large choirs, but only Christians were permitted to use his music, and then they must sing it from the heart, sincerely.

Japanese—Kind, Loyal

As a people, the Japanese are kind and loyal. The record of them hating war as do the people of Canada. She remembered one young Japanese who made a suicide pact and died rather than bear arms with which to kill others. The Christian Japanese are loyal to those who have given them the Gospel, and taught them about Jesus.

Relief work is a 'must' in Japan now, and much is being done, but at the most it seems so little. Letters of thanks for gifts received shows how deeply the appreciation of these people goes. The youth of Japan are eager for the Gospel, missionaries are badly needed. Jesus came to save the whole world, regardless of race or color. Some can go; some can give; others can pray. May each and all do what lies to hand with God's help.

Miss Clazie closed the meeting with Kagawa's prayer: "We pray thee, O God, to build Thy church throughout all nations, not of stone, brick or wood, but out of living souls, made strong by Thy Spirit, through Jesus Christ, our Lord."

Mrs. W. B. May extended appreciative thanks to Miss Clazie for her fine address, and Mrs. A. H. Fisher, assisted by Miss M. Johns, Mrs. F. Isard, Mrs. R. Woodward, and Mrs. Robb closed the worship service.

Mrs. A. D. Archibald, Mrs. G. F. Isard, Mrs. F. Isard were appointed as a nominating committee to bring in a new slate of officers for 1951.

Bear Greater Share Of Public Services

Owen Sound, Nov. 17 (CP) — Health Minister Phillips of Ontario officiated at the opening ceremonies for a new $216,000 public school in nearby Chesley last night. The school was erected on the site of Chesley's former public school, destroyed by fire in February 1949.

Dr. Phillips said the province now was paying 40 percent of the costs of such schools as against the still further relief for property tax-payers. He said a plan was being worked out which would see the Dominion and Provincial governments would assume a "much greater share" of capital costs of community public services.

Milk Producers' Strike Will Go on

Chatham, Nov. 17. (CP)—Despite an arbitration ruling by Judge Eric Cross, the Kent County Milk producers' strike will go on as scheduled tomorrow.

In telegrams received today Judge Cross revealed that he had set $4.20 as a fair price granting producers a 20 cent per hundredweight increase. They had demanded 40 cents.

E. E. Stewart, secretary of the Producers Association, said that the $4.20 settlement was "not acceptable" to the producers. They had $4.40 and that's what we want."

Lyle Chapple representing the distributors said his group was ready to accept the $4.20 and ready to pay that price to producers.

Not-So-Impeccable Advice for Travellers

Montreal, Nov. 18 — (CP) — Sir William P. Hildered is an impeccable Englishman who heads an international globe-girdling organization known as the International Air Transport Association. Yet his not-so-impeccable advice to border-crossing travellers is: how to handle surly customs officials is:

"Poke the silly bureaucrat firmly on the nose."

Sir William came out with this advice while speaking at a meeting of the Institute of Aircraft Traffic Officers, Inc.

"These government people do a big unnecessary job and should not be allowed to torture and frighten passengers," he claimed.

MARMORA

Sacred Heart Hall Packed for Second Night Bazaar

Marmora—Despite the very inclement weather, Sacred Heart Hall was packed again on Wednesday evening for the second night of the annual bazaar. The euchre game was well patronized. The winners being: Miss Eva Shannon for the ladies' prize and Mr. J. Calnan of Havelock securing the gentleman's prize. Games Booth Well Patronized

The games and booths were again well patronized and the sumptuous chicken dinner was appreciated by a large number of patrons.

The following clergy from neighboring parishes were visitors at the bazaar: Very Rev. H. J. Farrel, V. F. Perth; Very Rev. J. J. Shannon, V. F. Tweed; Rev. T. F. Martin, Desmonte; Rev. J. Briceland, Reed; Rev. G. O'Hearn, Stirling; Rev. A. Walsh, Kingston; Rev. J. Sullivan, Rector of St. Mary's Cathedral, Kingston; Rev. L. Lamarche, Ulleskelf; Rev. F. Hyland, Madoc; Rev. J. Buckley, Belleville; Rev. H. Murphy, S. F. M., Kingston.

CENTURIES OLD

The name "doll" for children's toys is believed to have come from the old Norse "daul," meaning woman.

FREAK FIRE

A brief story found its way across the AP wires on Thursday. It told graphically the sequence of events which followed when someone in Washington forgot to turn off a switch of an electric iron. What happened in the apartment house is told in a few words which speak with warning to every user of an electrical appliance to be careful to turn off switches, especially on irons when the job of ironing is completed.

Firemen found that the iron had burned through the ironing board, had fallen to the floor, then burned its way through the flooring and ended up against a lead water pipe.

The pipe melted and the spray which was forced out of the opening made by the melting of the lead sprayed enough water to extinguish the fire which had started smouldering. The damage was slight, the result of a stroke of good fortune.

Always they do events so transpire. The hot iron might have set the house ablaze with disastrous results to the property and furniture of the tenants.

No two fires have exactly the same conditions. Under other circumstances there might have been conditions which would have meant the destruction of the house or even threat to or loss of life. Not always is there the good fortune that there should be a leaden pipe to melt and let out a spray to put out the fire.

NOVEMBER

November, the month which often brings the first of the snappy cold weather, is already half over and in the two weeks and more which have passed there has been a variety of weather which has been a surprise. There has been a chill but more strangely there has been very warm weather with the mercury climbing to abnormal levels for this season.

Ottawa Journal says that this was labelled by the Indians as the Mad Month "because in these brown weeks partridges and rabbits go berserk and fly aimlessly hither and yon in the woodlands. This is frequently a time of cold, driving rains; sharp, saw-toothed winds whip leaves and dust into dancing columns along country roads. Between brief intervals of mild weather come lashing forests that blanch swamp reeds and meadow grass to a ghostly gray and drain the last of the thin wine color from ornate candles.

"Late-staying flocks of cedar waxwings feed on rowan berries and the last of the redwing blackbirds leave for warmer regions. Red squirrels make final nut caches and mound builder ants retreat to the low tunnels of their underground nests. Solitary crows perch by the hour in bare pasture elms, and on chill mornings one finds the pointed tricks of mink along black mudbanks of lowland creeks. Muskrats put last touches on their reed-thatched domes in the swamps and plump coons explore the corn shocks at night."

A RELIC OF 1828

A stone of much interest is on display at St. John's, Newfoundland. It is what is known as an observation stone and bears the date 1828. It was taken recently from Fort Townsend at St. John's and once served as an observation stone for a number of years when wooden ships crossed the main, manned by iron men.

Barely legible are the various important latitude and longitude figures which enabled the sailors to determine their exact position in Newfoundland and to set their charts and compasses.

On the stone is the following data:

Latitude 47 degrees 33 minutes 42 seconds north.

Longitude from Meridan of 10 degrees 52 minutes 31 seconds east Halifax.

Observation, 1828, from Greenwich 52 degrees 45 minutes 29 seconds.

Variation 28 degrees 47 minutes westerly of compass.

Today the mariner lives in quite a different world in which scientific apparatus is at hand to make easier the tasks of the men who go to the sea, no longer in wooden ships, but in giant craft, speedy and stout against every wind that blows.

Since this marker was used many a storm has tossed the waves and many a ship has been built and put to sea. Today mighty craft ply the ocean equipped with a wealth of scientific equipment.

On it barely legible are inscribed the various important latitude and longitude figures which enabled the sailors to determine their exact position in Newfoundland and to set their charts and compasses.

After the stone is polished up and the lettering renewed it will be put on permanent display here by the Newfoundland Historical Society.

Loving kindness is greater than laws; and the charities of life are more than all the ceremonies. — Talmud.

FAITH AND TULIPS

As I was planting tulip bulbs my watching grandson said:
"How do you know which ones are pink and red?"
His eager questions bothered me as from the ground
I rose.
"I do not know myself," said
I. "The man who raised them knows.

"I have to take his word for it.
In him I have to trust.
He tells me these are tulips
red, Believe in him
I must.

Were I to tear these bulbs apart I could not prove a thing.
I've only faith that they will bear red blossoms in the spring.

"And as with bulbs it is with us. God sends us here to toil.
We're given time in which to grow as flowers have the soil.
We must have faith our souls within their purpose here will show,
But for what splendor we were shaped, 'tis only God can know."

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Nov. 18th., 1930.

Feasibility of a reduction in the Bell Board of Governors of the Belleville General Hospital, the addition of another physician on the Board and a general rise in inaugurate the "open staff" plan at the institution were discussed at a meeting in the city hall last night at which the Board, the Belleville Ladies Association, the city, county and medical associations were represented.

The earnings of the local electric light system this year will equal a dividend of 35.2 per cent on a private company basis. Reports show that as an investment, Belleville citizens have done very well for every one invested. Figures were released by the manager of the Belleville Electric Commission, Mr. O. H. Scott.

30 YEARS AGO

Nov. 18th., 1920.

The first snow has arrived and snow shovels are again in use. As a result of the snow there were not as many automobiles on the road as usual; many car owners walked.

Dr. Joseph Chant of this city has been appointed oculist and aurist at the Ontario School for the Deaf.

Col. Charles R. McCullough, founder of the Canadian Club, and president of the Association of Canadian Clubs, will pay a visit to Belleville shortly.

Miss Beatrice Jones has returned to New York City after visiting her mother, Mrs. M. Jones, Dundas Street East.

40 YEARS AGO

Nov. 18th., 1910.

At the Epworth League Convention of the Belleville District representatives, the Rev. L. S. Wight, Conference League President, gave a stirring and practical address on "Evangelism in Epworth League Work."

The tender of Mr. Thomas Manley for the construction of the Front Street sewer has been accepted by the city council.

The assembly held in the Academy under the auspices of the City Baseball Club was in every way an enjoyable affair. The patrons were Messrs. J. Elliott, J. W. Murray, J. P. C. Phillips, C. M. Stork, H. Sneyd and R. Tannahill; the stewards were Messrs. H. F. Clarke, N. C. deP'encier, L. B. Elliott, C. B. Green, F. C. Murray, J. E. Rice, A. C. Rowland and H. B. Wilson; secretary, W. A. Allen. The Sprague Orchestra provided excellent music and the eterie of seats was well done by Mr. E. F. Dickens.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The Cree Indians of northern Saskatchewan have trouble with the word squirrel. The call it ayamihew. And all across northern Canada, the common little red skwuller has become an increasingly important article of commerce. The northern Alberta squirrel is a beautiful animal to pelt. It sells for better than sixty cents, as do some from northern Saskatchewan.

The Ontario red skwuller is a smaller and fuzzier animal, and its pelt goes for about two-thirds the price of the western fur. The British Columbia squirrel is also inferior to the Alberta.

A few years ago, when long fure like the fox were the fashion, squirrels were not even taken by trappers. But with the advent of the short furs like mink, all the short-furred creatures of the wilds have become valuable to man; and therefore on the run.

Ontario does not exact a royalty on its squirrels, and this is the figures for the whole dominion do not include, by any means, all the squirrels taken per annum. But the latest record is 1,540,000 of the little animals who, in the year 1949, contributed their mite, at 62 cents apiece to the prosperity of Canada.

The great majority of squirrels are shot by the Indians mostly with the, ubiquitous .22 rifle, though some trap.

The fur is mostly died by the trade, a good deal of it is exported to the United States and Europe. At the same time, considerable quantities of the larger grey squirrel are imported by Canada from the United States and Russia. The fur is used for short coats, capes and trimming. It is not a very durable fur, but increasingly popular.

The Hudson's Bay experts say that squirrel fur can be made to masquerade under other names, as for many furs do. It lives a squirrel and dies a squirrel, except when it comes into the trading post. And then it is a skwuller."

A DIFFERENT KIND OF WAR

Every day, if we have any heart in our breast at all, we think about the suffering which soldiers have passed through in recent months in Korea. All sorts of stories about heroism unparalleled have come out of the heat of that struggle.

But here is a Korean story which I heard recently and which I think is interesting. In one of our seminaries at the present time is a young man, a soldier in the last war, whose military duty took him into Korea. There he came in contact with many magnificent Christians whom the Korean church, with the aid of the American missionaries, has been raising up in recent generations. The boy had little interest at that time in religion and none at all in foreign missions. But what he saw among these Korean Christians made such an impression upon him that he became back and entered a seminary. He is now preparing himself to go out a some later date and help the Koreans strengthen their church and extend its influences to multitudes still untouched.

This is a pleasant situation to confront in these days when other brave Americans have been laying down their lives in Korea for the cause of democracy. This seminary student, veteran of the last war, is preparing himself to go back to Korea to wage a different and even more significant battle, when circumstances allow.

Restoration Work Proves Tough Job in Manitoba

Morris, Man. — (CP) — The road to rehabilitation is rough in flood-ravaged Morris.

Although the Red River receded five months ago, the Southern Manitoba town of 1,100 still bears its scars. High cost of labor and materials is making the restoration difficult.

The Red River Valley Board has awarded about $1,000,000 to repair homes in the area. About half has been spent.

Some residents have overspent their grants. A few say the Board was niggardly in damage appraisal. Others complain of high building costs.

One Morris business man, who asked to remain anonymous, said "scandalous prices" are being charged by contractors and lumber dealers. He said the price of lumber in flooded districts is higher than elsewhere and that workers are getting as much as $1.45 an hour.

Mayor Harry Shewman of Morris said the complaints were being well treated by the board "except in a few cases." The biggest problem was a shortage of experienced labor. He said it is not true that contractors and lumber dealers have exploited the public.

But he said appraisers who checked farms have not been as fair. Letters were having a tough time. Many had asked for reappraisals.

Farmer's Problem

Mayor Shewman said the farmer is expected to repair his home, barn, machine shop and granary for the same amount as the town dweller gets to rebuild a home.

Only two families have quit the town as a result of the flood.

Three miles north of Morris is the Charlie Snarr farm. Before the flood it was prosperous. There was a seven-room house and sturdy farm buildings. Last spring the Red swept across the farm.

"Nobody along the whole Red River Valley was hit harder," Snarr said. The property still is a pathetic scene of upturned buildings and smashed wreckage.

A board appraiser proposed a grant of $4,300 to put it back into shape. Mr. Snarr asked for a reappraisal, on grounds "it cost me about that much to replace the foundation of my house." He estimated it would cost $15,000 to restore the farm buildings to preflood condition.

"My livelihood depends on buildings other than my dwelling," said Mr. Snarr. "I've got to fix them to carry on."

Kinsey, Postal Dept. Quarrel Over Manuscript

Indianapolis, Nov. 18 — (AP)— The author of books on human sex behavior and the United States customs officers in Indianapolis and Washington were at odds today over what is scientific art and literature.

Dr. Alfed C. Kinsey, Indiana University author whose best sellers, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male," won great acclaim and also aroused much criticism, struck another impasse Thursday in his quest for research materials. He is writing a sixth volume on women.

Alden H. Baker, collector of customs at Indianapolis, said he received Thursday a shipment of material addressed to Dr. Kinsey. He said it included books, photographs and etchings.

"That's what I want to describe it over the phone," Baker said.

Kinsey said Baker sent to Washington a package of materials addressed to Dr. Kinsey. Baker asked for a ruling on whether it could be admitted to the U.S. The material was from correspondents in Europe.

"It was d— dirty stuff," said Baker. "I felt sorry for Kinsey but I'm not going to send this through the mail. There was nothing scientific about it."

Dr. Kinsey has protested a 1933 revenue service ruling which makes inadmissible much material of nude embraces or sexy literature. He has maintained the law grants exceptions to scientists and medical men in matters of this sort.

W. R. Johnson, Washington customs officer, said that it appeared to him that Kinsey's material was of "obscene" matter of any kind, he explained.

TETANY IN ADULTS IS WIDELY PREVALENT

A peculiar state called tetany in infants has been recognized for at least by the textbooks for many years. In fact when I was an intern in a county hospital with a large maternity and pediatric service, I frequently saw such cases. All in infants fed on the bottle. From that experience and from study of textbooks I acquired the impression that tetany (not to be confused with lockjaw, which is called tetanus) was limited to infants. From the fact that I was not taught differently in medical school and never encountered a case, I inferred that tetany must have been peculiar to babies without mothers, 100 per cent efficient, that is. As we know now, there was considerable truth in this surmise.

I never saw or heard of a case of tetany in an adult in my experience as an intern, a country doctor, a city doctor, an attending physician on the hospital staff.

Since then I have learned that tetany is not only prevalent among mature adults but it has become widely prevalent in the past twenty years, and I am afraid only few of the cases are diagnosed by physicians.

This is not because all the real doctors are out of step with it. The reason why tetany is not diagnosed in adult patients is simply that the middle aged or elderly persons who suffer with it do not consult physicians.

This is Yankeeland, remember! In my Indiana & Yankee as no one who lives anywhere in North America. Yankees are notorious for doctoring themselves with nostrums. A good many Yankees don't admit it, because it Wisecres. That is, they think they know much or perhaps more than ordinary doctors about the diagnosis and treatment of some ailments, and they like to "try" this or that remedy, diet or treatment instead of obtaining medical advice, or even on the sly while ostensibly under the doctor's care.

Characteristic of infantile tetany is contractory or cramp of both wrists, sometimes the feet too. The baby (6 months to 18 months old) is found with the convulsions from slight feverish illness of any kind. Breath-holding spells are common. The baby is subject to spasmodic croup.

That's what I mean by tetany the chief complaint is painful cramps in the legs or feet, sometimes in the arms, waking the patient from sleep.

When I say I never saw, heard of or even read a report of a case of adult tetany in 20 years of practice I mean that the manifestations of tetany in adults were just not recognized by physicians. Only a minority of physicians recognize tetany in infants and persons today. In this respect the situation is like that of pellagra with other nutritional deficiency states—such as pellagra, beriberi, rickets and scurvy. It is only within the past decade that ale textbooks have begun to recognize the manifestations of

Production Rate Of UK Shipyards At Higher Tempo

By STANLEY CLARK

London, Nov. 18 — (Reuters)— British shipyard workers, still awaiting the outcome of their demand for wage increases, have stepped up the tempo of production in British yards, busiest in the world.

British shipbuilders now are at work on a record £ 28,500,000 worth of orders, with civilian and naval contracts continuing to roll in.

Both management and workers in main yards say the men are working faster than at any time since the end of the war, and that the stepped-up tempo of production is a factor in keeping the order books filled.

Workers' demands for an increase of £1 weekly from the present average weekly of about nearly £6 have gone to arbitration, and a decision is expected shortly. Yard owners say if wages go up Britain may have to price herself out of the shipbuilding business, with contracts going to European yards whose costs are lower.

Low Costs Attractive

Britain now is getting orders, builders say, because of her low costs and efficient workmanship. At present, 42 per cent of ships under construction are being built in Britain.

The Clyde, Newcastle, Sunderland, Barrow, Liverpool, Middlesbrough and Hartlepool yards all show an increase in the tonnage on hand, so the present prosperity is fairly evenly spread over the whole country. There is no shortage of steel.

In the year ended Sept. 1, ships totalling 1,379,000 tons were completed in British yards. New orders for the first nine months of 1950 totalled more than 1,000,000 tons, twice the tonnage booked during the whole of 1949.

What this means in terms of human effort is dramatically illustrated by a visit to the main shipyards, which are teeming with activity.

Try to Hire Aircraft to Bring Pilgrims' Bodies to Canada

Quebec, Nov. 18—(CP)—Arthur Cloutier and Sons, Quebec firm of undertakers, today tried to hire trans-Atlantic aircraft to bring to Quebec the bodies of victims of last Monday's crash of the "Canadian Pilgrim" in the French Alps.

The undertakers said they had made their first approach to Trans-Canada Airlines hoping to engage a cargo plane that could take off Tuesday from Dorval Airport and return later in the week with the bodies of Quebec province victims.

(In Montreal, a spokesman for T.C.A. said the airline's only cargo planes are twin-engined aircraft unable to make such a flight).

So far according to despatches from Orly Je la Pigne near the scene of the tragedy, 56 bodies have been recovered, 42 of them officially identified by Archbishop Roy and Canadian officials.

There were 58 persons, including a crew of seven, aboard the Curtiss-Reid DC-4 when it ploughed into the peak on a flight from Rome to Montreal.

At first it was announced here that all the victims would be buried near the Shrine of Notre Dame de la Salette, near Corps, in the Alps. But it appeared that this decision, taken after a meeting of victims' relatives was based on first reports that most bodies could not be identified.

Montreal—(CP)— Trans-Canada Airlines said today the line is unable to handle the picking up of bodies of passengers killed last Monday in France in the crash of the aircraft "Canadian Pilgrim".

"We have no cargo plane capable of handling 50 bodies," said a T.C.A. spokesman.

He made this statement after Arthur Cloutier and Sons, Quebec City undertakers, announced last night the bodies would be returned to Canada in a T.C.A. plane.

Fifty-eight persons, including a crew of seven, were killed in the crash.

A T.C.A. spokesman in Montreal said the Quebec undertaker had approached the line concerning the flying back to Canada of the bodies but the airlines answer was that it had only twin-engined DC-3 aircraft available for cargo work. These would not be suitable for the proposed operation.

STIRLING

Remembrance Observed by Veterans, Citizens

Stirling.—Veterans of two wars and citizens of Stirling and Rawdon township joined in paying proud and loving tribute last Saturday morning to those who gave their lives in the service of their country as Stirling observed Remembrance Day.

Large Crowd

A large crowd of citizens gathered at the cenotaph for an impressive service at 10.45 a.m. Veterans of two wars and the Stirling Wolf Cub Pack, marshalled by Comrade Charles Barnard, Sergeant-at-arms of the Stirling Legion, paraded to and from the cenotaph. Rev. A. J. Anderson, rector of St. John's and chaplain of Stirling branch of the Legion, acted as chairman and had associated with him in the service Rev. H. C. Vaclavik, of Rawdon Circuit United Church, Rev. W. H. V. Walker, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian; Rev. H. Beare, of Springbrook United Church and Rev. A. E. Baker, of St. Paul's United Church.

Pays Tribute

Following the invocation by Rev. A. J. Anderson and prayer by Rev. H. Beare, the scripture lesson was read by Rev. W. H. V. Walker. The hymn "God of Our Fathers", was sung after which Rev. H. C. Vaclavik delivered an appropriate address in which he paid special tribute to the mothers who had sacrificed their loved ones for King and Country.

Rev. A. E. Baker offered prayers and hymn "Lord of the Lands", was sung.

Wreaths in memory of the fallen were deposited by Arthur Abernethy for the local Legion; Mrs. Oliver Stapley for Rawdon township and Mrs. Harold Martin for the I.O.D.E.

"Last Post" and "Reveille" were sounded by Bugler Bob Hulin after which benediction by Rev. A. J. Anderson brought the impressive service to a close.

Stirling Citizens' Band under the direction of William Aylesworth led the parade to and from the cenotaph and played the accompaniment for the hymns.

The Glorious Dead

Following are the names of those who gave their lives in World Wars I and II.

World War I:

Vatican City, Nov. 18 (Reuters) — The Vatican said last night that Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, imprisoned Hugarian primate, has completely lost his speech and memory. The report, issued by the Vatican secretariat of state, said the illness of the 58-year-old prelate serving a life sentence for "treason and espionage" has reached "alarming" proportions.

ABBOTT'S SURPLUS

Excise-Tax Increases

Income - tax deductions at source ran to $156,800,000, compared with last year's $147,900,000; excise taxes to $237,200,000 from $205,500,000.

Many of these excise-tax increases reflected the boosts announced by Mr. Abbott in his "baby budget" brought down Sept. 7, when he forecast an annual surplus of $15,000,000 with total revenues of $3,969,000,000 and expenditures of $3,954,000,000.

At that time, because of the need for more government revenues to meet a higher defence budget, Mr. Abbott increased the excise taxes on a variety of semi-luxury goods, motor cars and electrical appliances, and levied new taxes on such other items as soft drinks, candy and chewing gum.

Mr. Abbott's treasury statement showed that in October the trend in increased government spending was continued. Expenditures of $188,600,000 compared with $176,800,000 a year ago.

Increase Takes Up

Commenting on this increase, Mr. Abbott stated that it was more than fully accounted for by increases in defence, old - age pensions and pensions to the blind, government contributions to the unemployment insurance and family - allowance payments.

"If we eliminate these four types of expenditure, where the necessity for the increase is quite obvious," said Mr. Abbott, "we find that the aggregate of all other expenditures of government were lower in October this year than for the same month last year by $6,200,000."

Mr. Abbott was confident that from now on, various government departments will be able to show "increasingly important reductions" in their total expenditures.

ESTRANGED

Police reconstructed this chronology of the shootings:

At 9 p.m. E.S.T. Ingenito went to the home of his father-in-law and asked to see his two children, Ernest, Jr., 4, and Michael, 2.

Mrs Ingenito told her husband he was prohibited under a court separation order from seeing the children.

Ingenito then shot his father-in-law, mother-in-law and wife. With the smoking weapon still in his hand, he dashed across the street to the Pioppi home. His wife's grandmother, Mrs. Theresa Pioppi, had heard the shots and was standing at her doorway.

Turns Gun on Women

Ingenito turned the gun on Mrs. Pioppi and also on Marion Pioppi, who came running to the door at that moment. Both women fell dead.

The crazed gunman stepped over their bodies and walked to the kitchen. Seated around a table were three children—Jean Pioppi, 8, Armando Pioppi, 6, and Tessie Pioppi, 1 1-2. Sitting nearby was the children's great-grandfather, Armando Pioppi.

Ingenito levelled his weapon once more and opened fire. The three youngsters and the elderly man dove for the cover of the table. Jean Pioppi was wounded.

Their assailant ran from the house, drove five miles to Minatola, N.J., and entered the home of Frank Mazzoli.

"I cleaned out the other family," Ingenito shouted. "I came here to get you."

Family Difficulties

Mazzoli and his wife fell in a blaze of gunfire.

By that time, police were already speeding to the Pioppi home. Somehow they had put through a telephone call while the shooting was still in progress, police at their headquarters heard some of the shots and the screaming of victims.

STIRLING

Fine Service Held for Fallen Comrades

St. Andrew's Remembrance Day Service

Stirling— Remembrance Sunday at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church was observed as the anniversary of the signing of the Armistice and in grateful remembrance of those who made the supreme sacrifice in the two Great Wars, 1914-18, and 1939-1945.

The minister, Rev. W. H. V. Walker, took his text from Exodus 12: 14, "And this day shall be unto you for a memorial". The speaker expressed the hope that out of the 32 years since 1918, there may arise the reality of a new day of peace and an underlying note of gratitude in honor of those who sacrificed so much.

Dedicated Life

In order that Remembrance and Thanksgiving be practical let all accept the urgent challenge to the rededication of their lives to the service of God and humanity in the tasks that await.

Special music included a solo, "Thanks Be to God" by Miss Arlene Tunnacliffe.

The pulpit was draped with a Union Jack and on the Communion table were three cape representing the three branches of the service and a white cross with a memorial wreath placed at its base.

MOUNT PLEASANT - RAWDON MISSION BAND

Mount Pleasant Rawdon Sunbeam Mission Band convened at the church Sunday morning and the service opened with a hymn after which prayer was offered for all the red, yellow, black and white boys and girls in faraway lands with a special prayer for the boys and girls who are ill with chicken pox and other ailments.

For roll call the children gave the name of a hymn. Walter Hightman delighted with a piano solo. Lois McConnell read a Temperance Thanksgiving story, Rebekah Miss Ruth Linn told the story of Rebekah. Mrs. Herbert Smith gave a review and quiz on the recent Bible stories.

The offering was gathered by Ray Spencer, and during the dedication period the leaders showed the children a picture of Miss Dora Kunz who is now in Japan. She told of her work in that land before coming to Toronto to take a two-year course in music.

The pennies given by the Mission Band children help to bring happiness and culture to their little Japanese friends. The service closed with a Missionary hymn.

Plan House Centre For Unwed Mothers

London—(Reuters)— A British welfare organization is planning a housing scheme for unmarried mothers.

The West London Mission is trying to raise close to $53,000 to furnish 17 apartments where unwed mothers and their children could live in comfort.

The Mission hopes the scheme will:

1. Decrease illegitimate births (Statistics show that there are at least 40,000 in England and Wales every year since 1945.)

2. Discourage unmarried mothers from letting their children out for adoption or from parting with them for money.

Mary Upton, one of the scheme's organizers, said many girls, having parted with their first-born in desperation and in fear, find they miss their babies so much they have a second illegitimate child to replace the first.

The mothers will also be allowed to entertain men at their flats.

"We hope many of the girls will get married," said Miss Upton. "That would be the happiest ending for them all."

Catholic Women's League Holds Gratifying Tea, Bazaar

Dark clouds and intermittent showers prevailed on Tuesday last those bent on attending this popular event held in St. Michael's Auditorium on Thursday last under the auspices of Catholic Women's League, when there was a record crowd and the treasurer reports that results were most gratifying.

The guests were greeted by Mrs. D. V. Tuttle, President and Mrs. J. E. Boyd, 1st Vice-President.

Toytown

Toytown was the first booth encountered on entering. It was most attractively arranged in red and white color scheme with a gaily striped carousel under which dolls of every size and species waited to be claimed. Stuffed furry animals in the form of dogs, cats, rabbits, elephants, balloons, drums and everything to delight the children of any Christmas morning were quickly disposed of under the direction of Mrs. J. Deacon, assisted by Mrs. S. McKenna, Mrs. R. Hustwick and Miss Mary Sheridan.

Opposite was the booth of household wares and fancy goods. Against a white background with blue and pink border hung little aprons, dainty gifts which the handmade doilies, potholders in animal shapes and on the counter were handsome handknit sox, pillow cases, crocheted flower arrangements and articles too numerous for description. Mrs. E. Lally convened this booth, assisted by Mrs. Allore, Mrs. L. Quinn, Mrs. J. Tatham, Mrs. F. Cunningham and helpers.

Brisk Business

Mrs. T. O. Morrell was doing a brisk business in her candy booth which was a most attractive place was noted—red and green against a snowy background with the smaller the goings-on here, all dressed in his red suit, high boots and fluffy white cuffs, dispensing and candy canes. He was made and donated by Miss Dee and these later auctioned off to delight some child at Christmas. Another kind of candy booth was available here, packaged to be sent overseas filled with bundles the small fry up. Mrs. E. J. Haines, Mrs. P. Mauro, Mrs. C. Bellinger and Mrs. R. P. Cooper were more than busy assisting.

Mrs. H. Carr-Burch with Mrs. J. McCarey had on display beautiful rose colored Kenwood blanket which chances could be had. Later the draw was made and it went to the lucky fellow of ticket No. 39, T. P. Searry, 67 Dundas Street, city.

Popular Booth

The booth of jams, jellies and pickles proved popular with Mrs. A. Whalen convening and Mrs. J. O'Connor, Mrs. M. Boyd and Mrs. Crowley assisting the many customers. These ladies also had an attractive array of plants with ferns, begonia, bittersweet and baby's tears among others. Mrs. E. Dafoe won the fern on which chances were sold.

Mrs. E. M. O'Connor displayed a lovely handmade lace table centre and in the case Mrs. J. Brazeau held the lucky ticket.

Doll Bride

The enchanting doll bride had a little alcove all to herself where she waited for the lucky ticket to be drawn and the winner to take her home. Gowned by her gown was designed by Schisparelli or Christian Dior was the last distinction we suspect she had a fairy godmother, for it was a pink illusion over taffeta and the sparkling jewels and her veil seemed to be just a whisper in pink, caught to her by brunette curls with the tiniest pearls. Mrs. Leo Culhane sold tickets on her and she was lucky won by Miss Betty Holland, Pinnacle St. Misses Helen Hudon and Wilma Cannon helped out here too.

Featured at all bazaars, the ever popular apron booth was next in line with a huge pair of scissors hanging in the background and a decorative scheme in green, white and yellow. Aprons of every possible description could be had here. There were even brightly striped terry cloth aprons—just wonderful to wear when bathing baby. Practical people with an eye to Christmas soon carried away these articles which pleased the conveners Mrs. W. Callaghan and Mrs. J. O'Connor. Mrs. M. Boyd and Mrs. W. Frawley were kept busy here also.

Good House Keeping Picture

The homecooking booth was quite the largest. Its 'decor' was in green, yellow and rust with a basket of fruit as the centre piece. The counter was ladened with confections of every kind. Mrs. M. J. Kennedy was in charge here, assisted by Mrs. J. J. Trudeau, Mrs. W. Lee, Mrs. Gilmore, A. Bigonnias, Mrs. S. Haley and Mrs. J. J. Bruyea Mrs. J. R. Kelly sold chances on a pink blanket here, it was like a picture in "Good Housekeeping" so colorful and delicious did it look with pineapple rings cherry-centred and closed. This went to Mrs. F. Whalen, 161 Church St., when the draw was made.

In the lower corridor Mrs. F. Short and Mrs. A. Eaves had set up their Fishpond. They were assisted by Mrs. E. Schreder and Mrs. W. J. Davidson but were soon out of business. While had something to do with supply and demand. It was immensely popular with the children.

Mrs. J. Anton and Miss A. Doyle had charge of the threetiered Christmas cake. Chrismas cake on which tickets could be sold. This was won by Mrs. J. Fitzpatrick and the lucky ticket was No. 78, held by Mrs. Clegg, R.R. 6, Belleville.

Resplendend Tea Table

Inside the enclosure small tables were arranged where the patrons enjoyed a cup of tea. Mrs. Hospitality Connalites, Mrs. J. Boyle, Mrs. J. Cowan and Mrs. E. Logan convened this feature. The tea table was resplendent with Quaker lace cloth, silver centre bowl of red and gold roses and triple silver candelabra holding gold candles on either side.

Pouring during the afternoon were: Mrs. T. J. Fluery and Mrs. Bernard Ryan, Mrs. J. Fitzgerald; Mrs. J. Fitzgerald; Miss M. Hayes and Mrs. F. Plunkett, Stapleton; Mrs. T. Dolan, Mrs. Murdock, Mrs. B. Flagler, Mrs. T. Keough Mrs. V. McIntyre, Mrs. E. Dolan, Mrs. W. Durkin, Mrs. W. A. Graham, Mrs. J. Rayrcroft, Mrs. Dolan, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. George Lee.

The servers included Mrs. W. J. Doyle, Mrs. C. W. Phillbin, Mrs. T. Mowers, Mrs. W. R. Doyle, Mrs. Bunnage, Mrs. J. McGrath, Mrs. T. Black, Mrs. R. Ross, Mrs. A. Black, Mrs. P. Mercier, Mrs. J. Hoyes, Mrs. R. Bowen, Mrs. Collyer and Mrs. W. J. Davidson took admissions to tearoom where Mrs. J. F. Deacon and Mrs. G. Donoghue hostessed.

The Tea Room was general convener of this event. Mrs. F. Hudon distributed tickets for door prizes and Mrs. E. Burke was treasurer for the afternoon.

First Wedding In 50 Years at Cordova Church

Marmora.—The first wedding in the small church built in Cordova Mines 50 years ago was held under the Free Methodist denomination, was performed Saturday afternoon at Maureen Isabel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Hamilton, Cordova Mines, became the bride of Norme Nobes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Nobes, of R. 1, Marmora.

It was a great occasion and friends gathered from the surrounding district to extend their good wishes to the couple.

After the ceremony, the bride and the bridegroom and their attendants motored to Hall's in a farm wagon pulled by two jet-black horses, decorated with colorful ribbons. The wagon and cars that followed carried more than 100 guests to the reception at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton. Nearly two dozen relatives attended a buffet luncheon.

The bride wore her parlock of a delicious buffet luncheon.

Hand-Loomed Woollen

BY PRUNELLA WOOD

BEAUTIFUL, impression, a crea-tion signed by the artist, this housecoat, or negligee, of hand loomed wool. Soft as a kitten's back and in delightful flower hues of yellow, pink, blue, apricot orange, deep blue, the lengths of weaving are made into what is really a fleecy kimono finished with bands of hemstitched self fabric down the front, on the sleeves, on the dash ends.

Each garment (which may be a size ten to twenty) is signed with the weaver's name before it goes out into the fashion world. Anyone would love one, just for comfort and prettiness; the re-covering invalid will admire, be-sides, the lightweight warmth of the supple cloth.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She learned that broken hearts can be mended

Some people who have un-happy experiences refuse to let themselves get over them nor-mally. They go on remembering them with bitterness all their lives.

Others—though they suffer just as much when the heart-break occurs—are willing to let themselves recover, and as time goes on, find not only that they have become perfectly happy again, but that they've actually learned something extremely useful from the episode.

In between are the young folks, who, when they meet up with misfortune, are usually con-vinced that their lives are per-manently ruined. Then they get over the blow in spite of them-selves and go blithely on their way, wondering how they could ever have been so upset.

This conviction of the younger generation, of course, applies particularly to affairs of the heart. Just let a teen-age ro-mance be blasted, and the one left with the broken heart is per-fectly certain that she—or he—will go mourning down through the years, never discarding the last damp handkerchief till it drops from palsied hands.

There's nothing an older per-son can tell them that makes the least difference. Even though they beg for advice on "how to for-get", they firmly believe all the time that they never will. And secretly, of course, or else entire-ly unconsciously, they don't real-ly want to forget.

So it's a very pleasant thing when some young person volun-teers the information that she has discovered all by herself that broken hearts don't last forever, and that it's even possible, event-ually, to up and take notice of the opposite sex again.

From a girl of 18 comes a let-ter telling about this surprising kind of discovery. She begins:

"I've often read in your column a letter from some teen-ager who says that she's broken up with her boy friend and that she knows she will never be able to forget him. If these girls only knew how mistaken they are! I know, I thought that once, too.

"It was, as with most of the girls, a boy in school who had won this girl's heart. He was, she says everything that she had ever dreamed of wanting in a boy-friend. He was handsome. He was a star on the athletic field. He had the most beautiful man-ners. And he was—or she thought he was—devoted to her.

Then came the day when he seemed "a little distant". She couldn't think of any reason why he should be busy and she was hurt and bewildered. Each week he came around less and less, and finally stopped coming altogether. He never gave her any explanation and she was too proud to ask him for one. All she knew was that she saw him out with other girls and that when they ran into each other as boys and girls in High School, he "acted sort of embarrassed".

"I was mixed-minded enough to go on loving him," she says, "because I thought I could never forget him, and I almost had a nervous breakdown. It seemed to me that I couldn't do anything but cry, and I didn't ever want to go out with any other boy again.

"After awhile, though, things somehow seemed to change, and I began to get interested in other boys. I began to realize, too, that I didn't really love him, I was only crazy about him, and that's a different thing. For awhile I was heartbroken, but time has mended all that, and I'm having fun again now."

Good for her, I say What do you say, Teen-agers?

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking?

Puritans were bored to death. Chewing, smoking or drinking was out of the question during the long three hour sermons in church. So they kept sugared anise seeds in their mouths.

These are the little seeds with a taste like licorice used for making candies, cookies, cakes and frostings. The flavor is also similar to fennel, the vegetable shaped like celery which is eat-en both raw and cooked.

In Italian bakeries a popular pastry are anise slices, long strips of crisp cake eaten like cookies or served with fruit or ice cream.

To prepare anise slices, a light cake batter is poured into a shal-low pan to a depth of about 1-4 or 3-4 of a inch. After the cake is baked, it is cut into long strips which are then browned in a slow oven.

If you cannot obtain anise seeds you may substitute anise oil which is usually obtainable in drug stores.

In this type of cake, use all-purpose or bread flour rather than soft cake flour so that the slices will hold their shape.

Anise Slices

4 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-4 cup melted butter or mar-garine
1 1-2 tablespoons crushed anise seed or 6 drops anise oil

Preheat oven at 325 degrees.

Put whole eggs in the top part of a double boiler. Beat with a wire whip oparotary beater 2 min-utes. Gradually add sugar while continuing to beat.

Place over simmering water in bottom part of double boiler. Water should not touch top pan. Beat several minutes until mix-ture feels, warm when touched. Turn mixture into a cold mixing bowl or bowl of electric mixer. Continue to beat until it cools, about 5 to 8 minutes.

Fold in flour very gently. Do not stir. Fold in melted butter and anise seeds.

Grease and flour an oblong baking pan about 5 inches wide and 12 to 15 inches long. Turn batter into pan. Bake until cake shrinks from sides of pan and is firm when touched, about 20-30 minutes.

Remove cake from pan. Let stand 5 or 6 hours or overnight. Cut into strips 1-2 inch thick. Place slices on a baking sheet. Put in a very slow oven, 250 de-grees for 40 to 50 minutes or until slices are lightly browned.

Fashion Flashes

GOING PLACES, especially to college, is the well-handled coat of shaved raccoon. A beauty in pearl gray is lined with gray, red and white plaided taffeta. It is a three-quarter length, flared, boxy topper with big sleeves and tux-edo front.

DELIGHTFUL items from abroad are now in the shops, not only frivolities but practical pretties too. One such is a wee kit of English wool, brightly plaided in red, green, white and black, that tapers down to a fringed peplum. Tight sleeves are of black wool knit.

QUALITY COATS are just marching out on sight, say the stores. Olive green tweed is used for a town coat made with a double collar with a deep notch in back, above tailor's arrows that are connected by a red in-set that matches the red taffeta lining. Skirt fullness with un-pressed pleats.

JUST THE THING for an eve-ning blouse when the weather is brisk, is a blouse of black Chan-tilly type lace over nude pink lamé-weight wool jersey. Has round neckline and elbow-length sleeves.

A FILL-IN for the horseshoe collar of an afternoon suit might well be a black velvet dickey with rhinestones in a geometric de-sign. Nice also in creamy velvet with a Greek key design in jet.

WONDER WHY women are asking so much of the navy? Well, one reason might be that so many of us have fine navy shoes, bags, gloves and other expensive acces-sories and we don't see why they shouldn't be put to use in these in-budget-conscious days.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

On your Christmas cards . . . what form of name is correct?

1. Naturally most Christmas cards are informal . . informal, personal greetings from friend to friend. If you want your Christmas cards to be informal, your name on them must be your informal name.

The name written or imprinted at the end of a message on a Christmas card, like the name at the end of a letter, is a signature. And a signature is an informal name, no title before it. No 'Mr. and Mrs'. . . no 'Mrs.' . . no 'Miss' . . no 'Mr.'

Correct:
With best wishes for a Happy Christmas
Mary and John Holliday
Merry Christmas and Happy New Year
Mary South
The Season's Greetings to you
Peter North

Incorrect:
With best wishes for a Happy Christmas
Mr. and Mrs. John Holliday
Merry Christmas and Happy New Year
Miss Margaret South

2. Christmas cards sent by a husband and wife are generally signed by the wife . . . and cour-teously she writes her own name last:

John and Mary Holliday

If the husband signs some of the cards . . perhaps those to some of his relatives and business or professional friends, he cour-teously signs his name last:

Mary and John Holliday

3. But when the names of hus-band and wife are imprinted at the end of the message, the wife's name should come first. The cor-rect and courteous form is:

Mary and John Holliday

4. When children's names are included in the signature, the father's name comes first. Ex-ample: John and Mary and Tom-my.

The names of several children may be included in these informal ways:

The Holliadys—John and Mary, and Tommy, Polly and Joan or

John and Mary Holliday
Tommy, Polly, and Joan

Never should Christmas cards be signed or imprinted 'Mr. and Mrs. John Smith and Family.' In-stead:

With best wishes for Christmas
Mr. and Mrs. John Smith and Family

5. Formal Cards: If you wish your Christmas cards, or at least some of them, to be formal, you can correctly achieve this formal-ity in one of two ways:

a. Word your message formal-ly: that is, in the third person. And this formal form my be en-graved, imprinted, or handwrit-ten:

Doctor and Mrs. Paul Clark
Wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year

Or, b: Select cards that have a formal appearance— conservative in design, good quality, appropri-ate size—and with no printed message of any kind on the inside pages. Then you may correctly have your formal name engraved or imprinted on the inside page:

Mr. and Mrs. David Hale
(The important point here is: since the name is not at the end of a message, it is not a signa-ture, and therefore need not be the informal name. As a matter of fact, these Christmas cards have somewhat the formality of a vis-iting card . . . Indeed very often the visiting-card plate is used for the engraving of the name on the Christmas cards)

Cosmetics can't do everything!

Give aid to your beauty aids. Help them to fulfill the purpose for which they were intended—to glorify your glamorize. Mess up has changed the face of wom-an, made her more decorative. Creams have banished many com-plexion troubles because they keep the skin surface lubricated and because the friction necessary for their application makes the blood streams march.

But these aids need your help if they are to bring results. You must cultivate a healthy canvas for your portrait painting. Do everything possible in the way of adopting good hygienic ha-bits to give the flesh good color-ing, the epidermal coat of fine texture. That means that you must bathe daily, breathe deeply, stick to a simple, nutritious diet and get sufficient sleep to re-charge your energy motors. There is something else; you must prac-tise emotion control, so you won't get frowns between your eyes.

It's no good to fancy that you can tear around all day and keep late hours without waking up looking like the breaking up of a hard winter. No, those days you cannot set yourself together by having a facial. Get at causes. Take care of yourself. Keep strong, healthy and cheerful.

Don't expect too much of the fragrant toiletries that you tote home when you go shopping. There are no fabulous creams that will cause facial furrows to dis-appear over night. Underlying tis-sues have weakened; they cannot be strengthened in a hurry. Keep right on with the nightly anoint-ing, but make an intelligent ef-fort to find out why these lines have appeared. Some error in living habits has created them. A healthy woman with a sweet disposition should be able to keep the skin surface lubricated and because the friction necessary for their application makes the blood streams march.

KIDDIES!!

SANTA IS COMING TO BELLEVILLE!

In The BIG

SANTA CLAUS PARADE

Tues., Nov. 21st

A real show for both children and adults. Floats are animated and, of course, SANTA CLAUS himself, will be there. Plan to be on hand and be sure to bring the children. Parade leaves Fair Grounds 3.00 P.M., goes north on Yeomans. Then east on Moira Street, across the Upper Bridge and south on Front Street to Market Square. It is expected that the Parade will pass along Front Street, at approximately 3.30 p.m.

The Parade will include 16 Floats, 6 Bands, Clowns, Nursery Rhyme Characters, Special Sound Trucks, Animated Floats, etc.

THE SANTA CLAUS PARADE IS SPONSORED by the BELLEVILLE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Don't Miss Meeting Mr. & Mrs. Santa Claus In Their Mobile Home...

SANTA'S MOBILE HOME will be open for inspection, TUESDAY, NOV. 21st., from 4.00 to 8.00 p.m.

To give the children an opportunity to meet SANTA CLAUS, all the Parade Floats will be drawn up on the Market Square. Both MR. and Mrs. SANTA CLAUS will receive the children in their mobile home. Don't miss this opportunity to personally meet SANTA CLAUS.

commonplace to residents

Jack Miner and his work. work is being continued by three sons, Manley, Jasper Ted.

Miner, who died in 1944, emed of this year's giant mi-ion when, in 1904 he began ting wild fowl, bought seven geese and put them, with wings clipped, in a pen near his house. It was North Am-a's first bird sanctuary.

waited four years until the st flight of 11 geese came ng in. Since then they flocked the sanctuary. Manley Miner res a 20-per-cent increase in ds in the last two years.

00-Mile Flight

his year's geese, many raised summer on Hudson Bay, are ected to have made a non-stop
00-mile hurdle from feeding ches on James Bay.

Manley, president of the three who feeds and bands the s, expects to band about 2,500 year. The birds who come to ngville in the spring follow
Atlantic flyway in the south-and in the fall follow the sissippi flyway.

The Canada geese, blue geese snow geese need fattening in spring on their annual Arctic ting areas. "They have to get there safe and fat so as to reproduce well," Jasper said.

The importance of the bird sanctuary here is seen in the fact that the geese following the Mississippi flyway — the most heavily hunted of four flyways they follow — are increasing.

"The sanctuary acts as a nest-egg supply for the continent," Manley said. "We have banded
45,000 Canada geese since 1915 and more than 9,000 of them have been reported killed in the United States. Only six were killed of west of the Mississippi. At least one-quarter of each group caught for banding has been banded before. Last year we found one banded 24 years previously."

The bands are unchanged from those designed by Jack Miner, a deeply religious man who saw the hand of Providence guiding flights of birds. Each carries a verse of Scripture. One of several strapped to the legs of geese this year is the simply: "Have faith in God."

Sanctuary Veterans

There are some permanent residents at the sanctuary — like four whistling swans. They are the only survivors of nine rescued
one winter by the late Red Hill from ice below Niagara Falls after they were cut over the cataract.

No one knows how old the four swans are, but they have been at the sanctuary 26 years. They are given a special diet.

Conservation is carried on by the Jack Miner Foundation established by the naturalist before his death. The Foundation owns the ponds where the birds are fed, the Miner home and the ornithological park. Grain for the migrants is grown on 300 acres owned by the Miner brothers.

Directors of the Foundation, which is headed by Manley
Miner, spend approximately $20,000 a year. Three-quarters of the dollars is raised by public contributions. A Dominion Government grant covers the other quarter of the budget.

The Foundation's current interest is to gain permanent endowment of the sanctuary, through subscriptions from organizations and wealthy individuals.

The goal is still the one held by Jack Miner — the return of the great flocks of wildfowl that North American skies knew. His son, Jasper, says:

"If hunters will just learn to be patient, if man will learn to conserve as well as kill, we'll have the great flights of geese again."

Detectives Give Version of Affairs To Commission

Toronto, Nov. 18. (CP)—Two detectives who opened fire on a car carrying an innocent couple who happened into a trap set for an escaped jailbird yesterday, say it was the result of an "incredible" coincidence.

The police commission, hearing the case of the two officers, suspended and charged with care-less use of firearms, reserved decision.

Detective John Gillespie and Acting Detective William Mc-Neeley fired shots at the back of a car occupied by C. B. Gillespie and Miss Edna Cairncross early Nov. 12.

The two officers said they had been assigned to track down a fur thief who telephoned his victim to tell him that if he wanted the furs back he should leave $500 in a trash container at the corner of Gerrard and Coxwell, bourne from the Toronto's east end.

Miss Cairncross and Mr. Gillespie pulled up at the trash can shortly before midnight to get rid of a small package of garbage, Miss Cairncross told the commission Friday.

She said she had just re-entered the car when a man she thought was a gang member came out with a gun, yelling "Stop, Stop!" Mr. Gillespie thought it was a hold-up and drove off.

McNeeley said that "under the circumstances we thought there's no doubt they were the people we were after." He said not then until it appeared that the driver was going to run me down. Then I aimed at the front of the car, rather than at its occupants."

Neither of the couple was injured by the gunfire although one bullet entered the body of the car.

The extortionist was not captured.

Silver Mountain May Again Yield Many Valuable Metals

Port Arthur, Ont. — (CP) — Is there still silver in Silver Mountain? A Toronto mining company wants to find out.

A recent dynamite blast at the mountain, 38 miles west of here, blew the bottom out of a shaft in an old silver mine that hadn't been disturbed for 60 years.

It was another stage in attempts by McWilliams - Beardmore Mines Ltd. to find more of the high-grade silver ore that was taken from the mine before the turn of the century.

From these workings 50 and 60 years ago were removed many tons or rich silver ore, some of it selling for as much as $1,000 a ton.

There were about 30 silver mines operating in this area at the time Silver Mountain Mine was at its peak.

D. B. McWilliams, president of the company, says if the mine still contains silver the aim is to get it into full-scale production and permit exploitation of fluorite, zinc and lead known to exist there.

Fluorite Deposit

Mr. McWilliams says he is sure there is enough fluorite alone in the mine to pay operating expenses and provide a small profit. Silver or other metals would be "gravy." One of the things that influenced the decision to test the mine's hidden secrets is the growing importance of fluorite. In the old days it was not recognized but today it has many uses, including a part in the manufacture of atomic bombs.

Mr. McWilliams estimates the deposit of fluorite at Silver Mountain is the second largest in the world. In addition the demand for silver, now selling at about 77 cents an ounce, is increasing.

There are 10 men working at the mine. The ore is ground into concentrate and barrelled for shipment to the smelter at Trail, B.C.

The story of Silver Mountain is linked with a colorful era in the history of this district.

Oliver Dounais discovered the Silver Mountain mines after he married into an Indian tribe. The Indians had been in possession of trinkets made from solid silver. At first they refused to reveal the location of their finding because of a superstition that they would be punished by their gods.

Dounais is reported to have been paid $175,000 for one of the mines plus a one-eighth interest in the company.

SALE OF BONDS INCREASE

Ottawa, Nov. 18. (CP)—Payroll sales of Canada Savings Bonds increased to $150,252,200 an increase of 6.7 per cent over total employee purchases last year, the Bank of Canada reported yesterday.

Average purchase by employees now is $234.40, compared with $222.28 last year.

In the final sprint, Quebec region is first with 116.56 per cent of sales at canvassing close, ahead of last year's campaign, followed by Ontario with 114.31 per cent.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

BY WINIFRED E. WILSON

PELLETS

Curiously enough, more is known about the food preferences of owls than of almost any other kind of bird. To the uninitiated, knowing that because of nocturnal habits they are seldom seen, this must sound skewed. However, because they live, they scatter their menu lists about. These, though unintelligible to the average man in the street, are easily read by scientists.

Mother Nature has supplied these birds of prey with special tools. With their powerful, hooked talons they seize and then hold their victims, which, if not too large, are eaten whole. Otherwise their sharp, hooked bills are used to tear the flesh into large pieces. But all owls actually swallow everything: meat, bones, fur, claws, and even tail. A Great Horned Owl will even tackle a porcupine. The Canadian naturalist, Dan McCrimmon, has told the story of a member of this species that was brought down by a rifle bullet. The taxidermist found, buried in its heart, two porcupine quills which the frightful bird had not been able to dispose of in the ordinary way.

Under every other circumstance, the entire catch goes down to the last stomach, so that the nutritious portions are absorbed, while all the indigestible matter is formed into round pellets that are ejected from the mouth. Young owls are insatiable, eating slightly their own weight in food. The ground surrounding their home is usually covered with these disgorged pellets. After examining them, a scientist is able to tell exactly what kind of food parents of such a species bring to their nestlings.

If the ground under the roost of an adult owl is systematically watched, the scientist not only finds out what that individual has been eating, but can estimate the size and number of its meals. We then have the evidence, which cannot be disputed, and know just what each species of owl prefers to eat, and what it takes under unusual conditions or times of stress. We are assured, for instance, that though they kill 6 per cent of a Short-eared owl's diet consists of mice, when there was a plague of voles these little animals were constantly eaten. The Screech Owl feeds entirely on insects, yet enjoys varied means. About one-seventh of the yearly intake consists of birds, but examination of pellets proves that only necessity compels it to kill black-crowned winter weather, or when there is difficulty in finding enough suitable nourishment near by for a young family.

Bear Hunt on Cariboo Trail

(By W. H. Colclough of Vanleek Hill, in Stratford Beacon-Herald.)

There's a b'ar up in that timber," excitedly cried a wrinkled old man, as we pulled up before a small store at Mile 100 on the Cariboo Trail. "I seed him when comin' in. Pete and his brother jist left."

And so we were off on a "b'ar hunt" but, like Blucher at the battle of Waterloo, we arrived just a few seconds too late—which we honestly feel was a mighty fortunate thing.

Peter Odgen, 21, native-born, is one of the best hunters in the Cariboo. He, with his rancher father, among many other things, runs a small store; his brother operates a garage just across from the store. When the Oldtimer drifted in with the news that he had seen a bear in that "thicket of timber," they grabbed his rifle, whistled for "Lab," his handsome black Labrador hunting dog, and hit for the tall timber.

We mooched along, seeing no sign of dog, hunter or bear. Then, off to the left old Lab gave tongue. Peter slipped silently and quickly through the brush and 100 yards ahead, he saw a cub scramble up a tree. A short distance farther on another cub did the same thing, and then another took to the high branches. The bear was now leading the dog further into the woods. Peter stopped, ignoring the cubs, and was soon between the cubs and their mother. We would suggests that you keep out of that position, unless you have the guts of a first-class hunter.

Old Lab kept barking, and Peter followed. When the old bear took to a tree, with the dog below. The hunter was too far away for a shot, but almost instantly the bear dropped for the dog. One cuff would have killed him, but old Lab dodged her, and then did what every dog does when being chased by a bear. He headed straight for his master.

It takes a fast dog to keep ahead of a bear when her cubs are in danger. Peter never moved as he saw them coming at something like 50 miles an hour. The dog dodged brush, swung around trees and scrub and bounced over logs, and when he saw his master, he simply swung off to one side—but not the bear. At 20 feet, no paces, Peters high-power rifle cracked and he made a perfect shot. The bullet entered a little low, about an inch below the eyes, in the centre of the head, plowed on through and scrambled the beans digestive tract. But she kept coming, and collapsed within touching distance of the hunter, who never fired a second shot.

Old Lab came in for the kill, and was almost killed by a smashing left from the dying bear.

And then the ubs. It was really patient to see them shot down. One little chap cried like a child, but the law of the Cariboo is firm when it comes to bear in the ranching section. Before Peter had them skinned, some Indians appeared out of nowhere, and begged for the carcasses. The cubs are a great delicacy, we are told, and, with the present price of meat, a bear has a real market value.

Back at the store an American car had parked, and the owner was greatly interested in the bear pelts, so it wasn't long before a bargain was struck and the Yankee, who said he was on his way back to California, had the skins.

Peter watched the car swing around a dusty bend in the highway, and then said, philosophically: "If that chap reports those skins at the customs, which the law says he must do, it will cost him $60. He has no guns and I'll bet he doesn't report."

It is quite evident that some semi-mansion or castle down in California will deck its polished floors with the processed skins of four bears, and we'd love to hear the story as to how they were acquired. But you figure that one out!

Anglicans Stingy Rector Gets Tough

Ely, England — (CP) — The average Anglican church-goer is not dropping enough into the collection plate to suit Rev. Arthur Beale, rector of Coveney, Cambridgeshire.

He told the Ely diocesan conference: "The whole standard of giving in the Church of England is disgusting. The attitude of the average member seems to be one of stingy meanness beyond belief."

A half a crown (37 cents) dropped into the plate, he said, was usually regarded as a good amount. But it only bought a seat for a movie or 20 cigarettes.

Mr. Beale, whose net annual income is around $1,200, said it was time the laity was told that if the Christian religion was worth having, it was worth paying for.

"If the Germans had not poked my eye out at Dunkerque, I could not live on my present income," he added. "And why should I subsidize my benefice with a pension?"

Scarlet Fever Outbreak

St. Catharines, Nov. 17—AP—A scarlet fever outbreak in Virgil Public School has been reported by Dr. V. V. Currey, medical Officer of Health for the St. Catharines-Lincoln health unit here.

In a week 13 mild cases have been discovered, mostly among first grade students in the country school. Dr. Currey believes the disease can be checked by keeping the school open and the children under close watch.

There are four cases of scarlet fever in St. Catharines, but they are not regarded as serious.

Belleville Redmen Defeat Kingston Nylons 7-3 at Arena For First Win in Senior Loop

By C. D. T.

Following a thorough shake-up of the lineup and a change of goalie by acting coach Walter Bell, the Belleville Redmen won themselves a hockey game at the Memorial Arena last night, when they defeated the Kingston Nylons 7-3 and looked that much better on the night's play.

The coach figured the team could not go any worse than they had been going so he shifted a couple of lines, moved Vern Goyer and Tim Williams back on defence, and placed Maurice Leforte between the pipes and the change was all to the good. Tommy Schneider was not dressed due to an injured chest but information is that his injury is not serious and Tommy will be back next week in his accustomed spot.

Starters Shine

The Redmen put on display their new crests, designed by Don Lee and they improved the looks of the uniform a hundred per cent. More than 1,000 of the faithful were in attendance and the type of hockey that was dished up will bring them back for the next game. Belleville showed a considerable amount of giddyap and Hunter and they displayed a pleasing brand of combination. True, they are still short on condition, but they had the Nylons groggy on end and the game will start them to top form and they will be a potent factor in the group race from here in. Most of the goals were scored on combination efforts and the starting line of Wardaugh, Mulvihill and Green were given the three-star rating by "Tootie" Holway and each won a beautiful tie the gift of Goodman's Store for Men. Every boy in the lineup could have been given star rating.

Both teams stuck to hockey and the result was a fast speedy game until the Nylons ran out of steam and then the Redmen poured it on. The play was fairly even for two periods but in the third, the Redmen backed the opposition into their own end of the rink and Udall was not equal to the occasion, although the loss cannot be laid entirely to him. He ate a lot of rubber but was clearly beaten by Green and Mulvihill on perfect efforts. On Green's marker he was nearly "dunked" out of the arena.

Twelve Penalties

Twelve penalties were dished out by Dick Ouimet, six to each side but they were all for minor offences. Referee Ouimet started a "Rhubarb" with Jack Green but the rightwinger gave as much as he got. The whole team showed plenty of courage but were not belligerent and nobody pushed them around any part of the evening. The first line outplayed the Mulvihill-Green trio by a good wide margin. The Redmen stayed in their checks, fought for the puck and rushed with telling effect and backchecked like fiends with the result that Maurice Leforte playing his first game of the season, and with little practice, had an easy night of it.

The play opened rather cagily as each team felt the other out but near the three-minute mark the play opened up and Nylons potted one with Catlin feeding Gerow a perfect pass near the goal mouth. It was not long before Belleville had the equalizer when Jones put Free into the clear and the little fellow made no mistake. Play ranged up and down for some minutes then Green took Mulvihill's perfect pass, shifted Udall out of position and put the Redmen one up. The locals got a break when Wardhaugh, who was fairly flying all night, took Green's pass and netted one 36 seconds after the opening of the second frame. In eight minutes the Nylons had it tied up when Joyce and Potts flashed their red light but the teams went to the dressing rooms with the locals on top due to Wardhaugh's second goal, with Mulvihill and Graham assisting.

Beginning of the End

The third period opened fast with Nylons trying to get the equalizer but the Redmen took the track with Mulvihill being fed a perfect pass by Vern Goyer and he went the length of the ice to beat Udall from close in. That was the beginning of the end for the Nylons. They rapidly lost steam and Jones and Graham netted markers with Goyer and Free assisting.

It would be unfair to single out any of the players but with the exception of the three star selection, Vern Goyer played a whale of a game on the defence, while up front every boy gave his all any time. Bert Threre hit over the boards. The play never did get ragged, the players picked out their men for passes, and generally it was a well played game of hockey.

Kingston Nylons are just as good as the team that went to the finals of the group last season. In fact they could be better, with the addition of Potts, Watts and Landry. Landry, in particular is a heady defenceman and a strong puck carrier, he concentred most of the plays from the Shoeline. Joyce, Aitkin, and Potts played well. The lineups:

Kingston Nylons: Goal, Udall; defence, J. Watts and Landry; centre, Partis; wings, Catlin and Gerow; alternates, Joyce and Free.

F. Plumb, Potts, McKeown, Aitkin, Harrison and Gregg.

Belleville Redmen: Goal, Leforte; defence, Goyer and Williams; centre, Wardhaugh; wings, Green and Mulvihill; alternates, Graham, Sawyer. Free, Day, Jones, McDonald, Schmidt and Bastedo.

Referee: Dick Ouimet of Peterborough; Linesman, Bill Holway of Belleville.

Smiling "Smiley" Meronek, coach of the Belleville Rockets, is by no means downhearted over the team's showing in their inaugural tilt with Peterborough the other night. "Smiley" figures it was one of those games, but look out in the future. He is pictured above between two of his Rocket stalwarts, Ross Mason and Peter Green.

Hamilton Tigers In First Place Of Major Series

(By The Canadian Press)

Art Childs has been around hockey for a long time, but age doesn't seem to have taken the edge off his goal-tending ability.

He demonstrated that last night when he spent a warm 70 minutes kicking out 45 shots for Hamilton Tigers in a scoreless draw with Kitchener — Waterloo Flying Dutchmen in a scheduled Ontario Hockey Association major contest at Waterloo.

Childs, called up earlier this week as a temporary replacement for injured Bruce Gamble, is a tough night compared to the work handled by Bost Hurley who had to stop 24 shots.

The tie gave Hamilton a single point, enough to lift them into sole possession of first place, ahead of the two Toronto teams, St. Michael's and Marlboros. The Dutchmen are one point back of them in last place.

There were three junior games, Barrie Flyers increasing their first-place margin by defeating Windsor Spitfires 7 – 2; Galt Black Hawks vaulting from sixth to second place by beating Stratford Kroehlers 4-2, and Guelph Biltmores slopping Toronto St. Michael's 7-0.

The game at Stratford was a clean one. Only two penalties were handed out, both in the final period.

Don Horan Best

Don Horan was the big scorer for Galt, with two goals. The final one was pushed into an empty net after Stratford goalie Al Bennett was lifted in a last-minute drive to tie the score. Foesa and Gosselin scored the other Black Hawks goals while McFarlane and Wood tallied for the losers.

The game at Barrie was marked by the arrest of Jimmy Skinner, coach of Windsor, accused of breaking an usher's nose. The usher, Harry French, was reported to have told Skinner to tone down his language. Skinner hit French, who suffered the broken nose and a cut requiring five stitches. A fan who went to the usher's assistance also was hurt, not seriously.

The game was tied 1-1 at the end of the first period on goals by Wood for Barrie and Zorica of Windsor. The Spits took the lead temporarily in the second period but Barrie answered with four goals, adding another two in the last period. Labine had two for the winners, while Chevrette, Emme, Barber and Toppazzini got the others. Official tallied Windsor's second goal.

St. Mike's Shoved Deeper

The game in Guelph shoved St. Mike's deeper into ninth place while helping the Biltts in their fight to get out of eighth. Lauf man, centre of a recent dispute between Guelph and St. Mike's, proved that Guelph might have got the better of the deal after all. He potted three goals and set up two others. Dean Prentice got two, Kulik and Murphy one apiece.

Two junior games are scheduled for today: Guelph at Waterloo; Barrie at Galt; while two others will be played in Toronto Sunday when stratford play St. Mike's and Oshawa plays Marlboros.

In the major series today will see the first meeting of the season between the two Toronto teams, St. Michael's and Marlboros.

Winnipeg Coach Scouts East Finalists, Argos Meet Beaches

(By The Canadian Press)

"Be prepared" is a good motto, whether it applies to Boy Scouts or football scouts, and Coach (Butch) Larson aims to be just that when his Winnipeg Blue Bombers meet the Argonauts for the eastern final at Varsity Stadium.

If Aaron wins—as they are expected to do—the Winnipeg coach should have plenty of pointers for his Bombers at their training camp on the University of Western Ontario campus at London, Ont.

On the other hand Frank Clair, Argos coach, hasn't had a personal look at the westerners in action. But don't start feeling sorry for him—he'll probably be doing scouting with movies of past Winnipeg games, a system he has used successfully in the past.

The respective merits of the two systems might be a good topic for conversation at this point, but that would be getting away from the important matter —today's game.

After all, the Beaches could pull their upset and then the big game would be the scouting worry of Gerry Tuttle and Dwight Reid, a couple of fine footballers who have done a great job with the OHFU champions this season.

Both Beaches and Argos are looking for a dry field to "cut" their good passing and fast-breaking ground attacks. Looks as if they'll get one.

Few Sunny Intervals

The forecaster says weather should be cloudy with a few sunny intervals, a 15-mile wind and the temperature in the mid-40s. Expected attendance; About 16,000.

Weather should be much the same in Hamilton, where some 14,000 fans are expected to watch Vancouver Blue Bombers attempt to take the junior championship away from Hamilton Tiger-Cats. The Tiger-Cats have won the Canadian Junior laurels for the last two years, and virtually dominated the junior field with the Blue Bombers in recent years. Hamilton beat Vancouver at the coast for the title.

In Montreal, a crowd of 23,000 is expected to cram Molson Stadium for the all-Canadian Intercollegiate final between McGill Redmen and Western Mustangs.

McGill will be looking for their first college title since 1938 while the Mustangs are after their sixth in the last seven tries.

The weather man assures that it won't rain, although it will be cloudy and cool.

Western forced the sudden-death playoff by handing the Redmen their first loss of the 1950 season 21-10 last Saturday.

Have Your Cake and Eat it Too

BY JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solunar Tables)

A constructive move has been made in Washington recently. Mr. Everett E. Horn has been appointed to act as liason officer between the Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Heretofore these two branches have been acting somewhat at cross purposes in the matter of wildfowl conservation. Marshes have been spent to drain pot holes in the prairies, and pot holes are being created in additional areas.

This confusion will be brought to a minimum or, we hope, eliminated completely. Now it looks as though a hen mallard will be able to find a place to make her nest with the assurance that the water will still be there when her brood is hatched. In short, our national "duck factory" is being improved and amplified.

Conserve The Hens

However, to quote an old duck hunter, "the real duck factory is the hen duck. Mr. H. H. Mc-Cumber of Iowa, a veteran duck hunter of more than 60 years' standing, offers a suggestion to the duck shooters of America.

"Shoot drakes," he says, "and pass up the hens. Leave some breeding stock for next year."

Of course, this idea is not entirely new. For many years the duck clubs of the Mississippi delta have tried to limit their bags to drakes, thereby insuring future passage. This is true also of many of the Currituck clubs and those along the Ohio shore of Lake Erie. No doubt there are many other groups that do the same thing.

However, it is an excellent plan to make the move nation-wide. Now that we have such restricted limits in order to have even a gunner's day can be prolonged and, in fact, his sport improved if he shoots only drakes.

Biologically, with most of the popular duck species in which drakes and hens may be distinguished on the wing, the plan makes sense. Competent biologists tell us that on many marshes the drakes outnumber the hens, sometimes by as much as ten or twelve to one.

Drakes Expendable

Since ducks pair off in a fifty-fifty sex ratio at nesting time, a large number of surplus drakes contributes little to the increased duck supply for next fall. Of course a few extra may come in handy to hens over-fertile in case first attempts by the hens are unproductive. Other than that, extra drakes are expendable, and no serious damage is done to the breeding stock if they are shot off.

This is not true if the hens are killed. Consider, for instance, Shiela the Shoveler. Since 1947 this little hen has been observed to return each year to nest in the same little patch of grass. The members of the Delta Waterfowl Research Station who work in the Delta Marshes of Manitoba long ago christened her.

To their definite knowledge she has produced sixty some known eggs in her chosen nesting site, despite the fact that research workers at the Delta station have also her eggs, have trapped her repeatedly, have banded her, and have daubed her wings with red paint to facilitate her field identification.

Shiela ignores these indignities and turns up regularly each year, all ready to start raising a new family as soon as the ice and snow have melted from her favorite meadow. Her activities, all carefully recorded, have contributed valuable data on nesting and homing habits of waterfowl.

Wanis Leg Band

This year Shiela's number may be up. Fate, in the form of a load of chilled summer slaws, may put a stop to her activities. Should that be the case, she can still make one last contribution to the fund of human knowledge.

For this she needs the co-operation of the gunners who should send her leg band to U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Her number is 47-504004.

Selective shooting of drakes, allowing the hens free passage, unquestionably will save many hens. How many of these are so-termed "duck factories" as little Shiela is anybody's guess. In any event, the idea surely is worth a trial.

Passing up the hens is no hardship in these days of abbreviated legal limits. Often a day's duck shooting is over almost before it has begun. Taking and passing drakes and filling in the time with your camera will do much to add to your sport.

Another thing that will add interest to your day in the blind is to watch the reaction of the ducks to the stimulus of the Solunar Periods. Ducks respond to these activity periods every bit as well as fish do.

You can notice this even on "bluebird days", when the birds are rafted-up in large ricks well offshore, sunning themselves and preening their feathers. With the arrival of a Solunar Period, small groups will detach themselves from the main flock and move into the feeding grounds.

At these times the birds seem to lose a great deal of their natural caution and they usually decoy readily. Duck hunters will do well to remember this in planning their days with the aid of the Solunar Tables. Repeated checks have shown that it pays a duck hunter to keep track of the daily Solunar Periods.

11 U.S. Imports Make All-Star Big Four Squad

Toronto, Nov. 18 (CP)—The Big Four football league's 1950 all-star team will have nine of an all-American, with only one Canadian crashing the lineup alongside 11 United States imports.

The only Canadian given all-star status by the football writers and coaches in the league's four cities, who chose the team annually for the Canadian Press, was Red Flaherty of the Argonauts.

While the voting weighed to give equal voting strength to each city, they selected five players from Hamilton Tiger-Cats and four from Alouettes. The champion Toronto Argonauts gaind only two positions and Ottawa Rough Riders one.

There was a big shakeup in team personnel. Nine are newcomers to Big Four selections—eight of them Americans playing their first Canadian season.

The three repeaters are the Alouettes' Frankie Filchock and Herb Trawicki and Tiger-Cats inside Vince Scott. The 33-year-old Filchock, who joined Baltimore Colts for the remainder of the season following elimination of Alouettes, edged out Argo Dekdebrun by nine points to seven.

Ray Cicia, Alouettes inside who last season was high up in the Associated Press All-American can poll, was the only unanimous choice, with 16 points.

Tantalus, to which the Canadians from being shut out, was chosen at flying wing. The 23-year-old, 200-pound product of Vancouver junior ranks played with Calgary Stampeders for two years before joining Alouettes this season.

The three Canadians dropped from last season's all-stars were snag Don Loney of Hamilton, who had been chosen for five successive seasons, end Ralph Toohy of Alouettes and halfback Royal Copeland, who left Argos for Calgary this season.

The 1950 All-Star team:

Flying wing: Don Tantagos, Montreal.

Half: Bill Gregus, Hamilton.

Half: Ulysses Curtis, Toronto.

Half: (secondary): Edgar (Special Delivery) Jones.

Quarter: Frankie Filchock, Montreal.

Snap: Ed (Buckets) Hirsch, Toronto.

Inside: Ray Cicia, Montreal.

Inside: Vince Scott, Hamilton.

Wing: Herb Trawick, Montreal.

Middle: Ralph Sazio, Hamilton.

Outside: Vince Mazza, Hamilton.

Outside: Bill Stanton, Ottawa.

Connie Mack Wants to Play Golf Next Spring

(By The Canadian Press)

Connie Mack says he intends to return next spring to a love of his earlier days—golf.

Just how important the 87-year-old "Mr. Baseball," who retired recently as manager of Philadelphia Athletics, considers this decision was shown by the fact he himself called the Associated Press to break the news. Except on rare occasions, Connie heretofore has spoken through an intermediary.

"I'd like folks to know," he asserted, "that I certainly don't want to settle down in a rocking chair yet, not by a long shot.

"Naturally," he went on, "I'll continue to be quite active with the Athletics. Why shouldn't I be? My life has been baseball, and it still is baseball. But golf comes second. It's great, too."

"What I'm to do next will do," he said, "is give me a chance to go back and do the things I did before I retired. It will give me more time for them. Everybody knows I'm not the kind of person who'll be satisfied to sit back and go to see. Not me."

One of the first stops on his way to this new stage of his illustrious life in sports will be Hollywood, he said. There he will join motion-makers in fashioning a film based on his 50-year career in baseball. The script, he said, now is in the making.

Ottawa's Don Scott McEwen, Michigan University's star distance runner, spent plenty of enduring yesterday in winning his second straight big ten cross-country title, proving his dethroning last year of Wisconin's famed Don Gehrmann was a fluke. Wisconsin took the team crown for the third straight year.

McEwen won by 150 yards over Purdue's Bob Rodibaugh in 19 minutes, 34 1 seconds which would be a record over the course, but over a makeshift four-mile course at Washington Park, Chicago.

Last year McEwen was clocked in a record-breaking 19:44.5 as he defeated highly-favored Gehrmann, now graduated. But that was over a hilliey course which Friday had to be abandoned because a foot bridge was out.

Flashy Kid Gavilan of Cuba avenged an old defeat and won New York state recognition as No. 1 welterweight contender last night by gaining a split 10-round decision over Irish Billy Graham in Madison Square Garden. Gavilan outweighed his rival, 147 to 143.

Tommy Ford, former Toronto Argo halfback was the ball carrier in the western senior football conference play-offs' record-releasing Friday show. The Winnipeg Blue Bomber speedster carried the ball nine times gained 137 yards for an average gain of 8.2 in three games.

Winnipeg quarterback Jack Jacobs outshone Edmonton's Lindy Berry in the passing department. Jacobs completed 29 out of 50 for a percentage of 52 while Berry recorded 29 completions in 80 attempts for 49 per cent.

Marcel Boussac, French textile millionaire who was top money-winning race horse owner in Britain this year, aims to ruin the annual festival of Britain for British owners.

He has entered 94 horses in 27 English races, including the two-year-old events at Ascot and Epsom. Boussac won three Epsom classics—the Derby with Galcador, the Oaks with Asmena and the St. Leger with Scratch II—this year.

Welterweight champion Ray Robinson, is willing to take on any British boxer, according to the champ's manager. Fighters Ray would like to meet are Jack Gardner, Birmingham middleweight champion of Britain, light heavyweight champ Don Cockell, middleweight king Randolph Turpin or welter ruler Eddie Thomas. Manager Jack Gainford issued the challenge after Ray Robinson Jean Liberte passed at Plymouth en rout to France where Robinson will meet French champion Jean Stock in Paris Nov. 27.

Dave (Sweeney) Schriner, coach of the North Sidney Victorias, last-place Cape Breton Major Series Hockey League team, has quit coaching. He said in Sydney last night after his team was defeated 6-5 by Glace Bay Millionaires he is heading for his home in Calgary tonight.

Schriner, former National Hockey League star, said he has no other coaching offers in view, and isn't interested.

Major league clubs Friday drafted two more players from the minors, St. Louis Browns taking John Berardino of Toledo of the American Association and New York Yankees taking Gene Markland of Kansas City of the International League. That made 27 minor leaguers so far that have graduated to the big time since Thursday's draft.

Greentree Stable's Big Stretch proved an aptly-named two-year-old yesterday by coming on with a late drive to win the Pimlico Futurity at Baltimore, Md. Jockey Ted Atkinson and Big Stretch didn't show up in the 1 1/16-mile race until the eight furlongs turned for home. Straightening out then after lagging in momentarily, they reached the wire 4½ lengths in front.

Mrs. B. Murym, who attended last Saturday's football game between Edmonton Eskimos and Winnipeg Blue Bombers, says it really happened.

One of the larger Bomber players entered Osborne Stadium wearing one of the team's new, padded leather jackets. During a few steps, the unidentified player slipped in the parka and out tumbled two small boys.

But the Potsdam Tagespost said today he was refused, although 10 per cent of his salary had been deducted regularly for government insurance.

"You don't need teeth to teach" the health office was quoted as explaining.

Bombers Expect To Have Rousing Sendoff Tonight

Winnipeg, Nov. 18 —(CP)— About 2,000 persons are expected to jam the Canadian Pacific Railway station rotunda tonight when Winnipeg Blue Bombers entrain for the east.

The 1950 western champions, awaited Sunday by rail fans, will arrive in Toronto early Monday morning, and will continue to their training camp at the University of Western Ontario in London, Ont.

The management expects to have its full complement of 31 players in Toronto for the Dominion final Nov. 25—but only 24 will dress under Canadian Rugby Union regulations.

Twenty-seven players and numerous officials will leave tonight. They include quarterbacks Jack Jacobs and Pete Petrow; backs George MacDiarmid, Tom Casey, Tommy Ford and Don Knowles; flying wings Jack Gibb and Bud Riordan; fullbacks Shaky Stroppa, Andy Sokol and Art Filej; centres John Brown and Roy Gardiner; guards Bud Irving, Gerry Deleeuw, Jim McPherson, Jack Gladstone and Alan Wiley; tackles Glenn Johnson, Buddy Tinsley, John Konarski and Ed Newman; and Ron Vaccher, Keith Pearce, Ray Charnbury, Ed Hughes and Al Forbrich.

Four players will leave Thursday. They are halfbacks Gerry Dugald, Lem Meltzer and Al Forbrich, and tackle Keith Kendell.

President Ralph Misener, manager Scotty Kennedy, line coach Sol Schwartz, backfield coach Bob Sandberg head the list of club officials leaving tonight.

Head coach Frank Larson is ready is in the east, where he will scout today's eastern final between Argonauts and Beaches Bainy Beach.

The squad held a light workout last night at their training grounds in neighboring St. Boniface. It was confined mostly to limbering up exercises and was cut short by snow and blustery winds.

Another light practice session is scheduled for this afternoon. Toronto fans will see a slight change from Bombers' former uniforms of light gold and blue. This season the jersey is navy blue with gold numbers; the pants white with a gold stripe.

Sale of Ezinicki May Bring Repercussions

(By The Canadian Press)

Hockey observers in Toronto envisage possible repercussions from the player trade that returned William (Wild Bill) Ezinicki to the National Hockey League — in the livery of Boston Bruins.

Already there is talk that if the Maple Leafs ex-muscle man from Winnipeg should draw blood from former team - mate, Toronto fans will be after the scalp of General Manager Conn Smythe.

One observer recalled that Smythe once said of the right-wing winger: "People tell me he's no good to the team. But if I let him go he'd be back with some other club and beat us with my players."

Then there's the observer who recalled a remark credited to bashing Bill during pre - season talk that he might be traded after he failed to report for training:

"If I'm traded, I'll make Toronto remember me on Saturday night."

Speculation on Smythe's decision to part with Ezinicki has covered several angles, including these posers: Has Smythe decided that the Leafs, who did well enough without Bill, can take care of themselves? Does he figure Bill no longer is the defensive-ruining wrecker he once was?

Whatever the answer is, Toronto fans are inclined to view the Leafs' engagement at home tonight with the perphologically - treated New York Rangers with less trepidation than their Sunday appearance in Boston with the Bruins.

That Leaf - Bruin tilt will give an indication of how Ezzy will perform against his former mates. Another ex-Leaf in Bruins livery will be forward Vic Lynn, who once teamed with Ezinicki and Howie Meeker.

In other weekend games, the recently - rejuvenated Montreal Canadiens play a home-and-home series with Chicago Black Hawks starting tonight in Montreal. A double win would give the Canadiens third place and drop the Hawks to fourth.

The second - place Detroit Red Wings will be out to stretch their unbeaten streak, now eight games, when they tangle tonight withthe Bruins in Boston and at home Sunday with Rangers.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

New York, Nov. 18 (AP) — Don Penniston, who has just been hired to teach the Rangers something about defence, proves that it isn't surprising that some hockey teams have their wobbly performers . . . You must remember the game is a whole generation of hockey players missing," says Don. "Too many young players had to be brought along too fast and they're not matured and skilled as pros. You'll see the same thing in baseball." . . . What's more, there's another generation that may be missing soon — as far as their development is concerned. Did you notice how the big league ball clubs went for first-year-out-of-high pros in their draft selections.

Calumets Beaten By Flyers, 9-2

Cornwall, Ont., Nov. 18 (CP)— RCAF Flyers of Ottawa stepped up their Eastern Canada Senior League lead last night by defeating Cornwall Calumets 9-2 before a crowd of 1,700.

Fifth straight victory for the Flyers, it left Calumets in second place tie with North Bay Trappers.

Flyers took the lead early and held Calumets scoreless until the third frame. George Greene and Alf Menichetti each tucked one for the Flyers. Singles were scored by Bob Denniston, Shep Mayer, George Franklin, Ross Tyrell and George Robinson.

Bert Lilly and Jean Payette scored for Cornwall.

THANKS ONTARIO!

BUT—PLEASE KEEP UP THE GOOD WORK

Your Hydro thanks all consumers and municipalities who through voluntary saving of electricity and the extension of daylight saving time have helped to ease a power situation. However, it is important that all citizens continue to save electricity in order to assist in meeting the high wintertime demands ahead.

ONTARIO IS GROWING

More electricity is required for new homes, new factories, new rural services. In addition, the step-up in rearmament production has resulted in a further sharp increase in power demands. In the past few weeks, the primary peak demand for power in Southern Ontario has, been on the average as much as 540,000 horsepower higher than a year ago . . . an amount over six times greater than the long-term average rate of increase.

HYDRO POWER SUPPLY INCREASES IN 1950

To help meet this condition, your Hydro to date this year has added 150,500 horsepower and by year-end 174,000 horsepower was in Southern Ontario. An additional 100,000 horsepower will be available in the first part of the province before the end of December from the Chenaux and Des Joachims developments.

However, the demand for power continues to soar. Your full co-operation is essential in saving electricity wherever and whenever possible. Use one light instead of two. Please turn off lights burning in out-of-the-way places. Turn off appliances as soon as they have served your purpose.

The Kibitzer

There are many hands in bridge that tempt you to lie a little bit. But it is never necessary with a partner who follows the rules. Your pair will get there if you believe.

Before me is a letter with a pair of hands that come to a good end. The other hand will be shown tomorrow. Today you will see only the north hand. The cards in north are seen here:

♠K 3
♥K 4
♦K 2
♣K J 10 8 7 6 5

South opened the bidding with two diamonds. This promises nine tricks and is forcing until at least a game is reached. This force is binding upon each of the partnership.

With a sure trick anywhere in his hand, north would follow at once the order of choice in T-A-N: takeout, assist, no-trump. Without a sure trick, the first response by north is two no-trump.

With this long and glamorous suit of clubs it seems a shame not to give partner more encouragement at once. But two no-trump is the first correct reply regardless of your feelings in the matter.

The importance of this is to warn partner what you may lack in case he desires an attempt at slam. As soon as this warning is given it is time to reveal what values you hold.

Since two no-trump is not game, south dare not pass, of course. His second bid is three diamonds. And now north bids four clubs to show his club is at least biddable.

What happens next will depend on what the next hand south will be. If he bids spades or hearts, north will bid clubs again to show it rebiddable.

In other words, in answer to an opening of two in a suit, the responder first bids two no-trump to deny a sure trick. Then he follows T-A-N until the contract falls into its place.

But let me show you the south hand, too.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Nov. 18 — (AP) — At the risk of sounding like an old codger, I might point out that the movie premiere ain't what it used to be.

Once they were thrilling affairs. They were held for only the two or three biggest pictures of the year. There were bands to sound fanfares as the stars stepped out of their limousines in their best finery.

But look what happens now. The events are no longer premieres. They are called preview-premieres, because they are given for publicity purposes long before the picture is released. Too often they are held to lend prestige to pictures which should be great, but aren't.

They are cut-and-dried affairs. The same stars appear, wearing the same gowns and tuxedos. Many of them arrive in sport clothes. Even the fans are getting as blase as the stars. Crowd figures have been slight compared with other days.

Saturday Stew

The week brought some unsettling labor news to add to Hollywood's troubles. The Screen Actors Guild, headed by Ronald Reagan, made some strong statements about unemployment among actors. And the Screen Writers Guild, now negotiating a contract with the producers, was tossing strike talk.

Columbia registered the title "Mr. Show Business" and was coy about suggestions it was for another Al Jolson sequel. But no one in Hollywood doubted that Larry Parks would again be down on his knees for the last (and perhaps most dramatic) of the Jolson epics . . . .

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Sunday, November 19

March 21 to April 20— (Aries) —Favorable especially for written matters, religious interests, journalism, study, travel and education.

Give new and unfamiliar undertakings careful thought. Control temper.

April 21 to May 20— (Taurus) —A day for prayer, good deeds, rest, and attention to essential duties. Stars urge care in money matters, unnecessary business transactions. Attend your church, be loyal to God.

May 21 to June 21— (Gemini)— Your Mercury about the only planet in benefic aspect today. All mental pursuits, activities requiring smart production and planning favored. Other aspects stress need for charity, prayer.

June 22 to July 22—(Cancer)— Day presents some restrictions, warns against ill temper, irritation. Shun unnecessary business; anything that offends God. Rest, healthy recreation, prayer urged.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)— Diplomacy, kindliness, especially at home and with family a must. Some personal desires may have to give place to more urgent matters — government, our armed forces. Pray, rest, be serene.

August 23 to September 22 — (Virgo)—As with Gemini, your Mercury is in most auspicious position, favors study, reading, spiritual devotions, essential work. Some laborious tasks may require more fortitude.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Be unselfish in thought and action, and this day will return many blessings, inner contentment. Best rays mostly sponsor study, good pastimes, mental work. Be happy.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)— You energetic folks should have regular periods for mental and physical rest, and today is that sort of day. Restful thinking, religious devotions, healthy diversion from usual work advised.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Scorpio's prescription sound for you folks now. You don't always get the complete rest you require. Add your prayers to those of other good peoples for world peace.

December 23 to January 21 — (Capricorn)—Cosy outlook. Don't harass yourself by understanding tasks or transactions that do not belong on Sunday, but to attend to duties. Make it truly "God's Day." Rest, be charitable.

January 22 to February 20 — (Aquarius)—Uranus, Mars and the Moon (inauspicious aspect now) stress common sense, conscientious fulfilment of all personal matters, family interests. Start day at church, you'll be happier.

February 21 to March 20 — (Pisces)—Mild indications in your immediate sector. Don't be hurried unless important demands are made upon you, then do act. Take time for church services, prayer with family, happy relaxation.

You born today: Independent, proud, fair; sensible in decisions and deductions. Keen fondness for pleasures? Watch this, it can divert you from path of high success that should be yours. God-given ability and much talent; qualifications that make for leadership in business, government, society, religious life. Scorpio natives make forceful orators, debaters, judges. Don't ever discourage the heeding of flattery, nor be imposed upon, though your sympathetic nature. Keep faith in God, in yourself. Opportunities ahead.

Birthdate: Jas. A. Garfield, 20th U.S. pres. Ferdinand de Lesseps, French diplomat, builder of the Suez Canal; Tiffany Blake, noted journalist.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DREAD

For Monday, November 20

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Do not shirk duties or allow another to do your responsible work, it reacts unfavorably later. Don't force opinion or ideas, rather suggest.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Some very encouraging opportunities on today's agenda for thinkers. Earn your rewards with honest, consistent effort, but avoid rushing through tasks or overdoing health, energy.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Measure your ability to carry on to successful end with tasks before you. Don't over-load yourselves with extra work that should give priority to more important matters. Use common sense.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Procedure in action or suggestion important. Carry on with faith, study well each item on your schedule. Financial or business transactions need extreme care, perhaps legal advice.

July 24 to August 23—(Leo)—You may be under pressure, some irritating circumstances during a.m., Keep your good nature and you will counteract adverses and relieve tension. Use caution all day.

August 24 to September 23—(Virgo)—You may find little assistance during business or professional activities. Your stability may be tested this uncertain period so be firm, the true Virgonian sound reasoner.

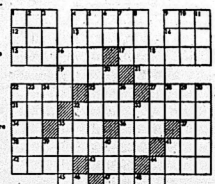
September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—A most favorable day all round. Put forth your best effort and you can achieve a just goal, notwithstanding opposition. Flexible personal outlook, be aware of useful don't and do's.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Some doubtful questions may cause you confusion, uncertainty as to procedure. Summon your best judgment and use that to-get-it spirit you possess and you will get along fine.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius) — Demeanor and viewpoint can do most to bring about favorable gains. General merchandising, manufacturing, contracting in mass production favored. Romance also in high favor.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—What may be lacking in personal favor is certainly made up in business outlook. Present your ideas, plans in most attractive and co-operative manner and not faster achievement.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Stop, think, ponder before committing yourself or others' services. Be as observant as possible, forejudging will forestall much worry, irritating moments. A prerequisite is accuracy.



February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Stars intimate you are up against a dull, non-inspiring, type of day. Keep within your sphere of ability to avoid repeating, unpleasant bickering. Be systematic, observing in work.

You born today: If educating yourself and giving your talents a chance to develop, you are diplomatic, a good manager. Exceptionally keen insight into character, can fathom rights and wrongs quickly. Have perseverance, determination, to attain goals. Can be kind and most helpful, but at times sharp and too hasty in word and act. Don't let this latter side dominate. Fond of fun, good things in life? Don't be moderate in all. Avoid worry, taking things too seriously.

Birthdate: Thos. Chatterton, English poet; Judge Kenesaw Landis; Josiah Royce, American philosopher, educator.

Premier Nehru Given Verbal Slap by Reds

By DeWITT MACKENZIE

(Associated Press News Analyst)

India's second protest to Peiping regarding communist China's military invasion of Tibet has brought a verbal slap in the face which one would think might impel Prime Minister Nehru to reconsider his policy of neutrality in east-west affairs.

According to a Peiping broadcast, the Chinese government declares that it "will not tolerate foreign interference," since Tibet belongs to China. And that is tough talk in any language.

The big question now is: What will Nehru's next move be?

The argument about Tibet is a complicated one. India's interest in the matter presumably is based mainly on two points:

1. Tibet lies on India's northern border and a most uncomfortable position would be created if an unfriendly power occupied the little country.

2. India presumably feels that she has inherited the obligations which British paramount regarding Tibet during British rule in India. Britain recognized Chinese suzerainty over Tibet on the understanding that China recognized Tibet's autonomy.

But what further can India do now, in view of the Chinese re-buff? She would seem to have gone as far as she can on her own responsibility. Tibet has appealed to the United Nations for aid but there appears to be small chance at the moment that the U. N. will intervene.

However, China's sharp rejection of the protest is bound to remind India that a middle-of-the-road policy doesn't work with communism. There is no give and take. You can't do business with them excepting on communist lines.

World Champions Will be Honored At Winter Fair

Toronto, Nov. 18—(CP)— The kings come today to the scene of their triumphs.

Five of the six world champions —one of them a 13-year-old*Alberta boy—will visit the Royal Winter Fair to be officially crowned by picking up the trophies they won for prize-winning seed exhibits.

All will get red-carpet treatment, but a little extra special fuss is going into the welcome for young Ricky Sharpe, the Munson, Alta., schoolboy whose sample of Marquis wheat was judged best in the world. Here are a few things to know about him.

He'll be welcomed by Agriculture Minister Tom Kennedy of Ontario, taken to the largest hotel in town for breakfast, then to Toronto's traffic-stopping Santa Claus parade, to the Fair and the vice-president's box at the horse show, and even to see Niagara Falls.

Other champions to get their trophies are E. W. Dodd, of Hanna City, Ill., for corn; Arthur Budarick of Palmer Falls, Ont., for potatoes; Albert Kessel of Rosetown, Sask., for barley; and Chris Morik of Dickson, Alta., for rye.

Ontario Farmers Win

At the Fair yesterday, Ontario farmers took the play away from the west by cleaning up in nearly all breeds of sheep. Practically their only competition came from the United States. The westerners picked up a few ribbons in palomino and percheron horses, but it wasn't the west's day.

About the most exciting show of the day was the international jumping competition, where Great Britain's Lt.-Col. Harry Llewellyn lived up to all the rave notices about him from Europe by sending his fine jumper Foxhunter over the nine-jump course in winning style.

It took four tie-breaking jumpoffs to do it—a record for international competition in Canada—but his victory over second and third-place Mexican riders gave Britain its second victory in four nights. The Mexicans, long the world's best at this business, also have two wins. Other countries competing are Canada, the United States, the Republic of Ireland and Chile.

BMB Band Notes

By TREBLE CLEF

To many of us the mention of the name Richard Rodgers might not awaken a feeling of acquaintance? Yet he is rated as one of America's most versatile musical comedy composers. Perhaps teaming his name with one of his lifelong friends until the friend's death in 1935 brought recognition Music by Rodgers, lyrics by Hart, Rodgers and Hart, the co-producers of many of this generation's favorite music. Their music, though much of it was written around 1935, is still popular and has been continually throughout the years. For such music as "With a Song in My Heart", "My Heart Stood Still" "Falling in Love With Love", "If I Loved You", "Where or When", Rodgers wrote the music, Hart the Lyrics. Perhaps this appears to have little or no connection with your band, but it would seem that in the case of many of the famous contemporary composers we find "digests" of their more popular music. We've had "Five Minutes of Cole Porter", "Five Minutes With Jerome Kerne", and now this week Tuesday's band has an arrangement of some of the above named Rodgers and Hart melodies interwoven for band work, and ably interpreted by Bandmaster Robbins.

In Harold Walter's "Comic Strip Suite" the comic characters were brought to life in music, via several ingenious arrangements which aptly portrayed the predominant feature of each character. The supernatural "Flash Gordon" followed by a flamenco-ian "Blon-die", with Popeye's pipe tootin' its way along to follow up. Last and most least "Suffy Smith" was brought to life in true hick country style, via a solo. These comics is represented by a musical picture, each a complete arrangement, designed more than likely merely to tickle one's fancy rather than become musical memoirs. In any case your band enjoyed going through these funny fantasies.

No there wasn't a broadcast last night, but these numbers were played at last Tuesday's rehearsal by your band.

The welcoming committee extends a large right paw to our latest member Keith Berman, who until recently played trombone with the high school band. We've had several very welcome new members these past few weeks, yet now in team-bers, we struggle at times to make ends met in all sections. It's a well known fact that teamwork comes through working together, and practice does bring one closer to perfection. These old adages are as infallable in music as in any other realm. This week we direct an entreaty to all band members, old or new. We'd like to see each Tuesday night, a "full house', the only straight way to have a royal flush of gratitude come over Bandmaster Robbin's cheery face.

Sorry, there's no broadcast this Tuesday, but come down to the bandroom and see us in person. We'll see you next week in your band's column.

STUDY NATIVE RESERVES

Cape Town — (CP) — Dr. F.R. Tomlinson of the University of Pretoria has been appointed chairman of the Commission of Inquiry into development of native reserves in South Africa. The Commission will primarily study the possibilities of economic development.

Prince Makes Home On Prairie Ranch

Kisbey, Sask. — (CP) — A ranch nestling in wooden hills in southeastern Saskatchewan is taking the place of a castle for Poland's Prince Peter Czartoyski and his wife Countess Ann Mary Joanna Zamoyska.

The Prince brought his wife and family to Canada in 1949. The Polish aristocrats and they thought about leaving Poland when Hitler invaded Poland. Stalin took over they moved out, leaving behind their huge mansion and all their fortunes.

On the cattle ranch, the Prince is an outdoorsman, but the petite haired Countess, slim, vivacious and 30 years old, shares the housework in the nine-room ranchhouse with her sister, Countess Sophia.

They have 200 head of Hereford cattle on the 8,300-acre ranch. The Prince prior to 1939 managed the farms and forestry reserves of his family's estate.

I Hear Adventure Calling

By Emilie Loring

"Disturbed. She is radiant. Why lost? She is one of the richest— and one of the most admired women in the state. Could a woman wearing those sensational diamond clips look disturbed? My honey says she couldn't.

"What had a tough break, Gene. Wealth and diamonds do not necessarily spell happiness."

"No? I've heard that one before. You've had money all your life, everything you've wanted has been handed you on a silver platter. Try being held down to a measly allowance and you'd change your ideas, Myles."

"Why remain held down? You are an exceptionally intelligent girl. Made the honor list at college, didn't you? Break away. Make a career for yourself. It's being done every day. Isn't that the major reason why girls leave home?"

"This girl would leave her happy home and quick if she had the cash. Lately dad has been as jumpy as a jack rabbit, mother is worrying herself to a frazzle trying to keep me in C.C.L., and Matilde is wearing her nerves on the outside, your ex-brother-in-law is showing front and center his rope. So far my attempts to increase my income have landed me in the red, a deep-dyed one at that, but if at first you don't succeed, you know the rest. Morals a theft. He glanced at the illuminated dial of his watch. One minute to go. Someone coming. On time to the—

Miss, Juanita.

Ask thy soul if we should part.

Clear and loud the whistled tune came from the garden. Curious that only a few moments ago he had thought of the song. Would it be answered this time? He retreated into deeper shadow. He would watch the effect on the waiter when he discovered that there was no one at the table.

A girl stopped in the doorway, looked right and left before in a flash of green and blue and silver she darted to the table at which he stood. "Oh," she breathed of when she realized she was not alone.

"It's Myles, Fran. Why the villain still pursued her! act!" She shook her head and laid her fingers on her lips as a man crossed the terrace to the steps.

"I'm thankful it is you, Myles. He mustn't see me. You are the only one who can understand. Mr. Sargent who won't let me talk—" Excitement tightened her throat and shut off her whisper.

With an arm across her shoulders he drew her close, so close he could feel the hard beat of her heart. Suppose he pressed his lips to her soft hair on a level with his chin? Now he was crazy. Was she in terror of the man standing at the head of the steps looking up at the star-riddled sky? Was he there in answer to the whistle in the garden? Was he waiting for a repetition of the signal, always supposing that it had been a signal? Now he was going back to the house. Light from the hall shone on his face.

Eckhard, Eckhard, Morrie had said he had been huddled under one of the shrubs near the gallery all during the storm. Had he conked his head on the roof. Good thing. I told Miss Tassie she shouldn't be hiring strangers here she didn't know nothing about, when all our family silver is here. What's she know 'bout this man? I wish you'd speak to her, Mr. Myles, she won't listen to me. She don't mind who she takes in, She just met this artist man once an' asked him up to visit us. It's dangerous, that's what it is. Would you like me to bring a tray here for you and the young lady sir?"

"No, we'll come to the supper room Caesar."

He watched the tall straight back until the butler entered the house. "Heard some sort of a row at the back door, guess he'd got in trouble," Caesar had said. Had Morrie's FBI caught up with "the mystery man"?

"What does it mean, Myles?"

He shook his head in answer to Fran's whispered question.

"You know as much as I do. For one thing it means that the man Barth, who, you said, had been watching you, has made a quick getaway himself, or has been forcibly removed. Anyway, he's gone, Come into the garden where we can talk without whispering, and you can tell me what it's all about. There is a seat this side of the rocks where we will not be overheard, if someone hasn't thought of it first."

Through the safe summer night under a sky gold-plated with stars, they walked down the garden path.

"Eureka, no one on the iron seat," Myles exulted. "Quick before someone beats us to it. Warm enough?" he asked when they were seated.

"As toast."

"Must be cold toast, else why the shivers?"

"The ocean is so dark, so illimitable, it stopped my heart for a second. In daylight it is glorious, at night it suggests lurking danger."

"See the white hulk against the horizon where sea and sky and star shine mingle in a glow That's a ship ,plowing forward gallantly without fear of the mighty forces beneath it."

"Without fear. Defiantly. That's a design of living. If one had the willpower always to slam the door hard against fear life would be a different proposition, wouldn't it?"

"It would. Now that we are on the subject of fear, what gave you the jitters tonight, what about the man, Barth, watching you?"

"The moment Blake and I entered the supper room, my attention was drawn to him like a pin to a magnet. Because his eyes were on me, I suppose. Perhaps he has added hypnosis to his long list of accomplishments."

INVENTION OF BLINDED CRIPPLE

New worlds have been opened up over the last few years to paraplegics in Halifax, N.S., through the novel wheelchair coach service launched by Walter Callow, a 55-year-old totally paralyzed and blind patient at Camp Hill Veterans' Hospital. Crippled children out for a ride in the country, or veterans from Camp Hill Hospital, ride free inside the roomy buses in which their own seats and wheelchairs can be trundled up the hydraulic ramps at the back and clamped into place. Here is shown the coach's interior with a group of happy youngsters returning from a day at a local fair. The wheelchairs allow patients to lie back during the drive and were designed by Callow and donated by the Halifax service clubs. — Central Press Canadian.

STIRLING

Court of Revision Will be Held On December 4th

Stirling — A by-law setting Monday, December 4th at 8 p.m., as the date and the council chambers as the place for holding the court of revision on the 1951 assessment was given the necessary readings and passed at the regular monthly meeting of the village council on Monday night.

Reeve H. J. Wells presided and councillors Bailey, Bradshaw, Elliott and Monigomery were present.

Communications Tabled

Communications were tabled from the county of Hastings, relative to indigent patients in hospital, the Ontario Municipal Board re the school debentures, The Department of Municipal Affairs are the new assessment manual, the county treasurer announcing the date of the tax sale of lands for unpaid taxes and from J. Z. O'Donnell asking for the installation of a culvert at the corner of Victoria and James Streets.

The streets committee will investigate the nuisance referred to by Mr. O'Donnell.

The finance committee recommend that the sum of $50.00 be paid for the repair of the village hall for charitable purposes council granted the request on motion of councillors Bailey and Bradshaw.

One Appeal Reported

Clerk F. R. Mallory reported one appeal received against the 1951 assessment, also the receipt of $22.90 railway tax;

Councillor Bailey reported a request from Mr. Bateman for a culvert at his property on William Street. Several accounts were passed for payment.

Messrs. Harry Francis and Fred Bateman appeared before council as a deputation from the Stirling Businessmen's Association seeking a donation towards the construction of a float for the Santa Claus parade. It was the intention of the association to construct a float that would be used for several years, also prizes would be offered for the school or school section having the best float in the parade. A grant of $50.00 was authorized by council.

Reeve Wells reported sidewalk repairs needed on Gore Street at the public school and on Front Street near C. I. Hatton's residence. The streets committee will investigate the same and have repairs made where necessary.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop said to ma, My dear, you see before you one of the most fortunate of men, I saw Rita Balboa downtown this afternoon, just coming out of the stage door of the Narcissus after a personel appearance.

Why William, how exciting, ma said, Do you realize that 5 judges from 5 different countries have just named Rita Balboa as one of the 10 best dressed women in the world? Just think of it, in the whole world, she said, and pop said, She was the best dressed woman outside the stage door of the Narcissus this afternoon, I can assure you of that.

I want you to tell me all about her, every sillable, ma said. Just exactly what did you notice about her to distinguish her from other women? she said, and pop said, Well, she wore shoes, for one thing. And she had freckels, for severel other things. Of course in the movies I believe the makeup men hide the freckels with corn flakes. Or no, come to think of it, they use the corn flakes for snow scenes, he said.

Oh, I meen her clothes, silly ma said, Were you close to her? she said, and pop said, My dear, I was close enough to touch her, but I didn't, because she was already being touched by a crowd of peculiar little people waving autograf books.

Then tell me what she was wearing, I want to hear every last little detail, ma said, and pop said, Well, to start at the top, she had a hat of some shape or other, with a dingbat either at the front or the back, and her dress was neither one thing nor the other, if you know what I mean, and that brings me down to her shoes, of which I counted at least two.

Oh, hush and keep quiet, ma said.

Which he did behind the sporting page.

WIFE OF LAWYER CHARGED WITH MURDER

Two Dead, Many Homeless in Floods In Central Calif.

Damage to Property, Crops, Roads Runs into Millions

Fresno, Calif., Nov. 20. (AP)—Perhaps the worst flood in Central California history took two lives, drove thousands from their homes and damaged millions of dollars worth of property, crops, highways and livestock.

Mountain streams, normally little more than rivulets, bloated into raging torrents during the weekend under the impact of days of driving rain and melting snow from the Sierra Mountains.

Some communities were inundated. Others were threatened by weakening dikes. Roads and bridges were washed out.

Countless rescue missions kept casualties to a minimum.

The Weather Bureau warned that a new storm would pour more rain over North Central California today, eighth day of the record-breaking downpours that dumped as much as 10 inches of rain in a 24-hour period in foothills east of Fresno.

Immediately warm weather in the Sierras thawed the snow pack, adding millions of gallons of water to the swollen streams.

At Donner Pass the snow had piled to more than 15 feet even inches and still was dwindling.

The Red Cross estimated the flood had forced at least 3,000 families from their homes. One man was found drowned in bed in his cottage on the rampaging Sacramento river. Another died of a heart attack as he was being rescued from his home.

As flood waters surged over the already-drenched farmlands from Sacramento to Bakersfield, Governor Earl Warren ordered all State department heads to alert their staffs for all-out assistance.

Queen's Faculty Of Medicine Gets $50,000 Grant

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 20 (CP)—A $50,000 grant from the Atkinson Charitable Foundation to the Faculty of Medicine was announced today by Dr. R. C. Wallace, principal of Queen's University.

It will be spread over five years at the rate of $10,000 a year "to initiate and for a limited period establish a chair of paediatrics," said Dr. Wallace.

Paediatrics is the science of diagnosis, prevention and treatment of diseases of children.

Dr. Rob Roy MacGregor, present Professor of Paediatrics on a part-time basis, will withdraw from private practice to serve as full-time paediatric chief.

Dr. G. Harold Ettinger, Dean of Medicine, said the new work will centre in the bed children's unit of Kingston General Hospital, with full co-operation with the paediatric services of Hotel Dieu Hospital.

The Atkinson Foundation was established by the late J. E. Atkinson, publisher of the Toronto Daily Star.

Ricky Sharpe, Boy Wheat King, Liked Lunch

Toronto, Nov. 20—(CP)— Ricky Sharpe, boy wheat king from Munson, Alta., will be remembered by newspaper reporters here as a lad who during his trip east seldom gave the obvious reply to a question.

After a hectic day at Niagara Falls, Ont., Sunday when he almost wore out five adults in his party, he sat asleep almost upright in his motel.

Even then, a 12-year-old, the obvious reply would have been Niagara Falls—one of the nine wonders of the world. But what did Ricky say?

"Lunch!"

He had had lunch in the glass-enclosed dining room of a hotel overlooking the falls, after travelling to Niagara Falls in an automobile supplied by Agriculture Minister Kennedy (Ont., Dufferin).

In the party were Ricky's parents; Mrs. Roderick Sharpe, an aunt from Munson, Ont.; Jay Cardell, newspaper woman from Calgary, and Jack Hambleton, free-lance writer.

Hambleton said that after lunch Ricky "ran" the party rapidly, running here and there to view the Falls from every possible angle.

"But," said Hambleton, "he couldn't talk us into walking up General Brock's monument. Those 100 steps would have been our undoing."

DIES AT 110 YEARS

Santa Barbara, Calif., Nov. 20— Ventura Rivas, possibly the oldest man in California, died Saturday night at the age of 110. County welfare authorities authenticated his age a few years ago.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Nov. 20—(CP)—Synopsis: An intensifying storm centre over Ohio will move rapidly through eastern Ontario this afternoon and pass into Quebec tonight. It will be wake and to the northwest, the winds will swing to the north causing temperatures to fall sharply.

Rain fell over southern Ontario during the night but is giving way to snow in the Bruce peninsula and North Bay areas as the cold-er air moves.

Storm warnings are up over all the Great Lakes.

SUPREME COURT JUDGMENTS UPSET SEVERAL CASES

Restrictions in Real Estate Deal Invalid

Ottawa, Nov. 20 (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada broke new legal ground in several major cases today.

In a series of judgments, the court:

1. Declared ultra vires a 1947 Federal Order-in-Council purporting to give the Canadian Wheat Board power to take possession of all oats and barley in Canada and prohibit its export by anything but the board.

2. Declared invalid a "restrictive covenant" in a real estate deed barring the sale of an Ontario property to persons of specified creeds and races.

3. Held a divorced woman cannot collect additional alimony from her former husband after she has accepted a lump-sum settlement.

4. Partially granted a Canadian Pacific Railway appeal from a Saskatchewan court ruling.

The grain case judgment ruled that the emergency powers transitional Act did not confer the power to appropriation to the cabinet, under whose Order-in-Council the wheat board had taken possession of 20,000,000 bushels of barley.

The high court voted five to two in favor of an action taken by J. J. Nolan of Chicago, who had refused to turn over 40,000 bushels of barley he had in store at the Lakehead when the board was taking up grain.

Covenant Invalid

In the real estate case, the court in four to one decision declared invalid a covenant that prohibited the sale of certain properties along Lake Huron to any person of the Jewish, Armenian, Negro or Asiatic race or blood.

The Supreme Court judgment upset unanimous findings of the Ontario Supreme Court and Ontario Court of Appeals.

The ruling was made in a case brought by Mrs. Lorrell Olsen, who had married Noble of Longon, Ont., and Bernard Walter Bacher, Toronto. Mrs. Noble had sold to Wolf, a Jew, property containing a restrictive covenant.

The Supreme Court of Canada decision in effect reversed was against the public interest, was unenforceable on racial grounds and was a restraint on the freedom of sale of property.

The dissenting decision was given in a case in which Mrs. Bertha Maynard of Toronto sought to obtain further alimony from her former husband, Cecil E. Maynard, after accepting a $2,200 lump-sum settlement under a divorced court order.

The action was regarded as a test case involving the right of matrimonial litigants to appeal held judgments of the Ontario Supreme Court and Court of Appeals.

Chinese Prisoners Suprised When Asked if They Had Volunteered

Seoul, Nov. 20 (AP) —American infantry paced by tanks surged down a snow-covered North Korean valley late today within five miles of the Manchurian border.

A 10th Corps spokesman said leading units of the U.S.-Seventh Division were only two miles from their goal, the border town of Hyesanjin, at 4 p.m. (2 a.m. EST).

He said the troops probably would wait until Tuesday before pressing into the town.

Red resistance, sporadic to light earlier, dwindled to "practically nothing" by late afternoon, the officer said.

The expected battle of Kapsan turned into a rout of the reds Sunday morning. A sharp fight on the hills outside the walled city left scores of North Korean dead. Many were crushed by the treads of tanks as the fighting where they had planned to ambush the American column.

But the trap was disclosed by two yeds. Terrified by the approaching tanks, they leaped and jumped from their foxholes and ran.

Tom Stone of The Associated Press, only correspondent with the U.S. Seventh Division unit, said it lasted only minutes, sixty-five reds surrendered when their top colleagued, Others fled.

MacArthur's headquarters indicated the Chinese communists are leaving Red wilbord reluctantly to the forthcoming clash with the anti-U.N. forces.

Prisoners from the Chinese red 39th Army were surprised when asked if they had volunteered as the red radio has insisted. They said they knew of no Chinese who had volunteered to fight in Korea. The prisoners said they were ordered to fight to the death not to surrender, and that U.N. troops would kill them if they failed to give up. Communist political officers were attached to each unit.

Late Most Rev. George F. Kingston

Anglican Primate of Canada Archbishop G. Kingston Dies

Toronto, Nov. 20. (CP)—Most Rev. George Frederick Kingston, a bishop since 1940 and primate of the Church of England in Canada for the last three years, died today after a week's illness. He was 61.

Archbishop of Nova Scotia, he suffered a heart attack last Monday after coming here from Halifax for a meeting of the Anglican House of Bishops last week and for further church meetings this week.

Before his election to the See of Halifax in 1944, he served for four years as Bishop of the Missionary Diocese of Algoma in Northern Ontario.

At his death, Most Rev. W. R. Adams, archbishop of the Yukon and metropolitan of British Columbia, automatically became acting primate. Archbishop Adams served in the same capacity after the death of Archbishop Kingston's predecessor as primate, Most Rev. Derwyn T. Owen, in 1947.

Arrangements for the funeral are in charge of the four metropolitans of the church and the coadjutor bishop of Nova Scotia who will announce details after consulting with Mrs. Kingston.

The metropolitans are: Archbishop Adams; Most Rev. L. R. Sherman, archbishop and metropolitan of Rupert's Land; Most Rev. Philip Carrington, archbishop of Quebec and metropolitan of the ecclesiastical province of Canada; and Most Rev. John Lyons, archbishop of the diocese of Ontario and metropolitan of the ecclesiastical province of Ontario.

Rt. Rev. R. H. Waterman is coadjutor bishop of Nova Scotia.

Viscount Alexander, Governor-General of Canada, was in Toronto yesterday and visited the hospital. The archbishop was too ill to see him.

Scholar and able administrator, Archbishop Kingston was the seventh primate of the Church of England in Canada and the third native-born Canadian to take the highest office in his church.

He was elected primate at a meeting of the General Synod in Saskatoon by the Electoral College, consisting of the bishops of the Upper House and other members of the executive council of the church in Canada.

The Electoral College also will name his successor. At that time was no indication immediately when or where it will meet.

Archbishop Kingston carried his 61 years lightly. His quiet manner concealed a driving energy which found an outlet in the work of his church.

Born at Prescott, Ont., he was ordained in the diocese of Nova Scotia in 1916, three years after his graduation from Trinity College in Toronto. Years later, he returned to the diocese as bishop in 1944 and assumed the title archbishop on his election to the see.

On his ordination, he spent 24 years as a college professor, first at King's College, then located at Windsor, N.S., where he taught philosophy, and later as professor of ethics and dean of men at Trinity College.

In 1940 he was named Bishop of Algoma, where he worked among northern Ontario Indians of Algoma's big missionary field and put the episcopal endowment fund on a secure basis.

PRINCESS PATS LEAVE ALBERTA ON WAY TO KOREA

Stop at Fort Lewis For Only Few Days

Wainwright, Alta., Nov. 20 — (CP)—Four troop trains are snaking today through the Rocky Mountains, carrying part of Canada's Special Brigade on the first leg of their journey to Korea.

Aboard are more than 1,000 members and reinforcements of the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry—the only Canadian unit thus far committed to service in Korea.

They are due to arrive at the giant army camp of Fort Lewis, Wash., some time Tuesday, and will sail for the Far East a few days later.

It is not known yet just what role they will play in Korea. Whether they will become part of the Commonwealth Brigade or will fight with the men of the United States army. One thing is fairly certain—barring an unforeseen emergency—the Patricia's now have at least two months more training before they see any action.

Whatever happens, their Commanding Officer, Lt.-Col. F. R. (Jim) Stone, D.S.O., M.C., is certain they will be a credit to Canada.

Yesterday he said in an interview that the men of the Special Force—some reports to the contrary—are well-motivated, intelligent and have absorbed training faster than any he has known.

They looked it as they marched to the train along the newly-covered roads of Canada's largest military camp, where they put the finishing touches to a super-speeded, three - month training program.

Little Rosemarie Doesn't Know Why Gifts Pour in

Wallaceburg, Ont., Nov. 20.— (CP)— Five-year-old Rosemarie Garrod has a flock of new dolls, a new blue bouncecoat, fevered pyjamas and all kinds of other presents. She doesn't know the reason for the presents and she doesn't know why.

But Rosemarie is patiently saving her treasures in a piggy-bank so she can buy herself a doll's house, her heart's desire.

What she doesn't know is that the pink lining inside which has kept her in bed almost since school opened, means that she'll have the same thing next Christmas.

Rosemarie is suffering from cancer. Doctors say she has only two or three weeks to live. Her family and friends are doing everything they can to make sure those weeks are happy ones.

Middle East Will Not be Left Defenceless

London, Nov. 20. (Reuters)—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin today's answer to Russia's demand for withdrawal of British troops from Egypt by declaring Britain had no intention of leaving the Middle East defenceless.

He indicated in the House of Commons that British policy on Egypt would not be changed by the demands made in Russia's speech from the throne to the Egyptian parliament last Friday.

He said Britain's attitude remained the same towards the Sudan, which Farouk insisted should be united with Egypt under his sovereignty.

"The Sudanese must decide their own future," Bevin said. "I

F. J. Sullivan, 52, Found Bludgeoned To Death in Ottawa

Police Not Notified Until Several Hours After Death

Ottawa, Nov. 20. (CP)—Marion Sullivan, 50, her face pale and drawn, Monday made a brief silent appearance in city court, charged with the murder of her husband, grey-haired 52-year-old Francis J. Sullivan, prominent Toronto lawyer.

The chief solicitor for the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests was found bludgeoned to death early Saturday in a swank tower suite of the downtown Chateau Laurier hotel, home of Cabinet ministers and members of Parliament.

The socially well-known Mrs. Sullivan, holding a blue coat over her arm, finally stood before the court filled with spectators to hear the charge of murder read out by the court clerk.

She was taken quickly out of the room after Crown Attorney Raoul Mercier sought and obtained a week's remand of the hearing, on the understanding that still another week's remand would be sought when Mrs. Sullivan-Gough made her second appearance in court.

Want to Clear up Details

Main reason for the crown's call for remand, police disclosed was the need to clear up "an avalanche of details" in the police case in Ottawa's history of a woman charged with murder.

They called attention to an eight-hour delay between the time of discovery, Dr. Harry Dover, viewed the body on the first residential floor of the Chateau and the time he called police into the case.

In Toronto Attorney-General Porter said today that Deputy Attorney-General C. H. Magone and H. H. Donald, Inspector of Legal Offices, will leave for Ottawa, to inquire into the weekend slaying, but purely on a departmental basis.

He came to Canada about two years ago after studying at Edinburgh and Belgrade and for one year worked on a farm near Tyson, concentrating his studies on the farm and going to night school to perfect his English. The first year he was in the city he was employed at the Bakelite Corporation plant here on Street East and then entered the University of Toronto, where he graduated in 1950 with honor science since this spring and now working on his Ph.D. degree specializing in the field of pure chemistry. Mr. Cvetanovic is investigating the reaction of sodium atoms with various organic compounds.

ST. MEN'S GOVERNOR FROM BELLEVILLE THROUGH INTERNATIONAL AWARD

Larry Buck, of Belleville, governor of Y's Men's Eastern Ontario district, is in Peterborough this week to present to the Peterborough Y's Men's Club the international award for outstanding work among boys last year. The presentation by Larry Buck on behalf of Y's Men's International.

In making the presentation Mr. Buck briefly outlined the club's international project which included $2,000 spent on boys' work in 1,000 man hours in camp instruction at Clear Lake.

Three other Y's Men's clubs, one in Fenelon Falls, and two in Fort Erie, also received the award.

MRS. F. A. ROPER WINNER OF DRAW

Mrs. F. A. Roper, 33 Howard Street, was the lucky winner of a major prize, a beautiful Bellinghouse Dalyphonic radio-phonograph combination at Sandy's Electric Shop. The lucky ticket was drawn by Mr. Frank Elwell, M.P., and marked the close of a very successful event last week at which Dandy Electric and company representatives played host to thousands of friends during open house.

Mr. Fellwell congratulated Mr. David and expressed pleasure on the fine improvements carried out which are a credit to Front Street and the city.

Sale of Wreaths, Poppies Success Says Secretary

A record for all past years in the sale of wreaths and poppies was made in the recent campaign that has just been brought to a close and from the results, prove that the Citizens of Belleville "Remember" the sacrifices made by the boys who lie in foreign fields, states Alderman Everett Liddle, secretary of the Belleville Poppy Committee.

Some of the highlights of the campaign were the sale of wreaths sold, bringing in a total of $3,250; 12,000 poppies sold on Saturday in a short time, $1,350, making a gross total of $3,700. The committee also donated to public schools, separate schools, BCI &VS, Albert College and Business School for the Deaf over 4,000 small poppies. The children of the public schools deserve special mention for their efforts on Friday evening, Nov. 10th in making the campaign a great success as their returns ran over $300, which is included in the above-mentioned amount.

The committee will have a net profit of at least $1,400, to carry on their welfare work among veterans and their dependents in Belleville and surrounding district after paying the Provincial Poppy Committee for wreaths and poppies.

The committee appreciates the wonderful support given by the citizens and school children in general in making the 1950 Poppy Day sale such a splendid success.

Judging Team In 19th Place

At the livestock judging competition at the Royal Winter Fair Charles Bales and Earl Bedford of Melrose, and Harvey Homan, Corbyville, placed nineteenth out of the twenty-nine teams competing from throughout the counties of Ontario, etc.

This judging competition is the senior and most keenly contested competition in the judging line and were ten classes of livestock. Judging and reasons given on all classes. Officials in charge were obtained from the Ontario Agricultural College, the Dominion Department of Agriculture, and the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

A banquet, sponsored by the Royal Winter Fair, was given in honor of the boys that placed in the competition. Among the speakers at the banquet was Mr. C. D. Graham, Deputy Minister of Agriculture. Mr. Graham's inspiring words dealt with the importance of more education for young farm people, and stated that he felt the most important part of an education was learning to make a decision and backing up that decision with reason.

The South Hastings Grain Club entered three entries of Beaver Oats at the Winter Fair, Robert Mallory of Trenton obtaining first prize, Harold Cole of Corbyville obtained eleventh prize and Harvey Homan of Corbyville was twentieth.

There were approximately sixty entries from other parts of the province at this competition.

District Farmers Welcome Rain To Fill Wells

They are possibly alone in their feelings, but farmers in the Bay of Quinte district seem to be glad to have been low during the fall months are welcoming the recent rainfall with open arms. In many cases throughout the district farmers report that there is insufficient water in wells to water stock and state the situation would be serious if the present rains before wells were filled.

Recent rainfall has served to raise the level in creeks in the area but to date the water has not soaked into the ground in sufficient quantities to raise well levels.

Display of Folk Dancing Will be Presented Here

The Sokol Gymnastic Club of Batawa will present a display of folk dancing music and gymnastics in Belleville Collegiate Auditorium this week. The group is not organized for competition. Members take part in the training under expert guidance because they really enjoy it.

They have presented this display for several organizations in the district such as home and school clubs, Women's Institutes and have turned over most of their proceeds to such charitable causes as Trenton Hospital and Aid to European children.

On Wednesday night they will present their colorful display here in commemoration of the independence of Czechoslovakia in 1918. Proceeds will be divided between charitable causes of this part of Ontario and on the Belleville swimming pool project.

The organization desires to assist in the two worthy causes mentioned above and at the same time honor the democratic founder of Czechoslovak Republic in 1918, the late Thomas G. Masaryk, president of the republic during its only period of complete freedom, 1918-1939.

Napping Kitten Found Safe in Laundry

A search through a stack of bags of soiled linen turned up the kitten, none the worse for the experience.

Sidney School Area Holds Business Session

The Sidney School Area Board held its regular meeting at the Wallbridge School with all members present. Mr. C. Latchford, tenant on a north Bayside farm, was present to request repairs to the stone foundation of the barn, where some stones had fallen out. The board authorized him to get material to repair it.

A matter for discussion was the disposal of the film projector, the Gestetner duplicator and the filing cabinet. Two offers had already been made for the projector, it was decided to give the Hastings County Film Council first chance to purchase it on the understanding that they would make film service available to those interview schools which might wish to continue the use of films in the school and the Gestetner. An advertisement for the sale of the Gestetner and the filing cabinet was to be placed in the paper later.

In order to get the area building in shape before the end of the year, a committee was appointed consisting of Mr. Latchford and Mr. Leland Company about balance of payment for rock taken from the quarry up to the present time and then to the end of the year.

Accounts totalling $2,035.42 including the teachers' November salaries were approved for payment. A grant was received from the Ontario Teachers' Federation of $1,000 which will be for this year was to be deducted from the November cheque of the teacher.

The supervising principal reported that he had been advised by phone that the Marsh Hill annex had been broken into and that over the week-end Extent of damage had not been determined. The provincial police were notified and promised to investigate immediately. Fourteen subscription fee was sent to the secretary of the Ontario Federation.

The impossibility of continuing the liability and accident policy was discussed as the cost was realized. The secretary reported that he had been arranging with the company to discontinue it the end of the year.

Some school repair jobs were still to be completed, the secretary was instructed that they be done by someone else, if those who were to do the work could not do them at once.

The attendance banner was won by Glen Mildred School for the month of October with a percentage of 98.6 per month Mr. Thompson's pupils were runners-up this gives them a very close showing for the first two months of the year. Centenary and Mt. Wallbridge schools were tied for second with 98.24 per cent.

Only Canadian To Attend Course

Mr. J. A. McPee has recently returned from Kansas City, Mo., where he attended a course for optometrist in attendance at the Kansas City Clinic and Congress. This is an annual post-graduate lecture and clinical course designed to bring current development in the various fields of optometry, by practitioners. Emphasis of this year's Congress was placed on "Developmental Vision", dealing with visual growth from birth onwards, and demonstrating how visual difficulties arise as the human being takes his place in the highly artificial visual environment of home, school, factory and office.

Says Angry Father Killed Officer, Wounded Another

Detroit, Nov. 20 — (AP) — A father who "got a mad on" when police came to arrest his son killed one officer and wounded another yesterday.

Reinforcements rushed in and used tear gas and riot guns to arrest him.

Detectives identified the father as Charles Marshall Gordy, Sr., a 53-year-old Negro.

They said he admitted firing the rifle that mortally wounded Patrolman Andrew Mellert, 30, and injured his companion, 23-year-old Patrolman David Morgan. Morgan was reported in good condition today.

There was some early fear of rioting in the Negro neighborhood as bayonet - armed police, 100 strong, were hurried to the scene.

A big crowd gathered but there was no violence, officers reported.

However, three Negro men were arrested and held for investigation of inciting to riot. Officers said they spread a report that a child had been killed in the Gordy house.

Patrolmen Mellert and Morgan arrived at the house shortly before noon Sunday to arrest young Gordy, 21, on a charge of robbery. The father said they needed a warrant, officers said the gunman began agreed to go, but the elder Gordy fired as they led his son away, handcuffed.

Lives on Rock Three Days Before Rescue Came

Juneau, Alaska, Nov. 20 (AP)—A 22-fingered recovery by surgery of huddling, wet and freezing, on a rock for three days before rescue came today to the man who organized search today for his two companions.

U. S. Coast Guard planes and a number of fishing boats put out to look along the storm-lashed coast of Chichagof Island for Fred Wetche and his son, Fred, Jr.

With them in the small boat when it was caught in an Alaska brale last week was Howard Christinson, who told of the disaster when he was brought here for treatment of frostbite.

Christinson said the trio set out last Monday on a hunting trip to cove near Pelican, a village on the west side of Chichagof Island about 75 miles northwest here.

Their boat became disabled in the storm, and the men climbed on the nearest rock in an effort to reach nearby Yakobi Rock. The boat was driven ashore. Christinson managed to swim to the rock but lost trace of the elder Wetche and his son.

Without food, Christinson remained on the rock three days before a fishing boat sighted him and took him off.

IN MEMORIAM

SERO — In loving memory of a dear mother, Margaret Ellen Sero, who passed away November 21st, 1943.
We miss you at a thousand turns
For you were more than words can show
Since you were called away.
Your life left lessons of loving hearts
That loved you most sincere,
Your memory is our treasure and can
Forget you, mother dear.
Ever remembered by daughter Kay
Gordon and granddaughters.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 20—CP—Industrials firmed at mid-day high levels as the session progressed on the Toronto Stock Exchange today.

In continuation of Saturday's advance industrials opened strong and then stayed at their highest prices in moderate trading. Gains ranged to a point and papers, steels, liquors, retail stores, manufacturing companies and refining oils showed a majority or gains in the groupings. Constructions and banks tended lower and the rest of the board was mixed.

Base metals climbed strongly to set a 16-year price peak. Consolidated Smelters gained 1¾ to set a new high at $126. Falconbridge, International Nickel, Quemont, Sherritt Gordon, Steep Rock and Walte Amulet showed gains up to 35 cents.

Golds drifted lower in quiet trading. Scattered losses dipped fractions and junior golds slipped pennies. Western oils were mixed.

Volume for the first three hours was 1,068,000 shares.

TWEED

Liquor Store Will be Opened In Village

Tweed—The Liquor Control Board of Ontario will establish a liquor store in the village of Tweed, it has been announced. The store will be located on the premises now occupied by Clarke's Station Shop with renovation of the premises expected to commence within a few days.

Three years ago residents of Tweed voted for the establishment of a liquor store but the Liquor Board claimed that several applications superseded that of Tweed this causing the delay in opening the Tweed outlet. Since the vote was taken several deputations had waited on the board asking that actibg be taken on in setting up the store.

The matter of staffing the store will be considered at a later date. It is understood that two permanent appointees, the vendor and assistant vendor, will be named.

Medical Officer Tells Residents To Boil Water

Tweed (Special)—A warning for residents of Tweed to boil all water from the village waterworks system before using it for domestic purposes has been issued by Dr. J. McCue, medical officer of health.

The doctor reported that the village water is testing "D" and since the water is obviously contaminated there is a definite danger unless the water is boiled before using for domestic purposes.

Chlorination of the water at the village plant is expected to clear up the condition but separate and individual tests will be taken at all wells to determine the source of contamination. The water in the storage tank tested "A" until a short time ago, it was stated.

Reeve Graham To Run Again

Tweed—Elected to the office one year ago Reeve T. C. Graham will again contest the township at the next election. Mr. Graham stated he was definitely in the field for 1951.

Although nominations will be held this Friday, Tweed councillors have yet remained noncommittal of their intentions. Councillors Burkett, Snare, Truideau and Wood all said they had not yet made up their mind.

It is expected there will be an election in Hungerford township with Reeve A. Hagerman having expressed a desire to retire this year. Councillors Elmer Wood and Cecil Geen are considering contesting the reeveship. In Elzevir township it is likely that Reeve Carman Kleinsteuber will be returned by acclamation and there is no talk of an election for council.

BANCROFT

Hills Reduced, Crooked Roads Made Straight

Bancroft—L'Amable and Selby hills have disappeared.

This is a slight bit of exaggeration but those who have not driven to North Hastings in the past few months will open their eyes in astonishment when they see what the Ontario Department of Highways has done to these two famous hills. With any kind of car in any half-decent running condition you can go over the top of either of these two former road tests without shifting to second or third or having to get 'a good running start'.

L'Amable Made Straight

L'Amable has been straightened and lengthened so that you do not have to take those turns and twists as you went through Brown Brothers' mill yard and over the narrow cement bridge on L'Amable Creek. Going north the road has been moved to the left at the head of North Lake and goes out almost a straight line to the spot where it joins the old highway near Quarry Lake.

Selby no longer starts all wind at the base of the creek and proceed upwards along a series of grades and large turns that used to be rated as one of the most dangerous stretches of road on any through highway in Ontario. The new road goes to the right of the Hixon residence and has a long straight grade that now reminds one of Thibeault hill, on the outskirts of North Bay, after this Northern Ontario landmark received its face-lifting job during the late 'thirties'.

More Work to Be Done

A little more work has to be done on L'Amable before both sides of the hill are finally levelled and a permanent paving job on the new stretch cannot be completed this year.

One old-timer of the district was heard to recently remark sadly that the only place you could still find real hills in the Bancroft district was at the Highland Grove road and plans have even been made to modernize this stretch.

Musical Concert

Great enthusiasm greeted the artists of the Ontario Department of Education in their second musical concert of the season in Bancroft on Thursday night. For the second successive season large and appreciative audiences have consistently come to the auditorium of Bancroft District High School to hear the provincially sponsored groups of young artists.

The travelling troupe consisted of Walter Prystawski, violinist, Virginia Lippert, soprano, Eva Silvester, pianist and John Vickers, baritone. All performers except Vickers a Saskatoon boy, came from Toronto.

Judging by the audience's reaction to date, another good gathering will greet the third series of artists when they visit Bancroft on January the 18th.

33,000 Phone Employees Return To Work in U.S.

New York, Nov. 20 — (AP) — More than 33,000 telephone employees returned to work across the United States today under compromise settlements that ended their 11-day strike against units of the huge Bell Telephone system.

In Pittsburgh, news - hungry residents got papers again but the only following settlement during the week of a strike of mailing-room workers which lasted 47 days. Pressure rolled again for the first time since Oct. 1 at the Post-Gazette, Sun - Telegraph and Press, and the papers were eagerly snapped up by waiting crowds.

The telephone agreements were reached yesterday in New York and Detroit, where federal mediators had been seeking peace in the pay dispute.

The break came at the end of a 25-hour marathon bargaining session in New York between Bell's Western Electric Company and Division 6 of the Communications Workers of America (C. I. O.), representing 11,000 equipment installers.

The parent Bell Corporation said that aside from some local disruptions it maintained nearly-normal service throughout the strike.

The union claimed a strike victory. The companies called the settlements "fair" — although "costly" in the dispute involving the Michigan Bell Company. In Detroit, striking wire men actually receded from their hard-and-fast strike positions.

Series of Increases

In the key Western Electric dispute, the Union had demanded a 15-cent hourly raise, but accepted a series of increases from nine to 14 cents. These averaged, by company figures, 11.3 cents — slightly less than Western Electric's last offer of 11 1/4 cents. The wage averaged from $1.55 to $1.62 an hour.

The Union came closer to its whole length of contract, accepting a 15-month term instead of the two-year part it desired. The Union also won some other issues.

The Pittsburgh newspaper strike was actually settled last Tuesday, when mailing-room employees accepted a 10-cent-an-hour increase now and 3½ cents more in two months. They had asked for a 13-cent hourly boost from their average $78.13 for a 37½-hour week.

The Mailers' Union's A. F. L. charter was lifted after the start of the strike.

Drivers, members of the A. F. L. Teamsters, refused to handle papers not bundled by the Mailers' Union, forcing the papers to shut down.

Most European Countries With Short Coal Stocks Hope for Mild Winter

London, Nov. 20 (Reuters) — Most European countries, with a watchful eye cocked on dwindling coal stocks, are hoping the weather keeps fine this winter.

Jack Frost holds the whip hand this season, with Europe living a hand-to-mouth existence in fuel supplies.

If the weather is mild and the need for coal is not so urgent, most countries will just about get by until they can begin stockpiling against next summer. But if frost turns rough, the weather will grow cold and bare in many homes.

The coal panel of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, recently urged producer countries to boost output as much as possible and warned importers to try to avoid unnecessary stock-piling. The panel meets again at the end of this month to review the situation.

Here is a country-by-country report on this battle to keep the home fires burning:

Britain: Householders stocked up their cellars with some 700,000 tons at special cheap summer rates, but supplies are still down and austerity is growing. Coal production is at a record high, but consumption has also risen—due chiefly to industrial expert and the new arms drive. Indications are that Britain may have to cut exports to meet the home demand.

Germany: This country faces the worst plight of them all. Coal are forecast. If rainfall is high, duction have given a sound Rec duction of 400,000 tons stockpil

ALL TRAFFIC RULES IMPORTANT

"The appalling frequency of fatalities and the pictures of crumpled wrecks which appear in almost every newspaper should be warning enough that the price of safety demands full observance of all the traffic regulations — not all as major," comments a writer in the Hamilton Spectator under an editorial headed "No 'Minor' Traffic rules."

The writer commented on the fact that one morning last week 503 motorists appeared on the roster of the traffic court "who had been summoned during the previous two weeks for failure to heed the rules of the road."

Many of these charges, said the writer, might be termed as "minor infractions." Their range was from parking too long to not halting at stop streets, from exceeding the speed limit to not stopping at hazardous intersections. Numerous of these violations might have proved anything but minor had the circumstances been different. What is disturbing is the evidence that several hundred motorists could be found within fourteen days who were not heeding the regulations."

The point which ought to be stressed, it is pointed out, is that "no motorist who wishes to avoid trouble can afford to be careless even in a minor way today with the roads crowded as they are and the power of modern vehicles so quickly responsive to the pressure of a driver's foot."

The Hamilton editorial then gives a bit of advice. "To keep out of trouble a driver has to be alert and cautious every moment he is at the wheel. The motorist who fails to do so, and is careless in observing 'minor' regulations may be closer to a serious accident than he appreciates and overlaying his luck to say nothing of the hazard he becomes to the careful driver."

The toll of accidents in which people are injured or killed is one of the tragic marks of this age. Pictures of wrecks and reports of the number killed and of the victims of fatal accidents should leave an abiding impression on the mind of everyone who uses the highways and roads. All traffic rules must be obeyed for safety's sake whether they be listed as minor accidents or not. No one should be allowed drivers is to have no accidents and that ideal is the one to be commended to every person who drives on the roads and highways.

ENGINEERING OPPORTUNITIES

The engineering industry of Britain will soon be sending a welcome to some of the young engineering graduates of Canada, a plan has been announced by the United Kingdom Government which will award fellowships to hand-picked Canadian engineering graduates so that they may go to Britain for a period of up to two years' post graduate training. The fellowships will be known as the "Alexander Fellowships" named after a former Governor-General of Canada.

It is the intention to award up to 38 fellowships every year. The aim is to provide for a period of training and experience in Britain for those graduates of qualifications to be enhanced during the period of training and experience in Britain. They will be equipped with a knowledge of the products, standards and the potentialities of the engineering industry in Britain.

Emphasis is to be on industrial training as well as research and further academic training will not be ruled out. Training will range over the whole field of engineering.

The plan is to be administered by a managing committee on which leading industrialists and representatives of the universities will have places, as well as government representatives. Selection boards will be set up in Canadian centres, and the committee will arrange to place successful candidates either in the industry or in universities and colleges or in research establishments or in a combination of these.

Selection of the first Athlone fellows to go to the United Kingdom in 1951 will begin in the coming winter, finishing students in their final year will be provisionally chosen and awards conformed if their degree results come up to expectation. There will be a number of places kept open for graduates who are already serving in industry.

THE CRUISE SHIPS DISAPPEAR

With the approach of the end of navigation on the great Lakes, passengers along the border are reviving sentimental memories of the time when passenger ships did a thriving business, yet now have all but disappeared. The Owen Sound Sun-Times points out that for the first time in 66 years no passenger boats this summer connected Owen Sound and Georgian Bay with Port William and Fort Arthur. The only two passenger ships left are the Assiniboia and Keewatin operating between Port McNicoll and the head of the lakes. The Toronto-Prescott passenger service has also been withdrawn. As old steamboats disappear, replacements are not made, as they are too expensive. American steamboat companies are in the same difficulties, and are asking for federal assistance in building new ships. Canadian border newspapers also are urging government help to save the once prosperous passenger business which so greatly encouraged the tourist traffic.

MORE IMPORTANT THAN THINGS

A vain are all the things we make
Or luxury and for comfort's sake,
Of having them, home falls apart,
Losing the loving mind and heart.

The walls of home, however stout
And trim, cannot keep anger out.
The best machine that sweeps the floor
Will smile at fio one at the door.

The wheels and gears that smoothly run
Will get the tedious labor done,
But home requires the care that springs
From hearts and not invented things.

The faith, the courage and the grace
That makes the home a restful place;
The smile once more when tears are dried Devotion only can provide.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The big stores have all taken on their extra Christmas help, and the following is a sample of the little dramas that are now occurring.

The girl is a seventeen-year-old clerk in the towelling. She has the habit of raising one eyebrow as a mark of mild surprise. She and the management have agreed on this chew gum during business hours.

The gentleman is a middle-aged Scot, and has come almost from his native land that the towelling department of the linen passages, with perhaps a little barley. He has ordered some towels as a mark of mild surprise.

"The name, please?" says the girl, chewing away busily, as she bends to her order book.

"Uck-ut," says the Scot.

"I beg pardon?" says the girl, raising one eyebrow.

"Uck-ut," repeats the Scot, firmly. "Uck-ütt."

"Will you spell it please?" the girl bends determinedly to her book, pencil set.

"Y!" iterates the Scot, "R-rrrrr. . . ."

"R!" checks the girl.

"Aye", says the Scot. "R-rrrr." "U-I-R . . . "intones the girl, writing.

"No, no, no!" cries the Scot. "No! U-R-Q- . . "

"Q?" checks the girl, shifting eyebrows.

"Aye, Q," agrees the Scot. "No, no, no! Now, lassie, take it doon as I dictate. U-R-Q-U-H-"

At this point, the young girl straightens up and glares, unbelieving at her book. She never took any prizes either for her writing or her spelling at school, but this monstrosity appearing under her pencil is too much for nerve her.

"Now did you say the name was?" she enquires timidly.

"Uck-utt" declares the Scot hotly. "A very famous Scottish name. Now finish it. U-R-Q-U-H-A-R-T."

"Oh, I get it!" exults the young thing. "Er-curt!"

"Ye give it a very curious pronunciation," says Mr. Urquhart. They finish the business. Mr. Urquhart moves off, and the young thing mutters: "Uck-utt Uck-utt! For cryin' out loud!"

Gas From Coal Now Produced In Quantity

Louisiana, Mo., Nov. 20—AP—First production of gasoline from coal "in practical quantities" in the United States was disclosed Saturday by the U. S. Government's Bureau of Mines.

More than 220,000 gallons have already been produced here at the Bureau's $25,000,000 "coal-to oil demonstration plant" on the Mississippi River about 100 miles north of St. Louis.

The "proving ground" was established to test the feasibility of establishing a synthetic oil industry in the U. S., operated by private industry, to meet the challenge of lessening reserves of natural petroleum. Bureau scientists said.

The Bureau says that if that feasibility is established, the United States could achieve independence of foreign sources of petroleum in event of war and would be able to meet the country's normal needs for the next centuries to come.

While Bureau scientists are concentrating on gasoline at present, they say the plant can also produce diesel oil, jet fuel and various other chemicals with applications in such materials as antifreeze products, paint solvents, wood preservatives and even nylon stockings.

TO THE HOUNDS

Dog racing in the States seems to have become a kind of poor man's sport of kings.

Here in Phoenix, Arizona, the greyhounds race nightly except Monday, admission is 30 cents, there's no such things as a clubhouse set and the two-dollar bill reigns supreme.

As a sport, it's not to be compared with horse racing. There's no cry of "They're off!" no thundering of hooves, none of the changing positions throughout the running.

The races are 550 yards and 600 yards and since a greyhound will go over 30 miles an hour in about 25 seconds it's all over — Zzzzst!— like that.

If you bend down to light a cigarette you're apt to miss a whole race. Because of this there's no cheating. By the time you've located your hound and decided to urge him on he's out of sight.

The dogs usually run in a tight pack, although occasionally a dog will take an early lead and stretch it. Most races are decided by photo. Unless you're standing at the finish line you seldom know for sure that you've lost until the result is put on the board.

The greyhounds are beautiful to watch. At first you are apt to think that such a dog's life, and there's a strong feeling against the sport in SPCA circles, but the dogs seem to like it.

A few become over-excited in the mechanical rabbit box, but the dogs who have raced any length of time get pretty blase about it. I watched a couple of dogs after last night who seemed to be counting their money.

The really frustrating part of the sport is that the dogs aren't allowed to watch the flop-eared mechanical rabbit.

Some trainers are said to allow their charges to watch the quarry in training so that they'll know it's the thing to run after, but others or passes the lure in an actual race it's declared no contest. Almost never happens.

With Color

Perhaps because the races themselves are inclined to be dull the tracks put on a very colorful show.

Washington Park, here at Phoenix, which has an average nightly attendance of a couple of thousand, is a very attractive layout.

Gay awnings cover the parimutuel windows and betting booth trees, floodlit by yellow lights from below, girdle the track. The infield is a mass of tropical desert plants. The "paddock" and kennels are made of gleaming aluminum.

A public address system keeps up a perpetuous program of music, searchlights revolve overhead, and the announcer calls the Southern Pacific flash by and planes from nearby Phoenix airport thunder overhead. A very lively place indeed.

The attendants are dressed in scarlet tunics with blue, long-peaked jockey caps and are under the control of an Adonis who seems to be wearing the summer uniform or a full admiral of the Navy.

In the parade about the track this fellow prances along to martial airs. When the stewards move from the starting gate to the point where they will pick up the dogs after the race they do so in log time to the tune of "In the Mood."

The track itself is narrow, about 15 feet across, and this makes the greyhounds seem faster than they are (60 miles an hour is an average weight). The tracks I've seen in London are much wider and because of this the British dogs often look like Chihuahuas.

A piquant feature of the London tracks is the little man in white who follows the parade about wielding a broom and dustpan. The Americans presumably can't find a man with the poise for this job. Or perhaps it's just that nobody needs the money that badly.

Greyhounds of both sexes run and are described in various shades of brindle, fawn, red, blue and black. Most races are covered muzzles and silks with the color of the "rabbit."

In the earlier days, apparently, there were a few widely publicized cases of dogs being doctored or hopped-up and this particular track goes to almost ludicrous extremes to see that no dog runs being tampered with before race time.

If a greyhound quits in a race for no logical reason he's barred from all U.S. tracks. Trainers make a big thing of the fact that a greyhound is unable to read a pedigree bound, a rather unkind libel on the honesty of jockeys.

Betting is strictly by parimutuel. On English dog tracks you may bet with a bookie and get 10 to 1 or better for your pay. Here the tote machine looks and acts like a horse race the same as in horse racing except that there are rarely any long shots at over 20 to one.

Handicapping the hounds seems about as perplexing as picking winners in a horse race. In the past two days I've been looking over the records and haven't found that two of them picked only four winners in the races.

The logic is pretty much the same as it is with horses or "momentary favorites," or "outmodded for place," "broke slowly," etc. and the form chart is similar, too — Belleharbour by moved up handily to take an early lead, etc.

Bettors may wager on win, place or show, a daily double, or perfecta. The latter is the way I like wagering is on the one-two or quinella (a bet by post position here) and a $200 return for two bucks is not unusual.

Like most horse bettors, I'm told, bet each of the 10 races on dogs with such positions and names in a combination that offers the best odds. In the current meeting in Phoenix this has been a Miss Whistle while the seven-and-eight quinella came up only nine times.

We stuck to the old reliable system of picking the dog with the most intelligent appearing and took the old reliable lifting.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

LOVE AT FOURTH SIGHT!

Famous is the expression "love at first sight." Undoubtedly the world has been made happier by the many instances of such an experience. But I believe a more common love story is that of love more mature, is that love at second, third—or fourth sight!

I've picked up a book and read a sentence or two again, and wondered why we liked it then, or we doubly enjoy it on second reading for a more mature time of life. Or we read that same book when we're old age, and it still gives enjoyment, joy, or comfort.

Somerset Maugham recently gave a list of books that have been favorites for him during a long life, and remarked during a were several he was going to read again as a fitting climax to a life of enjoyment with books. He named Tolstoy's "War and Peace", as one among them.

I am reminded of another interesting instance of "off final love of literature. It is said that perhaps the finest translation of Marcus Aurelius was made by Thomas Gataker, who, in extreme old age, considered this task of translation as "his best preparation for dying agreeably to God."

How many a painted masterpiece has come from love, not alone at fourth sight, but at many times that. And how many a story do we read in our newspaper of love at the golden fifth, sixth, seventh, or more sight that lives and lingers throughout a long life that is the substantial kind.

It is good to look upon things that are lovely, that are wrapped in beauty, and realize that their love value never grows less, but rather grows more and more with growing with a comforting glow through a period.

Like that little candle Shakespeare wrote about—throwing its beams afar—and that love for any things and people, at first sight, keep spreading light and love beauty from the heart into an endless number of other lives, so that the sweetness and richness of continuing sights, grow and increase in richness, and experience.

Fire-Damaged Building Kills Man

Sydney,' Australia, Nov. 18 — (Reuters) — A fire - damaged building crashed down on salvage workers in the heart of Sydney today, killing one man, and injuring eight.

The three - storey store was gutted by fire last night. Today 13 store workers were clearing up the rubble when the weakened walls crashed into the basement.

GAELS FINISH SECOND

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 20 (CP)— Queen's University Intermediates ran their unscored-on streak to 10 games Saturday when they downed Macdonald College Aggies, 47-0, in the last scheduled game of the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Valley Conference.

In spite of their winning streak, Queen's wound up second in the standings, behind unbeaten McGill Intermediates.

Jack Wright and Eddie Klym, each with two majors, and Pete Irwin with six converts, led the Gaels' attack.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

(Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis, or treatment will be answered. Dr. Brady if a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. WHY HEMORRHOIDS RETURN

One of the characteristic comments of old timers queried by patients concerning the modern ambulant or injection treatment of hemorrhoids (internal piles), is that such treatment is only a temporary relief, for afterward the piles return.

A pile is essentially a varicose vein, overfilling or dilation of one of the network of small veins around the anal canal. Once it is obliterated, say by injection of chemical or medicine which causes it to shrivel, or by catching it with a surgical clamp and applying a cautery to it to char it to a crisp, or by cutting it out and inserting stitches to close the wound, that is the end of it, forever.

At any time after any of these various methods of treatment the afflicted individual may have new piles, if he continues the bad hygiene which caused the piles in the first place. So it is downright dishonest of a doctor to lure a prospect into the operating room by telling the poor fool that his piles will "return" if he chooses the injection treatment. In a nutshell this is what a Stud-sid to Suffer From Piles, available on written request (stamp will not suffice), if you provide a self-addressed envelope) describes the bad hygiene which causes piles.

Here I mention two chief factors:

1. Habitual use of physic and unnatural "aids" to defecation.
2. The dearth of facilities for cleanliness in the bathrooms of America, from the hygiene point of view the superfine toilet paper and fancy bidets provided in America can hardly match the bidets or the bath fixtures in a horse race. In the past two days I've been looking over the newspaper records of the last two of them picked only four winners in the races.

Belleville, Ont., Nov. 20, 1950

Dear Dr. Brady:

Will you please tell me what causes a baby to suck its thumb? Is it a habit or is it because it is hungry?

Answer—Neither. It is a habit which is usually started in the first few days of life. Some babies suck their thumbs before they are born.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Cracking Jaw

For over a year I have had a cracking noise of the jaw and sometimes I have to push on one side of my face as the jaw seems to stick.—(J. P.)

Answer—First, visit your dentist.

Healthy Without Sugar

How long can a body stay healthy without using any sugar or any foods that contain sugar? —(Mrs. B. W.)

Answer—Indefinitely. Most people who write requesting much improvement in vite, good looks, functional efficiency, general health and vigor would use no sugar or an irreducible minimum of sugar in their diet for a few weeks. Refined sugar, I mean. There is no reason why one who is not diabetic or pellagrous should not include fresh fruits in the daily diet. Send 25c and stamped self-addressed envelope for the red book What to Eat and Why.

Athlete's Foot

Spent a lot of time and money for treatment by specialists, but still have athlete's foot. (Mrs. M. S.)

Answer—Send stamped self-addressed envelope and ask for pamphlet on Foot Itch.

OUR GREAT HERITAGE

We people on the North American continent are the most fortunate people that have ever lived, and chiefly because we live under free democratic institutions. Every American and Canadian as he prays to God should thanks Him for the fact that in this generation of political chaos he has been born into circumstances which secure as by axiom that government must be by the consent of the governed.

But this liberty did not come to us over night. In fact it was not the result of any one upheaval in the long history of the English-speaking people. The roots of our freedom go back into the spirit of freedom which prevailed among the ancient Britons, the Picts, the Scots, and later the Angles and Saxons. Even more, the development of our freedom was brought about by the strong resolution of religious men.

China has a long tradition, and thinkers of stupendous stature should thanks Him for that in this generation of political chaos he has been born into circumstances which secure as by axiom that government must be by the consent of the governed.

Insufficient Pay For Special Force One Complaint

Wainwright, Alta., Nov. 20 — (CP) —Some of the men of the 2nd Battalion of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry are bound for Korea with a plastic-sized complaint.

They are the men with families. They don't think they are being paid enough. What's more, their wives agree.

Lt.-Col. J. R. (Jim) Stone of Salmon Arm, B.C., the Patricia's commanding officer, says that most of what trouble he has had with the men can be traced to insufficient pay.

Privates in the special force receive a minimum of $68 a month. If they are married their wives receive half of that —$34 —plus $30 separation allowance and $30 marriage allowance, a total of $103.

But there is no additional allowance for children.

Pte. William Henderson, 25, a twice-wounded veteran of the Second World War who left a trucking business in Kensington, P.E.I., to join the special service force, is an example.

"I keep $10 a month. My wife and three children get $127. It's tough to manage. We're living in a small place. I'd hate to think of my wife trying to get along in Toronto."

/Said an officer in the pay corps "it's too bad. But really the men who don't make a go on their pay have only themselves to blame. A man with a wife and three children had no business joining up."

Unhero Hardships

Said Maj. George Flint of Montreal, a company commander: "The men weren't told what to expect when they joined up. They were hustled in fast and they thought their families would be properly looked after."

Lt.-Col. Stone said that many of the men with families are undergoing real hardship.

"Most of our troubles have sprung from men whose wives have given up trying to make ends meet. Many of these men had to be discharged, but there are still a good number hanging on. Much of the trouble with men going absent without leave was caused by money shortages."

Before the Patricia's left camp at Wainwright, Lt. Col. Stone assured them that the pay structure is under revision. He said he had been told that before long there will be "a substantial increase in pay allowances."

Said one private: "I'll believe it when it happens."

The increase of $27 a month for members of the special brigade stationed in the United States won't help the Patricia's much. They are expected to spend less than a week at Fort Lewis, Wash., before sailing for Korea.

Learns to Swim In Hurry When Thrown into River

Charleston, S.C., Nov. 20 (AP) —A sailor who learned to swim in a hurry yesterday and it saved her life. The automobile Mrs. Violet Roe, 28, was driving plunged off a bridge and into the Stono River near here in the darkness. Another motorist raced for a rowboat and found Mrs. Roe 30 minutes later. The incoming tide had carried her a mile. She said "I never swam before in my life, but I sure swam tonight."

Three Canadian Destroyers Ready For Next Patrol

A United Nations naval base in South Japan, Nov. 20—CP— The Canadian flotilla of three destroyers had its anchor here today, preparing for another patrol off the coast of Korea.

Capt. Jeffry Brock, commander of the flotilla, will command the entire United Nations fleet on the west coast of Korea during this next operation. Under his command besides the three Canadian destroyers will be units of the Dutch, French and British navies.

There was a stack of mail waiting for the men yesterday when the three warships pulled into port from Hong Kong. Because the men won't be home for Christmas, two R. C. A. F. planes will haul parcels to and from Equimalt.

Most of the men got in their Christmas shopping at Hong Kong, while the rest will make their purchases in Japan. One sailor at Hong Kong bought shoes for himself and his three children, along with a set of china for his wife, all for $14. Many purchased good clothes for prices that would seem ridiculous in Canada. Others stocked up on all kinds of jewelry and a wide assortment of silks.

There had been a buzzing rumor on the three ships that all might make home in time for Christmas, but Capt. Brock dispelled such talk:

"We shouldn't go home," he told the three destroyers, "Until the job we set out to do is done. The more of us who stay, the sooner it will be over."

The ships will sail in company on patrol for the first time since the landings at Inchon. On that job, the ships left harbor at different times and converged at the South Korean port. This time all three will sail from port together.

50 PERSONS

Fort Smith, Ark., Nov. 20— (CP) — More than 50 persons fainted or became ill in a crowded theatre here yesterday. Fire Chief R. L. Rudd said an automatic control device in the ventilating system didn't function properly, resulting in an insufficient amount of oxygen in the air in the theatre. All those overcome were released after hospital treatment.

Service Clubs Combining To Provide Facilities For Skating on Ball Diamond

Trenton—(Special)— Two service clubs are combining in Trenton to provide a four-in-one rink in the rink, to be erected at the site of the ball diamond, will be provided with floodlights for night skating.

Four individual rinks will be parts of the larger one — for hockey, beginners figure skating and pleasure skating. The hockey sheet will be of regulation size. Adjacent to the rink will be a dressing room building, with a snack bar and benches. Supervision of the rink will be carried on by the Lions Club, which is working with the Kinsmen to erect the rink.

Council Signs Agreement

Trenton's town council, in a session last week, agreed to sign a five-fifty-year agreement with Murray Township for 1951. The agreement means that the town will fight fires in the township at a rate of $100 per fire.

Three Service Stations, Cleaning Plant Entered Over Weekend

Trenton — (Special) — Four places of business including three service stations and a cleaning establishment were broken into in Trenton over the weekend with small amounts of cash being stolen in each instance. Entrance in each case was obtained by smashing windows.

Entered was Donnelly's Service Station at 4 Dundas Street, East, where 50 cents was taken. At the Wickens Service Station on Front Street the thieves had more success with $15 being taken from the till, while at Davis Motors on Dundas, West, 22.35 was taken from a filing cabinet.

The fourth place entered was the Quinte Cleaners on Quinte Street where a rear window was broken. The cash register was carried to the back room where it was opened and a $1.38 taken.

DAMAGE FROM WATER

Overheated stove pipes were blamed for a fire which Monday morning caused roughly $75 damage in the kitchen at the home of Orville Cooney, 195 Sidney Street. Damage was stated to be mostly from water.

KNOCKED FROM WHEEL

While bicycling to work at an early hour today Mr. E. Hamm, 8 Johnston Road, was knocked from his wheel by a car, the driver of which failed to stop. Hamm said he had waited in the darkness for a car to pass and then had started to cross the street when he was struck by the car which was being driven without lights. There was no report of the bicyclist being injured.

In the same session, the council decided to rent an acre of land from the Canadian National Railways for car parking purposes. Rent will amount to $62 per year, tax exempt.

The Kinsmen Club was granted permission to hold their Santa Claus parade on December 9.

Three Accidents

Three automobile accidents in Trenton since Friday saw one hit-and-run on Friday, a collision between a car and a truck the same day, and a slight accident Saturday.

Stanley VanMeer, Quinte Street, reported to the police that his car was sideswiped when he came off Bay Street on to Dundas Street Friday at 5.50 p.m. At noon the same day a Weston Bakeries truck and a car driven by Peter Taverna, 358 Front Street, came into collision. On Saturday, cars driven by Thomas J. Clairmont, Batawa, and Ronald G. Barber, Carrying Place, were involved in an accident on Henry Street.

Six Petitions

The Trenton Chamber of Commerce has set 8 p.m. for the closing hours of stores on Saturday nights. The petitions ask the stores close at 8 p.m. The matter will be taken up at the next meeting of the Chamber of Commerce.

A car owned by George Pearson, R.R. 1 Trenton, was gutted by fire early Saturday morning. The blaze was believed to have started from a cigarette.

The Frankford chapter of King Street United Church, Trenton, had a pot luck supper on Friday night. About 50 people saw a children's movie entitled "Molly Moo and the Butterflies."

Hasty Pees Rout Cadets

A battalion of Hasty Pees reserves routed the Belleville Army Cadets in a battle training scheme over the weekend near here. Reserves from Trenton, Belleville, Frankford, Marmora and Madoc took part in exercise "Ivanhoe."

The scheme was under the command of Lt. Col. J.M. Porritt. The rendezvous here Saturday night was for the purpose of tactical training by night, and Baker company of Madoc were the hosts, with barracks in the Madoc Armouries.

The Sunday scheme consisted of theoretical training for the officers and the attack on the Hasty Pee ranks. The afternoon scheme took place near Ivanhoe with the Belleville Cadets taking the part of the enemy, with the Hasty Pees attacking them in six groups.

Smoke screens, flash bombs and blank ammunition made the scheme more realistic as the Hasty Pees ran roughshod over the Belleville Cadets. The exercise ended last night.

READY FOR SCRAP HEAP

Hamilton, Nov. 20 — (CP) — Driving is dangerous enough even with a sound, fully-equipped car, but think of what it must have been like for the owner of a car seized by police Saturday night. It lacked lights, horn, brakes and windshield wipers. The owner said he was intending to sell it to a scrap dealer but police are holding the car until they see the bill of sale.

Another Chapter Comeback Story Of Cobalt Written

Cobalt, Nov. 20—(CP) — Another chapter in the comeback story of this famous northern Ontario silver town was written Saturday.

For the second time in a year, it witnessed the opening of a silver concentrates mill, the second to be returned to production in this fabulous mining region from which $300,000,000 in Silver was produced between 1905 and 1922.

That a new boom may be in the offing for this community—almost a ghost town since the price of silver declined—was indicated in the interest shown in Saturday's ceremonies. Canadian and United States financial and mining representatives as well as newspaper men and technical writers from both countries attended.

Silver now sells at about 80 cents an ounce.

Owned by Cobalt Lode Silver Mines, Ltd., the new concentrates plant will have a daily capacity of 100 tons before the end of the year. Facilities for handling an additional 100 tons daily are included in the mill. Initial capacity is 50 tons.

Known as 104 mill during the bonanza days, when it was operated as a custom mill, it was purchased by Cobalt Lode from Silbanz Mining and Refining Co. Using a double-tabling as well as a flotation process for the preparation of concentrates, the mill now has been renovated and modernized at a cost of $65,000.

Included in the mill is a battery of stamp crushers. Part of the original equipment, it is one of three stamp mills in North America.

COLLAPSES AT WORK

Toronto, Nov. 20 — (CP) — Chester William Douglas, 44-year-old native of Ottawa, collapsed of a heart attack and died at his work in the shipping department of a departmental store here Saturday. He came to Toronto a year ago from Sudbury. Survivors include Mrs. F. J. Kilmurry, Brockville, a sister.

Queen Alexandra H.&S. Assoc. Holds Social Evening

An enjoyable social evening was held at Queen Alexandra School on Friday evening, when the Home and School Association held its annual bridge and euchre. In a congenial atmosphere, teachers, parents and friends settled down to enjoy their games and after partaking of delicious refreshments, adjourned into the auditorium to receive prizes. The president, Mrs. R. D. Arnott, after welcoming the guests, introduced the convener, Mrs. Harold Mott, and a hearty vote of thanks was extended to her, and her able assistants, Mrs. R. Lennox, Mrs. W. D. Wilson, Mrs. E. S. Fairman, Mrs. Bruce Lattimer, Mrs. D. LaFrance, Mrs. W. Sherry, Mrs. P. Wilson, Mrs. G. Brierley, Mrs. R. Dalmadge, and Mrs. R. D. Arnott.

The following are prize winners:

Bridge: Highest lady, Mrs. H. Townsend; 2nd highest lady, Mrs. B. Vantassel; lowest lady, Mrs. F. Martin; highest man, Mr. G. Adams; 2nd highest man, Mr. N. E. Miller; lowest man, Mr. J. C. Punchard.

Euchre: Highest score, lady, Mrs. Collin; low score, lady, Mrs. W. Batchelor; highest score, men, Mr. G. Seames, Jr.; lowest score men, Mr. John Fisher; lone hand Mrs. S. Lennox.

The door prize was won by Mrs. Rolf Knudsen.

"Oh, Miss O'Neil, may I have a word with you, before you go up to see my daughter? I know that the hospital phoned you to see her, right after she was sent home, so we are expecting you. But I'm concerned about her, and decided to speak to you." And Mrs. Jones lead Vicki to a spacious sitting room.

"Your daughter, being a cancer patient, gives me some idea of just what is disturbing you," Vicki sympathetically opened the difficult subject for the worrying mother, visibly under much distress over her daughter's condition.

"It's . . It's her attitude. It seems she just doesn't want to see any of the family, that is to be in the family circle. She refuses to see any of her friends. And she's worried about going back to the office. She seems to feel that after her operation, she won't be wanted. I've done everything I can think of to try to make her see that this is wrong, but I can't seem to make her see it."

"Of course, it's quite natural that your daughter will have these many misgivings. People don't stop having emotions because they've been ill, and these are very real problems to her."

"But what can be done?"

"Well now. As far as her job goes, if there is any doubt in her mind about her employers being reticent in taking her back, I'll be only too glad to see them personally and smooth any difficulty possible as to explaining if she will need any extra consideration. Most employers are most considerate, willing to do all they can to help rehabilitate anyone. There will be certain activities she will not be able to do any longer. Then she will have to learn to take care of herself, after recuperation, but that needn't make her feel she isn't self-reliant. There are the adjustments to make, still most illnesses bring, so we must make her realize it. When faced honestly, and squarely, these matters fade in importance."

"Yes . . ."

"There must be a sort of teamplay mentality, I'm sure, existing for the patient. There must be an abundance of patience and tolerance amongst us all, but we doctors, dentists, nurses, social workers, health officials or volunteer workers, remembering always to work under the directions of the patient's physician. We must all keep in mind the needs of the cancer patient. . medical, physical, emotions, social and spiritual."

"Now how you can help, Miss O'Neil, I declare I feel lighter already. You've given me attitudes towards others that must be positive and constructive. I. . I'm confused with the crisis and tenseness of the present, and just hadn't considered the convalescent part of my daughter's illness. I've been wondering, too, about securing proper bandages."

"These may be secured from the Cancer Society, and they'll be glad to send you all that you need, and if you like I'll be glad to send for them, for you, until you are more used to knowing what to do."

"I'd be so grateful, if you would. My, how thankful I am we have a VON in our community. Do come now, and I'll take you upstairs—and many, many thanks."

If you are in need call 1125 and a VON will call at once.

Belleville Region T.P.A. Enjoy Fall Supper-Dance

The Queensway Hotel, Trenton, was the scene of a happy gettogether when the Belleville Region of Telephone Pioneers of America met on Friday evening for their annual fall supper and dance. Mr. Grant Proctor, chairman, welcomed the large group her present, while F. V. Grandame acted as master of ceremonies.

Three new pioneers, Messrs. Code and Cheesemore of the Bell Telephone, and W. Jarvah, of the Northern Electric were presented with certificates by R. V. Daniel, following which games and other entertainment were featured, also a violin solo by Bert Brown was much appreciated.

Out-of-town guests included V. Smith, R. Juneau, F. Markey and F. K. L. Tompkins pioneers from Ottawa; D. P. Ullman, H. Hunt, pioneers from Kingston; L. Glen from pioneer from Cornwall; Mrs. E. O'Connor and Mr. J. Craigthead, life member pioneers from Belleville.

LOYAL ORDER OF MOOSE

The Belleville Lodge, No. 1004, held its regular meeting in the I.O.O.F. Temple on Front Street last Thursday, with several of the members remaining for the games and cards, which followed.

The prize winners were: Brother Earl Moon; Brother B. Clair, and Brother Jack McCullough: the latter two trying for second prize. It was decided to cut the cards for high man. Both succeeded in cutting on the first time, but on second try, Brother Bill Clair cut an ace again, while Brother Jack McCullough drew a ten spot.

Trenton's 20th Anniversary

Last Friday, members of the Moose Lodge of Port Hope, Peterborough, Trenton, and Belleville, celebrated Trenton's anniversary in Frankford Community Hall. Trenton Lodge has been active for 20 years, and best wishes are extended for success in the years to come. Besides the Moose members, their wives and friends were also present.

After the Lodge was opened, the Trenton degree team took over and put on an exceptionally fine ceremony of the initiation of two members, one for the Belleville Lodge, and one for Trenton Lodge.

Two Films Shown

Brother Lenn Robb, of Owen Sound, was present and showed two films that fitted the hearts of all with warmth and friendliness. These films depicted the first Moose Heart-Child Camp, and the Moose Haven — the home for the aged.

Following the showing of the films, all descended downstairs for the banquet put on by the Women of the Moose, of Belleville, convened by Mrs. Margaret Mallette, co-worker.

The guest speaker for the evening was Past Supreme Governor of Ontario, Oscar Pierce of Trenton.

Dancing brought an enjoyable evening to a close.

500 Cases Clothing Shipped This Year by Red Cross

Winnipeg, Nov. 20.— Clothing made by Canadian women in Red Cross workrooms reaches victimes of earthquakes, disaster and misfortune throughout the world, Miss Orian Warwick, National Chairman, Women's Work Committee, told members of Red Cross Central Council meeting here today.

Five hundred cases of clothing, quilts and bedding have been shipped overseas during the first nine months of this year, with the greatest number going to Greece, she reported. Clothing was sent also to Lebanon, France, Italy and Greece. Britain and other cases are shipped to the League of Red Cross Societies for emergency distribution. People made homeless by the recent earthquake in India, Miss Warwick said, benefitted from this reserve stock.

Supplies from women's workrooms in seven provinces were shipped to Manitoba in May at the time of the flood.

Twenty-three nurses formed the second class graduated from the demonstration Metropolitan School of Nursing in Windsor, in October. The school has pioneered, with a four-year Red Cross subsidy, in establishing the extended 25-month nurses' training, separate from a hospital.

"Striking evidence of the timeliness and success of the project is that already, in two and a half years after its initiation, the school has been duplicated, followed by the School of the Toronto Western Hospital," said Miss E. Kathleen Russell, chairman of the National Nursing Committee.

"In this project Red Cross has given a significant service to nursing to hospitals and to patients in our hospitals."

More than 50,000 hours of voluntary service have been given in the first half of this year by members of the Canadian Red Cross Corps, according to Mrs. Frank O. Evans, National Corps Chairman. Fifteen detachments of the Corps in Canada have 1,000 active members and 700 reserve members, with Ontario having the largest registration. Members perform as many as 25 different Red Cross services.

Women of The Moose

On Friday evening the Women of the Moose chapter 435 got together with the Loyal Order of Moose, Lodge 1004 and formed a bus for Frankford to help Trenton celebrate their 20th anniversary and play hostess chapter for the affair.

To the evening of open house, the meeting was called to order by Governor Mary Bailey, then pictures of Mooseheart were shown. Initiation of two candidates, Hazel Lewis, Belleville and Bill Easton, Trenton. Bro. Len Robb, Membership Director of Ontario, congratulated the new brothers on becoming Moose and the ladies sponsors on bringing these men into their depending circle.

Banquet Hall

At the close of the meeting all were invited downstairs to the banquet hall in its gleaming white and silver. Here convener Marg. Mallette and workers had done a wonderful job so with little confusion 100 guests sat down to a lovely supper. At the head table with the officers P.A.P. in gold and mauve the Moose ladies the guests of honor were introduced by Governor Bailey, Bro. Oscar Pierce, Trenton, Bro. Ben Robb of London, Governor Ramsey of Port Hope, Governor Ellis, Governess of Peterborough and Mrs. Bailey of Trenton.

Past Governor Mary Savage of Belleville, was called on to draw the door ticket which was won by Lloyd Mitts of Trenton. This was a beautiful black cup and saucer donated by Margaret Mallette. Sr. Regt. Seline Isles, thanked Trenton Lodge for their invitation and wonderful evening on behalf of Belleville Chapter. Convener Mr. Mallette thanked all co-workers who had donated so generously and worked so hard to make such a success of a lovely banquet.

Toast Proposed

Bro. Robb proposed a toast to the ladies and asked all to bow their heads in silent prayer for those who had lain down their lives so that all can enjoy evenings such as this. Bro. Tom Thompson, on behalf of Belleville Lodge, also thanked Trenton and wished them all good fortune in the coming years. "Thank you", were the words heard from Peterborough and Port Hope.

Bro. Pierce told of the wonderful things being done and how proud all should be to belonging to the Moose. Bro. Burtt, one of the oldest members, told of the changes in the years and suggested more get-together.

Invitation Extended

Senior Isles extended an invitation for all to attend Belleville open house on November 23rd Pianist Irene Reed, accompanied the sing-song with a list of favorites being sung. Dancing brought a grand evening to a close.

Co-workers who worked were: M. Mallette, M. Bailey, L. Dixon, N. Peoples, P. Benedict, E. Jeffery, C. Carey, L. Bull, M. Sawyer, Jul. M. Galbraith, L. Connell, G. Klotz, K. Donovon, M. Moon, E. McCullough, F. Barker and P. Mint.

Diapers For Greek Tots Flood in From All Canada

Ottawa, Nov. 20 (CP) — The "didie" appeal has caught on.

Triangles and squares, some in extra-dot designs, others in pink and white candy-stripes, are reaching the Indian Service Committee headquarters from the four corners of the country. They're coming in response to the word that Greek babies need nappies.

Mothers from Penticton, B.C., to Woodstock, Ont., are helping out with a couple of junior old ones; grandmothers are sending over those dear old-fashioned dusters long ago. Even dad is sticking in a couple of bucks for flannelette in this campaign to raise 12,000 diapers by Christmas.

Dr. Leita Hinman, U.S.A., director and originator of the idea, now is on the last lap of a speaking tour of western Canada. She's appealing for $25,000 by Christmas to buy the medical supplies and clothing for warstricken Europe—she also wants didies.

The money has been coming in slowly, but members of her staff report the diaper drive definitely is showing results. In fact it already has neared the half-way mark.

Some diapers have arrived with the necessary safety-pins and others are being included in completed layettes. All in all some 2,500 have come into this office since the campaign got under way two months ago.

In addition, U.S.C. branches at Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, Vancouver and Winnipeg are receiving donations. The latter branch reports "diapers by the dozens" are being packed for shipment.

Eight across Canada women's groups and service organizations as well as individuals have the didie drive. The Girls' Auxiliary, Parent-Teachers Association at Canadian Forces H.Q., has promised 2,000 by the end of this month and the Saskatchewan Home and School Clubs are working for "diapers from the mothers of Saskatchewan."

Finally in Prince Edward Island the women's institutes have a clothing drive under way—and didies are requested.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED

Dundas, Nov. 20 — (CP) There was a turkey dinner Saturday night for the management and staff of John Bertram and Sons Company here. It marked half a century of harmonious employer-employee relations, and also the golden anniversary of Local 262 of the Moulders and Foundry Men's Union, oldest moulder's local in the province.

INDIANS STUDY T.B.

Oslo, Norway — (CP) — Four doctors from India were among a group arriving in Norway to study the treatment of tuberculosis here. The doctors were invited to the tuberculosis commission of Norway's organization for relief to Europe.

INDIANS CONSECRATED.

Rome — (CP) — Two Indian bishops were consecrated here recently to preside over two new Indian dioceses recently created by the Pope. They were Sebastian Vayalil, Bishop of Palai, and Mathew Kavukatt, Bishop of Changanacherry.

MARIO ... In his distinctive feature about Food .. What's Cooking?

Butchers and cooks have learned that gentleness pays.

Bulls are no longer killed by lions as they were in the Roman days in the hope that this cruel treatment would produce tender steaks. Nor is the old Norman custom of beating the animal's carcass with cudgels followed any longer.

Enzymes it is now known act in the aging coolers to make the beef tender. Slow simmering in the Dutch oven softens the tough tissue of any pot roast.

Some meat will be tender if cooked on a very fast or very slow fire. A leg of mutton, for instance, will be tender if cooked quite rare or else braised slowly for hours until it is stringy well done. Flank steak can be prepared in these two ways—either broiled quickly or pot roasted at a long slow temperature.

To be broiled the flank steak must be top choice quality or better, If it is braised, as in today's recipe, you needn't worry about buying blue ribbon meat. 'Choice' or 'good' grades will do equally well. The 'soft' bread crumbs called for in this recipe are made by scraping the inside of stale unsliced bread with a fork. If dry is not practical, use cracker crumbs instead.

Stuffed Flank Steak—Serves 6.

1 cup soft bread crumbs
1-4 cup butter or margarine
1-2 cup onions chopped fine
2 tablespoons parsley chopped fine
1 dozen opened oysters
1 flank steak 2 lbs.
Vegetable fat
1 cup hot water
1-4 cup tomato juice
1 teaspoon meat extract
Salt and pepper

In a small saucepan melt the butter. Add 1-4 cup onions. Save remainder of onions. Saute until onions turn yellow. Remove from flame. Stir in the crumbs and parsley. Cut the oysters into 1-2 inch squares and add to the crumb mixture. Add 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Sprinkle the flank steak on both sides with salt. Spread the crumb mixture over one side of the flank steak. Roll up flank steak from long end, jelly roll fashion. Tie the roll shut with cord or fasten with wooden skewers.

Melt 3 tablespoons fat in a large heavy saucepan or Dutch oven. Brown flank steak on all sides. Add to the pan the hot water, tomato juice, meat extract and remaining 1-4 cup onions. Cover pan with a tight lid. Simmer, don't boil, over a small flame 1 1-2 to 2 hours or until meat is tender. Skim fat off gravy. Strain gravy. Thicken with cornstarch if desired.

MARMORA

Mrs. W. Chrysler Presented With Farewell Gift

Marmora.—The home of Mrs. Frank Sweet, was the scene of a pleasant gathering on Friday evening, as members of the Women's Institute assembled there to tender a surprise party to Mrs. Warden Chrysler on the eve of her departure for Peterborough.

The honored member has given valued service to the local branch of the Institute, serving for a time as its Secretary-treasurer.

Following a singsong with Mrs. Marshall McCoy at the piano, and a story telling period, on behalf of the members, president Mrs. Percy Gray, presented Mrs. Chrysler with a table lamp, expressing regret at the departure at losing one who had given such service and extending wishes for a continuance of her W.I. activities in her new sphere.

The recipient taken by surprise expressed thanks for the gift, and said she had always enjoyed her association with the Institute.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. W. D. Lavender and Mrs. G. Sabine.

Club Activities

ST. PAUL'S GIRLS' AUX.

Marmora.—The weekly meeting of St. Paul's Girls' Auxiliary was held in the Parish hall on Wednesday evening. The president, Miss Margaret Price, opened the meeting. Mrs. J. Brownlie led in the study of the Diocese of Ontario.

A series of games was next enjoyed after which refreshments were served.

Congregation. Y.P.U. Presents Couple With Many Gifts

Allans Mills—On Tuesday evening the congregation of Y.P.U. of Stanwood United Church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Simpson, Allans Mills, to honor a social evening and to honor Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Hay (nee Birdie Simpson who were recently married.

Mrs. G. Thompson favored with piano music while the crowd gathered and Mr. Robert Lind acted as chairman for the following program: Address by Harold Rutherford; guitar music, Joey Dickinson; vocal solo, Mrs. D. Lacy; piano and harmonica music, Mrs. C. Rowe and Mrs. T. Dickinson; tap dance, Gayle Meyers; reading, Mrs. F. Simpson; vocal duet, Joyce Rowe and Gayle Meyers.

The young couple were asked to unwrap the presents, to find they were the recipients of many lovely and useful gifts including an end table from the Y.P.U.

They then thanked all present for their kindness after which refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

2ND THURLOW

Neighbors Aid Elects Officers for Year

2nd Thurlow.—The Neighbors' Aid held their annual business meeting at the Dandamuk. Simmons and Thomson home on Wednesday last. Pot luck dinner was served at noon.

Tables were arranged and the day spent quilting for the many good things provided by the members and Hostesses.

A quilt was quilted during the day.

The president, Mrs. Harry Thomson, was in charge of the meeting.

Annual reports were given by the different officers, Mrs. Harry Grills reported for the Red Cross, boys' shirts, nighties, dresses, skirts, and several baby sweaters, bonnets and booties sets, were handed in during the year. Mrs. Robert Mitchell reported that quilts were handed in to the Red, Shield and $10. The treasurer, Mrs. Don Lemming reported over $600 taken in during the year by euchre parties, catering at Scott's Sales Barns; $10 to Red Shield; $10 to Institute for the Blind; $10 to the Preston Hospital; $90 to the Canadian Save the Children's Fund; $25 to the Manitoba Flood Relief; $20 to St. John Ambulance Corps; $10 to March of Dimes; $33 spent on silverware, 20 chairs and plates were purchased during the year.

Mrs. Robert Atkins reported the meetings, euchres and social events held. Mrs. John Craig was asked to act for election of officers for the coming year. Congratulations were extended to the president and her executive for the fine report of the year's work, and certainly deserve much credit for the many worthwhile things accomplished.

Officers and committees for next term are as follows: president, Mrs. Harry Thomson; 1st vice president, Mrs. Erle Leeming; 2nd vice, Mrs. Bruce Porti; secretary, Mrs. Maurice Dent; treasurer, Mrs. C. Grills; pianists, Mrs. H. Grills, and Mrs. Manley Mitchell; press reporter, Mrs. Douglas Atkins; Upnod sick committee, Mrs. Fred Mitchell, Mrs. Dan Whaley, Downard, Mrs. Arnold Mitchell, Mrs. Claude Clark; Red Cross convener, Mrs. Harry Grills; Red Shield convener, Mrs. R. Mrs. Gordon Linn will be hostess for Christmas meeting when election of officers will be held and mitteboxes handed in. Mrs. Ross Hoard and Mrs. Arthur Phillips will prepare program.

The president thanked the host and hostess for their hospitality and Mrs. Burton Sharp and Mrs. Ross Jeffs for arranging the program. The World Day of Prayer Service will be held February 5, 1951.

Devotional Period

The Devotional opened with "Faith of Fathers", and the pastor offered prayer. Mrs. Raymond McConnell read the Bible lesson and Mrs. Burton Sharp gave a paper on the theme "Why God Allows Humanity to Suffer". She closed with an appropriate poem, "Bear the Burden of the Hour".

The pastor sang "He's My Friend", with his wife as accompanist.

History of Japan

Mrs. Kenneth Weaver outlined "The Unbroken Lineage", giving the history of Japan down through the Japanese Imperial line to the 124th Emperor. From the middle of the 16th century western missionaries and businessmen had been knocking at the doors of Japan.

In July, 1853, Commodore Perry demanded entrance and down through the years Japan engaged in two wars with China. Following this the Japanese military leaders urged the country to join in the European tangle. Here the glorious dream of carving a great empire was founded and from it empire was no more.

At the close Mrs. Burton Sharp staged an exciting contest "Well Known Quotations" and "Tree Naming". Prizes were received by both judge which all enjoyed.

Light refreshments were served and a social half hour enjoyed.

The men in attendance were, Messrs. Roy Thrasher, Frank Smith, Raymond McConnell, Frank Jeffs and the pastor.

Refreshments were served and a social hour spent. All departed voting Mr. and Mrs. Gerow ideal hosts and wishing Mrs. Gerow many more such happy birthdays.

GOING OUT OF BUSINESS

Paris, Nov. 18 — (AP) — The right - wing daily newspaper L'Epoque carried a front-page announcement that it is going out of business after today's issue. No reason was given, but it is reported the paper's circulation has dropped below 50,000 in recent months.

STIRLING

Silver Jubilee Highlighted by Graphic Report

Stirling.—One of the highlights of the Silver Jubilee year at St. Paul's United Church was the report of Commissioner Mrs. W. Elliott, to the congregation last Sunday morning, on which she graphically told of the work of the General Council, the Parliament of the United Church, with ease and grace. A fund of information was given which was both inspiring and informing.

Delegates Messages

The noonday address and messages of fraternal delegates from England, the United States, Japan, Africa, and other fields representing the Congregational, Presbyterian, Methodist and World Council of Churches, were related to in her text, "Where there is no vision the people perish".

The value of a snowmobile to the missionary on the bleak Labrador Coast and the United Church fleet in its interpretation of Christ's commission was vividly described. Dramatic drawing, with a skill of a magician, a long many-folded, yellow paper from the pre-packet of a church envelope, she said, "this is what opens up all the red posters in your envelopes, a catalogue of ministries maintained by the great United Church of Canada". It is certain that every envelope user will become a real envelope user to a greater extent after this thrilling message.

The lovely anthem "For All the Saints" was ably interpreted with solo part by Mrs. Frank Jeffrey, Master Robert Bird, boy soprano, sang a lovely solo, "Beside Still Waters".

Cross and Crown Pins

Silver "Cross and Crown" attendance pins were presented by Mr. Melghen Rogers, attendance secretary, to Janet Ann Good, Marlene, Donna and Ralph Carlisle, Eva Marjorie Ketchum, Tommy Wells, Rose Ann Vandervoort and Janet Reynolds.

SWEET HOGS

Danish experiments have shown better flavor ham and bacon results when hogs are fed sugar before slaughter.

Sister of Iran's Shah Bosses Her Country's Royal Charity

Teheran (CP)—A pretty, black-haired Princess runs Iran's biggest public enterprise, which is Imperial charity.

The royal family, which owned one-fourth of the nation's farm land ten years ago has given up its vast properties. All income from its lands now goes to support hospitals, clinics and schools established by the Imperial organization for Social Service.

Guiding hand of the Imperial charities is 35-year-old Princess Ashraf, vivacious twin sister of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi.

Under her direction 53 hospitals and clinics have been put in service to help thousands of Iran's needy.

"Something had to be done to improve living conditions in Iran," Princess Ashraf explains. "Everyone knows that the way to keep the independence of the country is to make a better life for the people.

"Iran desperately needs better medical facilities. We feel this can be provided by an independent body, like the Imperial charities, in a much shorter time than by government agencies hampered by red tape and politics."

The Imperial charities began in 1941 when Shah Reza abdicated to put his son, Mohammed Reza Pahlevi, on the throne. The young Shah immediately announced his title to all the crown lands and ordered all revenues from the properties turned over to the government for use in public health and education.

Parliament Takes Hand

Government management was not very successful during the first few years. Funds from the former crown lands were diverted into channels of government. Last year the Majlis (parliament) passed a law providing that the funds go directly to the Imperial charities.

The Shah is nominal president of the charities organization but the actual work of supervision has fallen to his sister, Princess Ashraf, who is vice president. About 40 leading Iranians serve on the central committee.

The president, who has brains as well as beauty, is not a figurehead. She has taken an active role in setting up charitable organizations and devotes a considerable amount of time to building meetings and inspection trips.

Most important of the organization's activities is the operation of hospitals and clinics. Sixty foreign doctors and nurses, mostly from Germany and Austria, have been recruited to direct the work in isolated communities.

Public health campaigns against tuberculosis, trachoma and scabies are being waged.

Beggars Big Problem

One of the biggest problems in Teheran, the capital, has been the beggars. Many have never had useful work. The organization took over an old army barracks where 2,000 persons, ranging in age from four to 60 years, are being taught such trades as carpet weaving and metal work. Children go to daily classes.

Iran is short of trained nurses. A nursing school with a three-year course graduates 60 nurses a year. It is being doubled in size with the help of a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Maternity care centres have been set up for expectant mothers. Fifteen hundred women a month are cared for in the maternity centres and food and clothing is provided for the babies.

Errand of Mercy Causes Death of Toronto Youth

Niagara Falls, Nov. 20—CP—A Toronto youth was killed early Sunday while on a mysterious errand of mercy.

David Holland, 22, died when the car in which he was riding turned over five times after failing to make a turn on the Queen Elizabeth, two miles west of here.

At the time of the accident, Holland and three companions were on their way to bring medical aid to a woman, who they had been told, was suffering from a broken neck.

Mystified police are unable to trace the woman who was in another automobile which turned over in a different spot in the same highway.

Holland, his brother, Robert, Edward Payne and Jack Dancey, were driving in their 1934 model car when they were waved down by several persons standing near an overturned auto.

Holland and his friends were told that a woman had suffered a broken neck and would likely die unless medical aid came quickly. The three put the overturned car back on its wheels, then set off in their own car to get medical aid. It was a short time after that their car somersaulted off the road.

Police later checked all hospitals but could find no trace of the injured woman. "It certainly is a puzzle," said provincial constable Robert Pretty. Possibly the woman was not hurt badly after all, and her friends decided not to get aid.

The other occupants of the Holland car suffered minor injuries.

TONNAGE INCREASED

Cornwall, Nov. 20 — (CP) — Freighter tonnage through the canal here during October totalled 1,234,750 tons compared with 1,108,884 during the same month last year, H. Parker, canal superintendent - engineer, reported Saturday. He said tonnage so far this year is more than 250,000 tons higher than for all of 1949.

Two Officials Will Investigate Hotel Slaying

Toronto, Nov. 20 — (CP) — Attorney-General Porter said today that Deputy Attorney-General C. R. Magone and H. H. Donald, inspector of legal offices, would leave for Ottawa today to inquire into the weekend hotel-room slaying of Francis J. Sullivan.

Mr. Porter said the two officials would investigate the nine-hour delay between the time the coroner, Dr. Harry Dover, appeared at the suite in the Chateau Laurier where the body was found and the time police were called.

The Attorney-General said the investigation was "purely a departmental matter." No judicial investigation had been ordered.

Mrs. Marian Gough Sullivan, 50, widow of the former chief solicitor of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests, has been charged with murdering her husband.

Stands on Floundering Craft Waiting Rescue

Leornardo, N.J., Nov. 20—(AP) —A man standing up to his waist in 18 feet of water two miles at sea waved at Nick Tortorella Saturday.

Tortorella waved back as the fishing cruiser he was on chugged past. Then Nick let out a yell.

The boat stopped and a line was thrown to Albert Fick. He told his rescuers his boat was swamped and he had been standing on the foundering craft for three hours waiting for help.

Tribute Paid To Late Primate By Churchmen

Toronto, Nov. 20—CP—Tributes came today from leaders of the Church of England in Canada to their primate, Most Rev. George Frederick Kingston, who died today in Toronto.

Most Rev. W. R. Adams, Archbishop of the Yukon and Metropolitan of British Columbia who became acting primate as the senior Metropolitan, said on behalf of the church:

"It was with a great sense of shock and loss that the Church of England in Canada . . . learned of the death of their beloved primate. . . .

"Elected to his high office little more than three years ago, he has given of himself unstintingly to the work of the whole church, and will be deeply mourned by all with whom he came in contact.

"The whole church extends to his widow, family and to his diocese, their deepest and most loving sympathy in their bereavement.

"We rend a hearty thanks to Almighty God for Archbishop Kingston's life of service."

Loss to Church

Most Rev. John Lyons, Metropolitan of Ontario and bishop of Ontario diocese in which Archbishop Kingston was born, said: "I am quite sure the whole diocese will mourn his loss. His early days were spent in his home town of Prescott where he was beloved by citizens in general. Since his elevation to the primacy, the people of the diocese have come to know him more widely and have held him in the same high regard as the citizens of his home town. His sudden death will mean a great loss to the church in Canada and will be felt especially in the church in the diocese of Ontario."

Right Rev. W. L. Wright, who succeeded the primate as bishop of Algoma said: "Archbishop Kingston is a personal friend. His gifts of heart and mind assisted me greatly when I was his dean in the diocese of Algoma. We in Algoma mourn his loss and extend sincere sympathy to his family."

Rev. T. B. McDormand, general secretary of the Baptist convention of Ontario and Quebec, said: "Canadian Baptists will be deeply shocked. Dr. Kingston was a Christian leader of broad tolerance, profound wisdom and spiritual virility. He held all denominations in high regard and exercised a benign influence upon all with whom he worked. Canada has lost an eminent citizen and the Christian church a leader of renown."

SOON ON WAY TO JAIL

Toronto, Nov. 20 — (CP) — Ronald Bean, 18, of suburban Scarboro, stopped his car at Bowmanville, 40 miles east of here, early today and asked a police constable if he was on the right highway to Timmins.

A few minutes later, he was on the right highway to Toronto's Don Jail.

Toronto police said the car Bean was driving was stolen here last night. He was charged with auto theft.

So far 65 bodies have been recovered from the wreck near Croix de La Pigne and 42 identified. — Central Press Canadian.

JAPANESE VETERAN REPAYS A DEBT

Once a prisoner of war in Wisconsin, Kumio Nakai, one-armed veteran of the Japanese Imperial Army, is shown as he gave blood in Tokyo for the U.N. forces in Korea. He travelled 900 miles to give the donation as a gesture of thanks to the American soldier who gave him some of his blood in an effort to save his life in 1943 after he had been badly wounded in Bougainville. The nurse is First Lieut. Georgia Peterson, of Schuyler, Neb.—Central Press Canadian.

Say Soldier Wed In Montreal Station

Wainwright, Alta., Nov. 20 (CP) — The seven-day embarkation leave was still being discussed by members of the 2nd Battalion of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry as they moved out of here Sunday for Korea.

The best story— the boys swear it's true — concerned an unidentified lance-corporal who got married during his furlough.

He met his girl on a Sunday, took her out Monday, met her folks Tuesday and was married in the Montreal station just before leaving for Wainwright Wednesday. His companions took up a collection and paid the minister $8.

CO-OPS ON INCREASE

Bombay. (CP)—The number of co-operative societies in Bombay state has increased from 11,712 in June, 1949, to 14,819 this year. The state government encourages the organizations especially in rural areas and plans to form 112 farming societies in the next five years.

REDS HOARDING MAPS

Stockholm. (CP)—Officers from one Soviet vessel while in Stockholm bought more than 400 Norwegian and 300 Danish coastal charts. The Norwegian Journal of Commerce and Shipping linked this with an Oslo report that Russians in the Norwegian capital long ago purchased all available copies of Norwegian charts.

Diseased Birds Dangerous to Human Life

Detroit, Nov. 20—(AP)— The count of dangerously diseased turkeys—if any—on shelves of Detroit region markets was fouled up in official confusion Sunday.

Authorities warned, meanwhile, that diseased birds could cause diarrhoea or even death unless thoroughly cooked.

The Canadian owner of a quarantined turkey ranch in suburban Farmington denied that 5,000 cholera-ridden turkeys had reached markets from his flocks.

Kenneth Bracy, assistant chief of enforcement for the Michigan Department of Agriculture agreed, saying "practically all" of the farm's turkeys, living and slaughtered, had been accounted for.

But assistant prosecutor George Taylor said at Pontiac that his investigation indicated the farm had sold between 3,000 and 5,000 birds from its diseased flocks and that only 1,900 to 2,000 have been located and impounded.

The farm owners, Kenneth Weln or Sarnia, Ont., revised his original figures that would have left 900 diseased birds in markets to show that none are in markets, but prosecutor Taylor stuck by his estimate.

Blue Bombers Welcomed at Toronto Station

Toronto, Nov. 20. (CP)—Despite the early hour and a steady downpour of rain, a small group was on hand at Toronto's Union Station today to welcome Winnipeg Blue Bombers—and inquire about Grey Cup tickets.

The Eastern Canada Football champions spent a quiet two hours before their train pulled out for London, where they will work out until Saturday's Dominion final here against Toronto Argonauts.

A few native Torontonians on the team made a bee-line for their phones to get friends and relatives out of bed. The others ate a leisurely breakfast and returned to the train for the three-hour trip to London. Coach Jimmy Phelan, who will fly down tonight, and coach Larson, who came east early to scout Saturday's Eastern Canada final between Argos and Toronto Balmy Beach.

$292,000 GRANT

Toronto, Nov. 20. (CP)—St. Mary's on the Lake hospital at Kingston today was granted $292,000 as the province's share in providing beds for 146 chronic patients in the new wing of the institution.

South Huron and District hospital received $32,000 which will provide 30 beds and 12 nursery cubicles. Haldimand Memorial Hospital, Dunnville, was granted $53,668 to provide 48 beds and 19 cubicles.

Armed Revolt In Nepal Ends

New Delhi, Nov. 20 (Reuters) —A nine-day armed revolt against the Nepalese government has collapsed, an Indian news agency correspondent reported today from the Indo-Nepal Border town of Raxaul.

The separate "government" set up by Nepal congress forces in Birgani, just north of the Indian border, has decided to cease resistance, the correspondent of the press trust of India said.

Rebel troops, ill equipped and badly organized, had been faced by superior state troops, armed with modern weapons, said the correspondent.

Congress troops have almost completed evacuation of the Birgani area.

But 100 crack congress troops were reported to have been given "right to the death" orders to cover the advance of state troops on the Parwanipur bridge, six miles north of Birgani.

Last night it was reported that Birganj was exposed to an advancing column of Nepal state troops.

Congress sources said today that the decision to cease resistance had been made "not to make our volunteers fodder for (government) guns."

One high congress source said the campaign, though given up temporarily, would be carried out elsewhere in Nepal later.

Every type of motor vehicle was pressed into service last night to evacuate the congress troops.

On the Indian frontier the Bihar—state government doubled its border defences today to meet any eventuality.

The congress forces had planned to set up a constitutional monarchy with self-exiled King Tribhuvana at its head, with a policy of "give the land to the tiller."

TITO GIVES THE WEST A NOD

Premier Marshal Tito, shown shaking hands with a mother of a partisan killed in the battle for Zagreb in 1944 when he attended the congress of anti-Fascist Women Leagues in Belgrade, has assured Yugoslavs that none will die of hunger this winter because food from the west will be distributed equally among all his people. A simultaneous announcement from Belgrade tells of a move by Tito's army, first reported move it is kind, in which the army has agreed to supply a number of hitherto unobtainable Yugoslav military publications to the representatives of a Western Power in Belgrade. The step is regarded as a welcome sign of a thaw in the ice between Tito's general staff and western military attaches in Belgrade. — Central Press Canadian.

Senior St. Mike's Defeat Marlies To Lead Series

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto St. Michael's College represented by two teams in Ontario Hockey Association play this season, but their performances to date are a study in contrasts.

While the senior St. Mike's lead the OHA major series their junior counterpart is deep in ninth place in the junior A league. They've won only one of their 13 games, while the senior squad has dropped only two.

Playing coach Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty led the fighting Irish to a 6-5 victory in the first senior meeting with the Allan Cup holding Marlboros at Maple Leaf Gardens Saturday afternoon.

The junior St. Mike's were the other hand, tried hard but were beaten on the same ice Sunday when Stratford Kroehlers scored three last period goals to eke out a 7-6 win.

In the other half of the twinbill the junior Marlboros defeated Guelph Biltmores 5-3 to take over second place in the junior 'A' league.

In Saturday games, Barrie Flyers extended their first-place lead by defeating the third-place Galt Black Hawks 4-3 in overtime while Guelph Biltmores were moving from eighth to fourth position by defeating the last-place winless Waterloo Hurricanes 4-2.

1,500 Fans on Hand

Only 1,240 fans were on hand to see O'Flaherty score two goals in St. Mike's win over Marlies who dropped to third place in the major series by virtue of their loss. A boarding penalty to Leslie Robertson of Marlboros in the third period proved costly. They were leading 5-4 at the time, but by the time Robertson returned the Irish had slammed in two goals and sewed up the game.

Johnny Meldrum, Ed Mulligan, Gordie Hannigan and John Dupriaco were the St. Mike's high scorers, while Jack MacKenzie and Scotty Mair notched a pair each for the players. Howie Lee getting the other one.

Good For Two Periods

The junior St. Mike's looked good for two periods against Stratford, leading 6-2 at the end of the first period and 6-4 at the end of the second. They faded, however, and goals by Gord Myles, Guy Henri and Ray Ross gave the Kroehlers their margin. Ross also had a first period goal, while Roy Leckie, Gord Nuddel and Bob Bailey got the others.

Bob Sabourin led the Saints with three tallies, Bill Dineen, Bob Wetherick and Dan Mac-Donald scoring the others.

In the second Sunday game the junior Marlboros were too sharp around the nets for Oshawa. After George Samuelson opened for the Generals, Parker MacDonald and Joe Lumley replied for the Marlboros to make it 2-1 at the end of the first. Dan Windley and Chuck Lumley had two for the winners in the second while Alex Delvecchio scored for Oshawa, and Marlies' Nesterenko matched a goal by Lou Jankowski in the final frame.

Score on Power Play

The goal that gave Barrie their overtime victory was scored by Doug Towers on a power play with Leo Labine and Jerry Toppazzini. Labine had opened the scoring in the first period. Real Chevrefils scored twice for the winners while Dick Wolstenholme got one for Galt in the second period. Goals by Len Cooke and George Gosselin tied it up in the final 20 minutes.

At Waterloo, Guelph Biltmores drove in five goals in the first period to settle matters as they set back the Hurricanes, a team that has only picked up one point in the standings this season. Trailing Waterloo 2-1 at the end of the second, coach Allie Eagleson's five forwards into the game. The strategy paid off.

Dean Prentice and Chuck Henderson fire two quick goals while Waterloo was a man short. Herb Dickenson and Don Keith got the others for Guelph.

Charlie MacDonald, Jack Oberle, Roger Malsoneuve, and Buddy Evans scored for the losers.

56-Game Schedule Is Approved By Intercounty

Kitchener, Nov. 20 (CP)—A 56-game schedule for the Intercounty Senior Baseball Association in 1951 was approved here at a meeting attended by representatives of seven of the league's eight clubs. Guelph was not represented.

No decision was reached on the question of limiting imports from the United States. This and the matter of boosting the cup salary limit are expected to be decided at another meeting next month.

The meeting decided to cut from eight to four the number of games a player can be returned to the active list after being placed on the reserve list.

It also was decided that clubs can sign players for the last time I compared with 22 last season, and that after that date the use of a player list be 16 instead of 17 last summer.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Nov. 20—The big ten has been experimenting this fall with a fifth official (still unnamed) in football games. The pro leagues in the United States have had a "back judge" as No. 5 man in the officiating crews for a couple of years. Recently Maryland coach Jim Tatum proposed that all college games should have that fifth whistle-tooter because the passing plays, outs and wide-running plays of modern football are more than officials can follow . . . But Lou Little of Columbia, chairman of the Coaches' Rules Committee, says the big problem now is how to get one of the usual four officials out of the way . . . It might be a good idea to have a fifth man," said Lou the other day, "but on the whole officiating this year has been very good." . . . What really worries Lou is the way the umpire gets in the way of line-backers . . . and don't think a lot of backs aren't smart enough to use him as a blocker. In the 11-man American game when a team uses a 5-3-2-1 or 6-3-2 defence, the umpire thinks he has to stand right beside one of those linebackers. As a result the man can't move to make a tackle, Little explains. There's talk of doing something about it.

Recognition

In his first season in pro football, Bob Smith, Lions' sophomore halfback, grabbed off one of Sid Luckman's passes behind his own goal line and ran it back 102 yards for a touchdown against Chicago Bears . . . Bob has faced Sid on two other occasions in games, but until just recently they never had met off the field. When they did, veteran Luckman efficiently put the youngster in his place . . . "Oh", Sid exclaimed, "you're the Smith I put into the record books."

Believes Process Will Halt Spread Lead Poisoning

(By The Canadian Press)

A Kansas City man has announced a process he believes will halt the spread of lead poisoning in waterfowl.

The process developed by J. S. McGuire, industrial engineer, was reported Saturday by Ries Tuttle, outdoor editor of the Des Moines (Iowa) Sunday Register.

Tuttle said McGuire has sent the information to the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, to ammunition firms and others.

McGuire's process would provide a tin coating of nylon, or similar material, over the surface of regulation lead shot.

Lead poisoning results when a duck or goose in search of food or gravel picks up shot pellets. Eventually some of the lead is absorbed into the fowl's blood and brings almost certain death.

Thousands of ducks and geese die annually from the poisoning.

McGuire says the plastic-covered shot can be adapted to mass production. Moreover, it is suitable from a ballistics standpoint, and that the shot would not present a hazard before it was ground up to be absorbed in the blood stream.

Canadian hockey will have an "Alexander Trophy", Doug Grimston, President of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, announced Saturday that Governor General Alexander has announced he will present a trophy to the winner of the new major hockey series.

Eligible to compete for the cup are five senior leagues: The Western Canada Senior Hockey League, the Ontario Hockey Association, the Maritimes Senior and the Prairie Senior League.

Attila Stukus of Toronto signed a one-year contract Saturday to coach Edmonton Eskimos for a third season. President Walter Sprague of the Western Football Conference said would not disclose terms of the contract, saying only that Stukus got a "big raise."

In the 1950 season, Stukus led Eskimos to a second-place tie with Saskatchewan Roughriders, but Edmonton won the Windsor-Hyde trophy in western final. The 36-year-old former Toronto Argo great was a playing coach this year, finishing sixth . . . In the scoring race during the regular season, His 38 points included 28 converts, high for the league.

General manager John Quinn of Boston Braves announced Saturday night Charlie Grimm has been appointed manager of the Milwaukee Brewers, the Braves' American Association farm club.

Bob Coleman, manager of the sixth-place Brewers last year, will return to his former post as president and manager of Evansville, Ind., in the Three I League, also owned by the Braves.

British Open golf champion Bobby Locke beat three other open champions Sunday and broke the Melbourne (Australia) Victoria Club's course record.

He was playing with Australian Norman Von Nida who is Australian open champion, Australian Ossie Pickworth, Irish open champion, and Australian Peter Thomson, New Zealand open champion.

Locke, a South African, had 67. Von Nida equalled the club's record with 68, Pickworth had 72, and Thomson 75.

Frank Filchock, playing his first professional football game in the United States since he was suspended in 1947 for not reporting an attempted bribe, had only two brief tries at quarterbacking Baltimore Colts against his former teammates, New York Giants, Sunday.

The Giants, switching to the T-formation after training in the tall hillbilies, blasted the Colts 35-7.

Filchock, who earlier this season played with Montreal Alouettes, went in just before the third quarter ended. He handed off to Rip Collins who lost five, tried an incomplete pass and then threw the next pass to the line of scrimmage.

Filchock later handed off to Frank Reagan for no gain, then tried an incomplete pass and handed off again to Spaniel, who picked up three yards.

Ralph (Bucky) Buchanan announced Saturday night he had resigned as coach of the Cornwall Senior Hockey League's Shawinigan Falls Cataracts and that Don Pennington had been appointed to succeed him. Pennington, well-known coach in Canadian and American hockey, last week was appointed "defensive consultant" of New York Rangers of the National Hockey League. Buchanan, who had been planning to resign for the last two weeks, said he would remain with the Cats as a right winger. He took over as coach midway through last season when Lawrence Lamontagne quit the post.

Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday released three players to make way for three others acquired in the draft. Pitcher Hal Gregg, a right-hander, was released outright to New Orleans of the southern association. Catcher Earl Turner and pitcher Jack McCall were released outright. Jack Ashnoy fielder got his unconditional release. The Pirates announced they had drafted Bobby Thomson of the Brooklyn of the International League in addition to two previous selections —George Kelchenfrich from Oakland of the Pacific coast circuit and Dick Loy from Kansas City of the American Association.

Dave (Sweeney) Schriner, twice scoring champion of the National Hockey League, takes over as coach of Hamilton St. Mary's of the Maritime Senior Hockey League today, Appointment of the 32-year-old native of Calgary, who up until four days ago was coach of North Sydney Victorias of the Cape Breton League, was announced Sunday night by club officials. Schriner severed relations with the North Sydney Club last Friday night after his club had taken an 11-2 beating from Sydney Millionaires. "That finished me," said Schriner. "I refused to fight in the club. Three or four of the players simply stood around. I felt I was wasting my time and told the club officials. There were no hard feelings."

ST. KITTS SWAMP PETES

St. Catharines, Nov. 20 (CP)—St. Catharines Collegiate wound up an undefeated season here Saturday when the Athletes swamped Peterborough 44-0 to win the Central Ontario Secondary Schools football title. The 4,000 fans saw Jack Bowlen, star winner of the Red Feather tournament in Ontario recently, use a two-platoon system to score seven touchdowns, five converts and four singles.

"A GOOD PLACE TO DEAL"

Coltbridge Wins Final Feature Racing Season

Manchester, England, Nov. 18 (Reuters)—Dr. J. Thompson's Coltbridge a 100-6 outsider in a 27-horse field, today galloped off with the Manchester November Handicap, final feature of Britain's flat racing season.

Ridden by veteran Joe Sime, Coltbridge took the lead in the final furlong to finish going away, two lengths ahead of Lord Derby's North Cape. Belsay Castle was a head-away third.

Northern fans were shouting the popular black-and-white derby colors home when North Cape took the lead about a furlong from home in the 1¼-mile gallop through Manchester's customary mud. Then Sime shot his mount clear of the pack to challenge and gain supremacy.

First to show in front had been soccer star Stanley Matthews' Parbleu as the field broke from the tapes.

He was rapidly overhauled by Mrs. L. Fox-Pitt Historic's Field and the latter made all the running—just in front of top-weighted Al Mahan—until the ½ bit the turn five furlongs from home.

Here the field bunched with North Cape moving in front and Lord Derby Sterling and Clark's Rock and Rye showing briefly in third slot. Belsay Castle and Prince Royal moved up on the leader but jockey Doug Smith appeared to have the field in safe keeping until Sime made his move.

North Cape paid 18-1 and Belsay Castle 20-1. Rock and Rye was favorite at 10-1.

COBOURG PLAYER HONORED

Toronto, Nov. 20 (CP) — Bob Cooper, playing coach of Cobourg Galloping Ghosts, has been selected by referees and other officials as the outstanding and most sportsmanlike player in the Ontario Rugby Football Union's intermediate series.

This was announced by William Fry of the O.R.F.U., who said Hilal Cooper becomes the first winner of a trophy donated by the Oshawa football club in tribute to John Black of Oakville, injured in a game in September and still is in a paralyzed condition.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Max Bentley of Toronto, steadily piling up assists, continues to top the National Hockey League's individual scoring race, his 17 assists and five goals for a 22-point total being four more than his nearest opponent.

Team-mate Ted Kennedy holds down second slot with 13 assists and five goals for 18 points, while a three-way tie exists for third place among Cal Gardner and Ted Sloan of the Leafs and Gordie Howe of Detroit, All three have 15 points.

Turk Broda of Toronto still has the most shutouts—four— but Gerry McNeill of Canadiens picked up another Sunday night for a total of three. Gus Mortson of Toronto is the most penalized player, having served 42 minutes in penalties.

North Hastings Minor Hockey To Organize

Bancroft—President J. W. C. Hutton of the North Hastings Minor Hockey Association announced today that the annual meeting of the organization would be held at 8 p. m. on Wednesday, November 22nd in Bancroft Public School.

During the 1949-50 season this group sponsored a bantam and a midget league with teams from Apsley, Coe Hill and Bancroft. This year they hope to expand and include more teams from other nearby centers.

To Enter Playdown

There is great enthusiasm in the northern section of the county regarding the chances of their entries in the O. M. H. A. provincial playdowns. Last February the North Hastings All-Stars, two teams picked from the players of Apsley, Coe Hill and Bancroft and coached by Constable Bert Howden of Apsley, made a good start in competition with outside towns. The Midgets were knocked out by Lakefield in the first round and the Bantams lost to Campbellford in the second round.

The bantam and midget trophies, donated by Wiggins Garage and Bancroft Lions Club for annual competition, are at present in Bancroft as teams from the village were victorious over Coe Hill and Apsley in the league playdowns.

Any organizations from North Hastings that have teams to enter are invited to the organizational meeting. John Bleecker of Bancroft, phone 33 ring 4, the league secretary, will be pleased to supply any additional information to any interested teams or individuals.

North Bay Ends Three-Game Losing Streak

North Bay, Nov. 20 — (CP)— Three unreplied goals in the final period brought to an end North Bay Black Hawks three - game losing streak here Saturday night and gave them a bitterly - contested 6-3 verdict over Ottawa Brewers in Eastern Canada Hockey League encounter.

Victory pushed the Hawks past Cornwall Calumets into second place in the league race. They trail the leading Ottawa RCAF Flyers by three points.

Black Hawks shattered a 3 - 3 second-period tie by damning three three third-period markers, Joe LaFrance sinking the winner on Aggi Manitha's neat set-up at the 8:31 mark. Army battled desperately for the equalizer but saw their hopes go when Ralph Orlando and Chick Cecchini banged home pair of goals 38 seconds apart with less than two minutes remaining.

The teams engaged in a hard-bumping duel that terminated in a first-period fist fight between North Bay's Fred Valenti and Army's Edgar Blondin. Both were banished from the game with match misconducts.

Boris Elik, Bill Dwyer and Frank Ringler added the other Black Hawk tallies while Connie Brown, Ozzie Osborne and Jake Brunning clicked for the Ottawa markers.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Our private eye tells us that the local Redmen really turned on the steam here Friday night to earn that 7-3 win over the Kingston Nylons. The two teams look at it again tonight in the Limestone City and it should be a dandy. Walter Benn shifted the players all around Friday night, and the new combinations paid off. Tim Williams, moved back on defence with big Vern Goyer, played a whale of a game, as did Vern.

* * *

Maurice LeForte, in his first turn between the pipes this year, took a period to settle down and then was hotter than a two-bit pistol. Up front, the first line of Malvihill, Green and Wardhaugh outskated the Nylons all night long, and the rest of the team started to play the hockey they're capable of. At that, five penalties in the second period didn't help the Belleville cause any too much. Referee Dick Oulmet kept the game well in hand, and the local fans didn't like him too well — probably because he made no mistake about who was boss in the game.

The locals looked good all over cracking their goose-egg, and there's every chance now that they will start to roll.

Tonight, in Memorial Arena, the local Rockets take on Port Hope in the first Junior "B" home game of the year. The kids took a shellacking at Peterborough last Wednesday night, but they'll come along with time. Coach Smiley Bennett had them out for practice after the senior game Friday night, whipping them into shape. Win or lose, these kids throw their bodies around on the ice as if they had no more use for them, and tonight they may be ready to nail that big first one.

OMHA

Otto J. Hardwick, popular Reeve of the Village of Bolton, and for the past twelve years a member of the executive of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association, Saturday announced his retirement as President of the OMHA at the 17th Annual Convention in Toronto. He was succeeded by Herb Parker, of Stratford. A desire to shorten the time it takes a member to work his way through the many offices of the OMHA to the Presidency, combined with a desire to be free to coach a "kid's team" if the occasion arises, brought about his decision, Mr. Hardwick said.

Herb Parker, of Stratford, took over the Presidency by acclamation, and his promotion brings about a general move-up. O. Mike Welchel, Elmira, is the 1st Vice-President and R. Kinchsular of Whitby the Second Vice - President, also by acclamation. Fred Norman of Simcoe is the 3rd Vice-President. Jack L. Christie, Toronto, will start his seventh term as Secretary, and Dr. Leon Hipwell, already a Past President and Life Member, will start his fifth term as Treasurer.

* * *

There was an election necessary when the delegates met at the Convention to choose their seven man executive committee. Eight nominees, (five sitting members, and one new aspirant) stood for election to the seven man board. The sitting members are Vic M. Burr of Oshawa; Sam Curry, Tweed; Frank Doherty, Thrrold; Ted Elmes, Galt; A. E. "Bert" Hick of Lindsay; Jack W. Oakes, Strathroy; and Gerry V. Simmons of Gravenhurst. The new candidate, nominated by Mi dland, was Jack Rutherford, who was defeated.

* * *

Possibly the most radical change made was when the Lindsay MBA motion to permit body checking in the centre ice area in the juvenile and midget series was adopted. Body checking in the centre ice area is still banned in the bantam section. The other club-submitted proposal to increase the number of players to 18, proposed by Oshawa MHA, also was passed.

* * *

The executive suggested six changes, and five were accepted by the delegates, with slight revision. The committee had asked that entry fees be raised to $7 for juvenile and midget, $5 for bantam. A motion from the floor set the new scale at $6 for juvenile, $7 for midget and $5 for bantam. Another change made was unanimously passed when the delegates accepted a suggestion that players may compete in an unlimited number of games of OHA competition, up to Dec. 15, and will be eligible for the usual three - game try-out after that date.

* * *

In future only C and D series players may play for more than one classification, but henceforth will be restricted to playing for their own, or nearest town, only. In the past, players in these series were permitted to play for more than one nearby centre. A move to bring rules more in line with those of the OHA was made with the adoption of the five-mile choice rule, iswhich a player, resident of a centre without a team, may choose the team for which he will play, providing the difference between his residence and two or more teams concerned does not exceed five miles. Final amendment passed made the OMHA - appointed referee responsible for mailing the referee's report to the secretary.

At the luncheon following the meeting, President J. M. Roxburgh of the OHA, a graduate of the OMHA and its first secretary, was made a life member. He reciprocated by announcing that the usual OHA grant would be made to the OMHA. Another feature of the luncheon proceedings was the presentation by Ash Morrison of the OMHA honor award to Bert Sullivan for an outstanding contribution to minor hockey.

Three stalwarts of the Junior "B" Rockets pictured above will help the squad go for its first victory tonight when the young-sters tangle with the Port Hope team. Left to right are Pat Gilmour, Bill Turland and Harry Brown. Coach Meronek has had the kids flying at top speed the past few days and they'll be all out tonight for that victory.

Les Habitants Riding Crest Of Three-Game Win Streak And Now Third in League

(By The Canadian Press)

Coach Dick Irvin has his flying Frenchmen flying again.

Les Habitants, rebounding from a tailspin due to injuries, today are riding the crest of a three-game winning streak which has seen them rise from fourth to third place in the National Hockey League.

They made the best gain any of the loop's teams durind the weekend, knocking off Chicago Black Hawks twice—2-1 on home Saturday and 3-0 at Chicago Sunday.

Other weekend action saw Detroit Red Wings extend their skein of undefeated games to 10, one shy of the season record set by Toronto Maple Leafs.

In meetings with the two top teams, the slow-starting Boston Bruins and New York Rangers showed they need only a few rare smiles from Lady Luck to become major factors in tightening up the league race.

The Bruins broke even, dropping a close one, 2-1 to Detroit Saturday, then used the Maple Leafs as stepping stones to their third victory of the season Sunday, 3-1. Both were played on Boston ice.

Rangers appeared headed for certain victory at Toronto Saturday night when overtaken by misfortune and they dropped a heartbreaker 5-4. On Sunday they recovered sufficiently to hold the Wings to a 3-3 tie on home ice.

The result of weekend play left Toronto on top with 23 points, one more than Detroit who still have two games in hand over the Leafs. Canadiens have 18 points, Chicago 16, Boston nine and Rangers eight.

McNeil's Third Shutout

Irvin's charges gave their supporters a couple of anxious weeks when they went seven games without a win after a good start. But, with most of their cripples back in action, they hit stride again at home last Thursday by tacking a convincing 5-2 loss on the Leafs.

Goalie Gerry McNeil racked up his third shut of the season before 13,904 Chicago fans Sunday while his mates scored a goal a period. It was the Hawks first whitewashing this season, and their third straight defeat.

Floyd Curry, Elmer Lach and rookie Vern Kaiser were the Montreal marksmen.

On Saturday, a bowling Montreal crowd of 14,355 saw Calum MacKay score twice and Maurice (Rocket) Richard connect once while Doug Bentley and Roy Conacher shared scoring honors in a losing cause for Chicago.

Interest in the Leafs-Bruins clash Sunday centred on the first appearance of William (Wild Bill) Ezinicki in a Boston uniform against his former teammates from whom he was cut adrift last week.

The Winnipeg right-winger was his old bashing self, although playing with an upset stomach. He bashed Sid Smith, sidestepped a would-be crushing body check from Leaf Bill Juzda and tallied Boston's first goal.

All this was in the first period He retired after that due to his stomach ailment. Boston's Ed Harrison also failed to show for the middle session due to a pulled ligament in his left knee.

Dumart Made Fans Happy

Veteran Woody Dumart made 8,487 Boston fans happy for a change, potting two third-period goals that sank the Leafs Sunday night. Smith potting two third-period goals that sank the Leafs. Smith had tallied for Toronto in the first period.

Only one penalty—to defenceman Leo Reise of Detroit—was called in Saturday's game when the Wings got away to a 2-0 lead on goals by George Gee and Gordie Howe in the first two periods. Boston was kept off the score sheet until the 13th minute of the finale when Lorne Ferguson tallied.

At Toronto Saturday, 13,700 Leaf supporters found little to cheer about as Rangers outhustled and outbumped their favorites until after the midway mark of the final canto with the visitors leading 4-2.

Then a penalty for Jack Evans, Rangers' hustling new defenceman, gave the Leafs a chance to cut loose with their potent power play. Before Evans got back the score was deadlocked, and Joe Klukay won the game-winner on a pretty play soon after.

Bashed into Boards

To cap the Rangers' misfortune they lost forward Jack McLeod for at least six weeks. With 10 minutes of play remaining, he was bashed into the boards by defenceman Bill Barilko and was carried off the ice with a fractured collarbone and head injuries. McLeod had been the Rangers most effective man on the attack.

Smith, Jim Thomson, Tod Sloan and Comedy were Toronto's other marksmen, while Tony Lesuick bagged two for New York and Frankie Eddolls and Ed Kullman got the others.

At New York, Jim Peters dashed Rangers' hope of victory by sinking the tying marker for Detroit with less than six minutes of play remaining.

Reise and Ted Lindsay counted Detroit's other goals, while Kullman, Zeillo Toppazzini and Buddy O'Connor tallied for New York.

Argos Win Eastern Canada Football Title From Beaches; Western Takes McGill 24-2

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto Argonauts, picked by most of experts to fall by the wide this season, are the eastern Canada football champs. They pushed aside their farm club, Toronto Balmy Beach, 43-13 Saturday to qualify for the Grey Cup final with Winnipeg Blue Bombers in Toronto next Saturday.

In the "little east-west" game Saturday, Hamilton Tiger-Cats won the dominion junior crown with a 14-5 victory at Hamilton over Vancouver Blue Bombers. And University of Western Ontario upset the mighty McGill Redmen in Montreal, 24-2, to take the Intercollegiate title.

All three tilts were sudden-death games.

It was obvious from the open kickoff that the Argos even rested and over-confident as they were, could score against Beaches almost any time they wanted.

Only through sheer fight, a powerful will to upset their big brothers in the Argo farm system, and the good work of quarterback Gerry Tuttle, halfback Carl Galbreath and lineman Cattens Fisher and Dwight Follin did the Beaches come as close as they did.

As it turned out, it was a weekend of satisfaction for coach Frank Clair who had tried in vain all week to get his Argos to take the game with Beaches seriously. Not only did the team win their way into the east-west final in his first year as coach, but he learned that his wife had given birth to a 6¼-pound future quarterback at home in Lafeyette, Ind.

Won't Take Things Easy

Next for Clair is the difficult task of maintaining an Argo record of never having lost a Grey Cup to Winnipeg Blue Bombers in six tries.

With reports of the Bombers as one of the best ever to come out of the West, neither Clair or the Argos are likely to take things easy next Saturday.

A crowd of only 13,704— less than half the number that will jam Varsity Stadium for the game next week—saw the Argos pick up a converted touchdown in the first quarter; add two more in the second while the Beaches were scoring their first point, make it 30-13 at three-quarter time and roll for another 13 points in the final 15 minutes.

Taking the game lightly, the Argos made mistakes and in the third quarter something happened that had not occurred all season, Fisher broke through to block an Argo kick. Follin snatched up the bounding ball and scampered five yards for a touchdown, the second for Beaches in minutes.

A few plays earlier, Tuttle, whose deceptive passing style kept Argo secondaries on their toes, lofted a long, high one that Galbreath took on the run at the sidelines and outraced two tacklers to the goal. George Watson converted both.

The other single point was a long boot by young Howard French, who came up with a surprise kicking effort to match Joe Krol in that department.

Scoring Attack Varied

The explosive Argo scoring attack was varied. Rod Smylie got two touchdowns on forward passes, one in which play moved 88 yards. Ulysses Curtis, fleet Negro half, gathered in the ball on a forward for one, and raced the end for another two. The last quarter touchdowns were added by Ted Toogood, whose safety-position mate, Nick Volpe, converted all seven majors. Krol, whose consistent booting has been a big factor in Argos' success this year, added a single point on a quick kick for good measure.

Although Vancouver failed to win the Canadian junior championship, they have one consolation. They scored just five times as many points as had been chalked up against Hamilton during the regular season.

Up to Saturday's game, the Tiger-Cats had only one point scored against them during the regular schedule in which they were unbeaten.

Vancouver, runner-up during the last two years and victors in 1947, were disappointed after the game but determined to "get them next year."

They figure to lose only two players from this year's team, although Les Lear, coach of Calgary Stampeders, may have other ideas. Lear watched the game and said there were several players he would like to get for the Stamps. The Vancouver club has supplied some outstanding talent for senior football in the past.

The Tiger-Cats led 12-0 at the half and got a couple of singles in the second half while the Blue and Bombers were scoring their only touchdown.

Couple of Long Runs

A couple of long runs gave Hamilton its early scoring. Cam Fraser, who also kicked three singles, snared a pass from Odie Harras and raced 70 yards for one major. Ron Lexington took a lateral pass from Frankie Dilks and streaked 45 yards for the other.

The Bombers whose attack was strictly on the ground, started their touchdown drive after snaring a fumble at midfield by Harras. Arnie Hallgren picked up a gain to 35 and Bill Blount swept from there for the major.

McGill's dream of glory went glimmering as Western handed the Redmen the unmerciful 24-2 lacing before a record crowd of 23,000 at Molson Stadium.

It was a bitter season's ending for the Montrealers, big team of the college loop in the early stages of the autumn. Touted the best McGill University team in many years, the Redmen bowed ignominiously to the Mustangs, who thereby won their seventh title.

Don McFarlane, Western's great Athletic star, climaxed his football career with two touchdowns. Brother Bob kicked three converts. Blake Taylor got two touchdowns and Jerry Fitzgerald was one of the top stars.

McGill supporters were stunned by the blow. Coach Vic Obeck has been slowly building the Redmen into a powerhouse since 1947 and this year it seemed he had arrived. Four McGill players formerly played with Dominion champion Calgary Stampeders of the Western Conference last year and the Redmen dominated the intercollegiate all-star ratings.

But after sweeping everything before them in the early parts of the season, McGill faltered against the week Toronto Varsity Blues. Playing in Montreal on a wet, cold field two weeks ago, the Redmen could only manage a tie with the Blues.

A week ago, McGill failed to win the league title in the regular schedule by losing to the Mustangs in London—this forcing the playoff.

Cleveland Barons In Top Position West Division

(By The Canadian Press)

Cleveland Barons have once again edged out front in the American Hockey League's western division.

The Barons have been staunchly battling with Cincinnati Mohawks for first place in the division. Last night, the Barons beat St. Louis Flyers 5-2 while Providence Reds downed Cincinnati 6-3. That gave the Barons a two point edge.

In the eastern division, meantime, Buffalo got into the van by beating Springfield Indians 7-4 while second-place Hershey Bears bowed to the lowly New Haven Eagles 5-3. In the fifth game played, Indianapolis Capitals scored a 4-2 victory over Pittsburgh Hornets.

Cleveland pushed three goals into the net in four minutes of the third period to defeat St. Louis. It was the fifth straight loss for the Flyers, who are in fourth place in the western division. Les Douglas, Fred Thurier, Sam Lavitt, Walt Hergesheimer and Murdo McKay counted for the victors. Lavitt and Hergesheimer scored in 23 seconds while the Flyers were short a man.

Cliff Simpson and Eric Pogue scored for St. Louis.

French Canadian Line

The new all-French Canadian line of Roger Bedard, Ray Laplante and Paul Saindon racked up four goals for Providence against the Mohawks. Laplante and Saindon each scored in the first 12 minutes while Bedard counted twice in the second. Pete Kapusta and Jack McGill got the others.

Gerry Plamondon scored twice for Cincinnati and Frank King got the other.

Bullet Bill Summerhill and Ray Manson got two goals and an assist apiece to lead New Haven to their fourth victory in 20 starts. Barry Sullivan got the other while Joe Schertzl, Jack McIntyre and Ed Harrison were the Hershey marksmen.

Indianapolis, bottom team in the western division, scored their first victory in four starts against Pittsburgh. Max Quackenbush, Enio Sclisizzle, Max McNab and Rod Morrison counted for the Caps while Ray Hannigan and Ken Smith scored for the Hornets.

Sid McNabley counted twice for Buffalo while the other Bison counters came from George Pargeter, Roly McLenahan, Ab Demarco, Hugh Currie and George Pensil. Harry Pidhirny scored twice for Springfield while other Indian goals went to Armand Lemieux and Ken Hayden.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Milbitzer

Where slams are concerned, ace and king showing conventions are a very big help. Many think these conventions are futile in actual play. But these are mistaken.

There are master players who seem to feel that cue bidding is more efficient than wholesale ace and king showing. By cue bidding is meant the individual showing of aces and kings.

There is, of course, merit in both methods. So, in many cases both cue bidding and wholesale showing is combined by masters. But it is my contention that wholesale showing is sufficient.

The pair of hands sent me will be seen here:

SOUTH
♠A Q 8
♥K 6
♦A K J 10 2
♣A Q 9

NORTH
♠K 3
♥Q 5 4
♦K 2
♣K J 10 8 7 6 5

The bidding goes like this:

South	North
2 D	2 NT
3 D	4 C
5 NT	6 NT
7 NT	Pass

In answer to an opening of two in a suit, two no-trump is only a signal that denies a sure trick. It does not deny anything else. After this denial the responder follows T-A-N.

If, however, a player bids five no-trump it is a new signal for partner to answer. It asks partner to reveal how many kings he holds. In reply thereto, six no-trump shows four kings.

If north has all four kings as promised by his convention reply, south knows they can take all 13 tricks at no-trump. If there was a hole in one of his suits he might have ended at seven clubs.

Four no-trump asks partner how many aces and kings he holds. Those who say this is not efficient should have their heads examined.

Hollywood, Nov. 20. (AP)—This will be Charlie McCarthy's last season on the radio. Mortimer Snerd's, too.

Their voice, ventriloquist Edgar Bergen, says. "I'll probably give up radio next year and devote full time to television."

Bergen has made two television shows, which will be released for Thanksgiving and Christmas. They have been filmed in Hollywood and he added, "I guess I'm one of the few believers in film". Nearly all other comedy stars have gone to New York to perform their shows in the flesh.

Just Like Hollywood

Isn't this just like Hollywood? The studio hired a vocal coach to teach Ruth Roman how to speak Bostonian for her role in "Strangers on a Train". Yep, you're right; Ruth was born and reared in Boston.

Elizabeth Taylor took off for a few days in New York with Nick Hilton. The trip may help dissolve some rumors about their marriage. Liz still is emphatic that nothing is wrong between them and is getting fed up with the gossips.

No More Thaw

John Lund joins the cast members who hope there won't be another "Irma" picture. Diana Lynn and Marie Wilson are others. But it could happen. The two "Irma" films are among Paramount's top money-makers.

Judy Holliday was welcomed to the Oscar race after the preview of "Born Yesterday", felt be a hot match, with Bette Davis and Gloria Swanson already vying for the honor. As yet, the male division is slow.

Canada Taking Wrong Attitude Toward Team

Toronto, Nov. 20—(CP)—Col. John W. Wofford, captain of the United States Equestrian Team, said yesterday that Canada is taking a defeatist attitude towards sending an equestrian team to the 1952 Olympics at Helsinki.

He was referring to a statement made Saturday by Major Michael Gutowski, trainer of the Canadian jumping team, which is competing at the Royal Winter Fair Horse Show here. Major Gutowski said Canada would stand little chance in the Olympic events. The team, he said, had only one horse out of ten up to Olympic standards.

Col. Wofford said: "the Canadian team's prospects did not look so good at Harrisburg and New York, but they have improved so much here I see no reason why they can't come along and take an event at Helsinki."

MacKenzie's Column:

China Likely To Keep War Going Long Time

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Communist China's reaction to Washington's earnest assurances that the United States has no designs on Manchuria precipitately stems more from Moscow than Peiping.

All evidence indicates that the Chinese communist chief, Gen. Mao Tse-Tung, has entered into an alliance with the Russians to keep United Nations forces indefinitely engaged in the Korean war. That being so, he is no longer a free agent; the Soviet Union speaks for him.

This plan, of course, is aimed at bleeding the United States and her allies both militarily and economically, thereby weakening their defence against the communist world revolution. If the plot were successful it ultimately would give Mao a dominant position in Asia—though naturally under suzerainty of the Muscovites. He must accept dictation from Moscow.

There is small possibility of either Moscow or Peiping taking long under misapprehension that U. N. troops really are aiming at Manchuria. Korea is simply a soldier with a wooden gun would realize the U. S. and her allies can't afford to get entangled in a major Asiatic war at this critical juncture, with Russia sitting on the sidelines and fostering her strength.

Europe's Importance

Without detracting from the importance of the Asiatic zone, Western Europe must remain the vital theatre of allied preparedness as long as Russia remains aloof, building up her already-great power. The weakening of allied strength in Western Europe by heavy commitments in the far east would be inviting disaster.

To my mind, for reasons we are not in another world war this moment is because the western allies hold the balance of power—both military and economic—over the Soviet bloc.

The maintenance of peace depends on the maintenance of the balance of power the way it is. Another global upheaval isn't inevitable so long as this balance continues.

Cobourg Talent Presents Program At Pie Social

Melrose—A large crowd attended the concert and pie social at Melrose United Church recently sponsored by the Women's Missionary Society. In the absence of the pastor, Mr. J. C. Milligan acted as chairman, for the occasion.

The entire musical program was presented by Cobourg talent, which included Lloyd Stinson, 1st tenor; Milton Harper, 2nd tenor; Arnold Reilley, bass, who rendered several exceptionally fine selections, Albert Hircock 'discs' at Manchuria. Some splendid songs of voice fom deep bass to high feminine notes. All the singers are to be commended for their giving of time and talent in aid of the church work.

Mrs. Arnold Reilley accompanied the singers throughout the program.

Appreciative thanks were expressed by Mr. Milligan, on behalf of the Women's Missionary Society to the singers and to the pianist, by which Mr. Stinson spoke briefly, expressing his thanks for the words of appreciation.

An abundance of sandwiches, pie, cake and coffee were served. Receipts amounted to $70.

West German Socialists Win In American Zone

By BRACK CURRY

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 20 —(AP)—West German socialists fierce opposite of the creation of a new German army to bolster western defence—won a thumping weekend election victory in the American occupation zone.

Voters in two states snubbed the powerful Christian democrats, who dominate the federal West German government and have urged German rearmament.

The states of Hesse and Wuerttemberg-Baden, which voted yesterday for new state parliaments, also decisively rejected Moscow's policies in Germany. With not a single communist elected, the reds suffered their worst drubbing since the war.

Stand Against Rearmament

Socialist leaders immediately hailed the results as a victory for their stand against West German rearmament.

Fritz Heine, general secretary of the socialist party, claimed the elections show the German public has lost confidence in the federal government, especially because of its attitude on rearmament.

Heine said the socialist victory "underscores our demand for new elections for the West German parliament." The socialists demand the new ballot to give the people a chance to vote yes or no on the army question.

But political observers feel the election results also partly reflected popular resentment against Adenauer for rising prices and the acute coal shortage.

The free democrats, often called the "Party of the Wealthy", took 21 seats in the Hesse parliament. They had supported Adenauer's stand on rearmament. But their poll was due in part to an alliance with the refugee group, which numbers 18 per cent of the total population.

These were the complete official returns (1946 in parentheses): Hesse:

Socialists, 820,444 votes, 47 seats (30).

Right-wing free democrats and refugees, 588,191 votes, 21 seats (14).

Christian democrats, 347,803 votes, 12 seats (32).

Communists, 87,446 votes, no seats (10).

Wuerttemberg-Baden—

Socialists, 475,872, 35 seats, (39).

German people's party—303,331, 21 seats (19).

Refugee party—211,599, 13 seats.

Communists, —70,207, no seats (10).

PRINCESS PATS

All the men carried rifles and were full pack. At Fort Lewis they will pick up American motor transport, the rest bombs and will need some trench mortars. Aside from this, all equipment will be Canadian.

Issue Winter Equipment

The commanding officer said that winter equipment for the men — parkas, hats, mitts and so on — will be issued either at Fort Lewis or made available on arrival in Korea.

For some 60 per cent of the Patricia's, going to war is a new experience. For the remainder, it's the same old story, with the surroundings slightly more plush.

The tourist coaches are fairly new and each man has a bunk to himself. Senior N. C. O's share compartments. The food is excellent and each man had a choice of roast beef or fillet of haddock for dinner last night.

As the train rolled west the cards came out. So did a few guitars and mouth organs. But there was no singing and the men seemed subdued — a not-unnatural reaction to the first night on a troop train.

The men are a representative group. The salty speech of a Newfoundlander could be heard arguing with a red-headed lance corporal whose accent could have sprung from nowhere but the Ottawa valley. A French-speaking Canadian corporal was laying down the rules to a man who wanted to get off to see his wife as the train stopped for a few minutes at Edmonton.

At Edmonton, as the press party dismounted, a private stuck his head out a door window and waved.

Then he called: "See you in Korea."

F.J. SULLIVAN

Dr. Dover told The Canadian Press that he delayed calling police because he was not certain that foul play was involved.

He fixed the time of death as "some time" before 1 a.m. E.S.T. Saturday. He was not called to the scene until about 4 a.m.

Dr. Dover said that apparently Mrs. Sullivan had called the hotel desk about 3:30 a.m., asking that someone help put her husband to bed.

When Edward Stockfish, the hotel detective, arrived, he found the naked body of Sullivan, lying on the floor beside the bed. He called house physician Dr. Lorne Gardner. Gardner immediately called Dr. Dover.

Examined Body

"When I arrived at the suite," said Dr. Dover, "I examined the body and found scratches on the shoulders, a bruise on the forehead that tried to hold him, a blackened eye, bruises on the face.

"The back of the head was beaten as with a blunt weapon. Sullivan died of brain haemorrhage."

Dr. Dover said Mrs. Sullivan told him, in reply to a question, that there had been no struggle.

Dr. Dover quoted Mrs. Sullivan as saying that her husband had fallen to the floor in the bedroom of their suite and apparently injured himself.

Following normal routine, Dr. Dover said, he had the body transferred to Civic Hospital for an autopsy. That had been delay at the hospital.

When police finally were called — at noon Saturday—they found an empty 26-ounce whisky bottle in the room and the neck of another whisky bottle.

By that time, Mrs. Sullivan had checked out of the hotel, approximately at 11:35 a.m. and headed back to Toronto by motor car, with her son, 20-year-old Frank J. Sullivan, and a distant relative, Mrs. J. J. Heney, of Ottawa.

Car Halted on Road

The license number was broadcast to district police and the car was halted by Ontario Provincial Police on Highway 15, near Innesville, some 35 miles west of Ottawa.

Young Frank, who had flown from Toronto after his mother reached Ottawa, told a reporter later that he and his 16-year-old sister, Anne, in a Montreal convent, had complete faith in their mother's innocence.

Mrs. Sullivan, daughter of the late Richard Gough, a partner in the firm of Sellers-Gough, widely-known Toronto fur merchants, was placed in county jail and given "regulation fare". No bail is granted in a murder charge.

Found Fort Knight Bottle

Inspector Hobbs said that police found part of an empty whisky bottle in Mrs. Sullivan's luggage. It was sent to police laboratories for examination.

Still hazy are the events which transpired after Dr. Dover called police.

Police said that when her son arrived, Mrs. Sullivan apparently went with him to a local undertaking establishment to select a casket and made arrangements to have the body shipped to Toronto, when released by Ottawa authorities.

Though the death had not been made public in Ottawa until late Saturday afternoon, death notices appeared this same afternoon in the Toronto Star and the Sault Ste. Marie Star. There was no information here as to who had ordered the notices inserted.

Mrs. Sullivan, socially prominent in Toronto, was wearing a mink jacket and was "well-studded with jewelry" when arrested. Inspector Borden Hobbs of the Ontario police department, in charge of the investigation, said she was questioned for "hours" and finally gave a statement.

He did not disclose what was in the statement, but said it was on the basis of this that the charge of murder was laid formally at 2:15 a.m. Sunday.

Sullivan, chief solicitor with the Ontario Lands and Forests Department, was found naked in the suite about 3 a.m. Saturday, after Mrs. Sullivan had telephoned the hotel desk and asked for assistance "in getting my husband to bed."

Coroner Called

Hotel officials found the man dead and called Coroner Harry Dover, who had Mr. Body transferred to hospital for an autopsy. The body bore a number of bruises. Dover said the head was blackened and death had been caused by a blow to the back of the head.

At the first viewing of the body, Dr. Dover said, he could not tell whether there had been foul play. He decided to await the outcome of the autopsy before notifying police—some time after noon on Saturday.

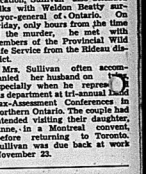
Mrs. Sullivan—first woman in Ottawa's history to be charged with murder—was arrested about 4 p.m. E.S.T. Saturday afternoon, about 35 miles west of Ottawa. She had arranged with a local funeral parlor to make funeral arrangements and to ship the body to Toronto, and apparently had notified relatives in Toronto of death. Obituary notices appeared in afternoon editions of the Toronto Star and the Sault Ste. Marie Star.

Accompanied by Son

When taken into custody at Innesville, Ont., she was accompanied by her son, Frank Sullivan, 25, who had flown here from Toronto after being notified of the death, and Mrs. J. J. Heney, a cousin. Police had thrown out a dragnet after learning she left Ottawa to drive to Toronto shortly before noon Saturday.

Inspector Hobbs said police had lost "valuable time" in uncovering evidence because of the delay. It now may take several weeks of detective work before it can be cleared up. He added he is preparing a report to higher police authorities regarding this delay in notifying police of the incident.

Chief Solicitor For Dept.



Mrs. Sullivan, the former Marion Gough, is the daughter of the late Richard Gough, a partner in the fifth of Sellers-Gough, widely-known Toronto fur merchants.

Her husband was prominently known in legal circles. He was appointed chief solicitor for the Ontario Lands and Forests Department in 1942, after practising law in Toronto for 20 years. The Sault Ste. Marie native was educated at the University of Toronto and graduated from Osgoode Hall, Toronto, in 1922.

His mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan, is head of a men's clothing firm in Sault Ste. Marie.

The Toronto couple, considered by friends as "ideal," only never exchanged harsh words", came to Ottawa Wednesday. Though on vacation, Sullivan has also attended talks with Weldon Beatty au-veyor-general of Canada. On Friday, only hours from the time of the murder, he met with members of the Provincial Wild Life Service from the Rideau district.

Mrs. Sullivan often accompanied her husband on [illegible] especially when he represented his department at tri-annual Inland Tax-Assessment Conferences in Northern Ontario. The couple had intended visiting their daughter, Anne, in a Montreal convent, before returning to Toronto. Sullivan was due back at work November 23.

I Hear Adventure Calling

By Emilie Loring

"Sure he was looking at you, not at Sinclair?"

"Yes."

"How long were you in the room?"

"Long enough to have something to eat, and coffee."

"Did Barth serve you?"

"Serve us! He hovered. He kept offering things."

"Did Sinclair comment on his superstentition?"?

"No, Blake gave his entire attention to the eats."

"You arrived late. Did you come with Sinclair?"

"Yes. He was late calling for me. He dined at Rocky Point. I was invited but refused because I expected a special-delivery registered letter and package and had to be at home when it came."

"Did it come?"

"Yes. I signed for it, so that's off my mind."

"A little bird whispered that you refused to see Sinclair when he struck town. Why the change of heart?"

"Perhaps the Fates took a hand. Who knows?"

"To return to Morrie Grove's mystery man," said Fran. "Now that he has departed I begin to think that the uneasy sense that he was watching me was a product of my overworked imagination. I have had the feet in the Gallery on my mind every waking minute and a good many sleeping ones."

"Has Henry Sargent been needling you?" asked Myles.

"No, on the contrary he told me he trusted me 'implicitly.' He gave me permission to tell you, under oath of secrecy, of his discovery in the repair shop the night of the burglary after we left. He declared that a man who had accomplished what you had in a military way should be able to solve the problem. There's an orchid for you, and a rare, one, considering the source from which it came."

"Hope I live up to my reputation—which, however, was not gained in the whodunit field. About that discovery? Give. Don't keep me in suspense."

She told him, told of the still missing Constable.

"Sdeath! Borrowed from our Congressman. A £5650 painting, roughly twenty-three thousand in our money. Now we are getting somewhere. That makes the enamel box and Apostle spoon look like chicken feed. Herring dragged across the trail to lure us. Do you know where your boss put the picture after Sinclair left it with him?"

"No. I asked him if he were sure he remembered where he had placed it. He said, 'Very sure', period."

"He claims that your gold sandal made the prints in the dust. Did you check on it?"

"Yes. It was a perfect fit."

"What report did the fingerprint expert make on the sandal?"

"No marks, not even Mr. Sargent's, he had slipped his hand into the shoe when he picked it up. It had been wiped clean."

"The guy who borrowed it was thorough, wasn't he? How come these people could get into your apartment, first the thief, then the second crook? It was locked when I opened it for you after the storm."

"I left it unlocked when you and I went to Rocky Point that night. I thought Sargent might want to investigate. Added to that, there is a duplicate key in my desk, both Gene and he know where it is kept."

"Add the thief, that makes three. Let's get back to the footprints in the dust—they and the kitchen discovery look like thirty cents—the Apostle spoons were found at the end of the trail. It was a plant, of course. Whoever put them there expected them to be found. Any clue to the whereabouts of the enamel box?"

"If one has been discovered it is being kept off the record."

"Leave it to me as if the person who snitched the painting is trying to throw suspicion on you."

"That's a masterpiece of understatement. Suspicion? They were trying to nail the theft on me. But, why? Why? Did he know that I needed—"

"Go on. Why the gasp?"

"I had a perfectly crazy answer to my own question."

"And that is?"

"No, it is too improbable."

Had the same thought crossed her mind which had flashed through his with the speed of summer lightning?

Had Gene taken the box to sell to pay back a debt—and then suspicion on Fran? Why do it when she knew that Fran was trying to raise money for her? Whoever took the box apparently lit out with the valuable painting—hold on, though, the theft of the box and the Constable could have been independent jobs. Was that a flash of intuition or plain hokum?

"Whatever develops remember that Gene Sargent doesn't know the first letter of the word 'loyalty.' She would sacrifice her best friend if it would serve her purpose." Natalie's reminder rang through his memory. Could it be true? Was Gene like that?

"Has my story thrown you into the silence? You don't believe I took that box, do you?"

"Of course not, darling." He cleared his voice of gruffness. If he didn't watch out he'd be kissing her lovely unsteady mouth. "You're not in need of money, are you?"

"You as the trustee of Rebecca Harding's estate are better qualified to answer than I."

"Stop fencing. Let's get down to facts. It wasn't so long ago you asked me to advance a thousand dollars with which to pay a bill. Remember?"

"I remember that you refused to give it to me."

"That's right. Now you have the money, haven't you?"

"What do you mean? You are not implying that I sold that enamel box, are you?" He caught her bare arm and drew her back to the seat.

"Sit down again, Franny, let's thresh out this thing. I know you didn't sell the enamel box, but I suspect you have sold a thousand dollars' worth of bonds. Come across."

"If I did—I'm not saying I did it is none of your business, they were not part of the trust, they were mine."

"Were mine." Then you have sold them. Are you financing Gene's double-crosser, Blake Sinclair?"

"Financing Blake?" Unless she was a superb actress her incredulous voice proved that his question was not the solution. "Blake is not a double crosser and I don't intend to sit here another minute to hear my oldest friend maligned."

"Wait. Have you told the truth?" He caught his hand, bent his head the better to see her eyes in the dim light.

"Don't kiss me and then say Ken sent it," she flared. He laughed.

"In case you are interested, the next time I kiss you won't be for your brother, Miss Phillips. Now you may go."

She went on the run.

Why had he made the break of accusing Sinclair? That was a sure-fire way of sending her straight into the arms of her "oldest friend." He followed her slowly, followed the silver glint of her blue-and-green frock.

She was dancing with Sinclair when he reached the drawing room. He didn't like the way she was smiling up at her partner, as if he were the one man of importance in her life.

"How about a little stepping for the sake of old times, Myles?" Matilde Sargent suggested, She slipped a bare arm about his neck. "Why miss this divine music?"

He let her sentimental "for the sake of old times" pass without comment. There had never been "old times" between them. No one knew better than she that he had refused to be drawn into her net. As they danced they passed Natalie talking and laughing with her ex-husband.

"Looks as if that was on again," Matilde commented bitterly, "I'll bet he still loves her."

"Does he? I wouldn't know." Morrison Grove tapped his shoulder.

"Your hostess wants you, Major. Sorry to substitute a flightwad for a Congressional Medal man, Matilde, but that's the way it's got to be, when Miss Tassie speaks."

"Who told you I called you—They danced away before Myles heard the completion of the honeyed sentence. Was Matilde making a bid for Morrie now that Hal was cooling? Life in Washington would be her meat.

"There is more than one woman in this room, Myles," Tassie Trent suggested dryly when he reached her.

"You said something then, Miss Tassie. May I have the pleasure?"

Before Miss Tassie could reply Myles swept her into the "How Lucky You Are" waltz.

"You dance like a dream," he declared after they had circled the room. "Like it, don't you?"

"Love it. Always have. Always will. Those women seated against the wall with "Too old to dance' plastered all over them give me a pain in the neck, but so many things give me a pain in the neck, now, Myles."

"You may be mistaken as to their expression, Miss Tassie. Could be it means, 'I wish I'd be invited to dance.' I'll ask one of them later. I bet I'll prove I'm right." He stopped at the door and led her to the terrace.

"Sit here, we'll have the place to ourselves, everyone is inside dancing." He drew a chair near the one into which she sank with an exhausted sigh.

"You're tired, it isn't like you to be low in mind, Miss Tassie." Not smiling at that failure of hers.—

"I am troubled. When I saw Nat smiling at that faithless ex of hers.—"

"If Nat was smiling why were you worried? Looks to me as if she didn't care a rap."

"I'm afraid she'll take him back."

"Take him back? Your imagination has seized the bit in its teeth and is running away with you."

"Maybe that isn't the real trouble. When Matilde put her arm around your neck a little ripple of sound ran round the room, and I know that the old story that you had broken up Ben Sargent's home had reared its snaky head."

"You know there was not a word of truth in that, Miss Tassie."

"Of course I know, I know that Hal Andrews was the man. Now I've spoiled your evening by conjuring up that ghost."

"Don't worry, there isn't enough of that left to fill a memory to make even an emaciated ghost. Is that all you have on your mind? If not, speak now and forever after hold your peace."

"Thank God, you can joke about it, I can't. I saw Gene Sargent hanging on your arm when you first came in, you were looking down at her as if she were a little bit of heaven."

"You're getting mixed up with a song, Miss Tassie."

"I'm not getting mixed up with a song, that expresses the way you looked, anyone seeing you would have thought you'd gone off the deep end about her. I can't take it."

His shout of laughter gave pause to a couple strolling across the terrace. They stopped for a startled instant, then hand in hand ran down the steps to the garden.

"Now, we've discovered the cause of your descent into Avernus, Miss Tassie, you're jealous. You know you've been a one-man-her one girl and—"

"Don't try to be funny," she snapped. "I'm not jealous, you flatter yourself, but I love you and Nat as I would the children I never had." The vibrato was back in her voice. "If you marry either of those Sargent creatures I'll die, I'll just die, I want you to be happy, Myles."

REALLY LUCKY

Dixie, Nov. 20 — (CP) When Pauline Hanson grows up her parents probably won't let her forget how lucky she was as a 2-year-old baby. Pauline fell out of her father's car as it was travelling 40 miles an hour. She scraped by that one all right. Then moments later she had another close call when a following auto barely missed her as she lay on the road. She suffered a dislocated shoulder.

AMERICAN TROOPS REACH MANCHURIAN BORDER

Boy, 15, Reports His Father Fatally Shoots Woman

Slaying Follows Argument In Trailer Near St. Thomas

St. Thomas, Nov. 21 (CP) — A shaken 15-year-old youth reported to police early today that his father had fatally shot Mrs. Ann Evans during an argument a few hours before and had asked the boy to report the killing.

Police held Lawrence Jones, 35, for questioning after they found the body of the 51-year-old woman, his comm-law wife, on a bed in the cabin trailer in which they were living on a farm at Yarmouth Centre, three miles east of here.

Shot in Chest

Lawrence Jones, Jr., told Sgt. Harry McCart his father first had fired a shot through the roof of the trailer. Then he had loaded the single shot weapon and fired a second bullet into Mrs. Evans' chest as she sat near a card table from which they ate their meals.

Mrs. Hubert Topping of St. Thomas, a sister of the dead woman, said both Mrs. Evans and Jones were separated from their legal mates before they began living together. Four years ago, Mrs. Topping said Jones and Mrs. Evans had quarrelled repeatedly.

The blood-covered body, fully clad, was on a double bed in the trailer. Unwashed dishes were on the card-table.

Psychosomatics' Bodily Pains Due To Emotions

Houston, Tex., Nov. 21—AP— Ever feel that no one wants to give you anything?

Too bad. That's a sign of psychosomatic.

Psychosomatics, explains Dr. O. Spurgeon English, are persons who have bodily pains, one or more, that are directly caused by emotional disturbances.

The symptom of perplexity yesterday said that headaches and cardiac disturbances are among the common pains that usually develop from emotional disturbances.

Persons most subject to these diseases, he said, have the following attitudes:

No one wants to give me anything.

Life has not been good to me and I'll be darned if I'll enjoy it.

I wish I felt as good as other people.

Some people, he said, just have not any talent for living happily.

FLOOD LOSSES ALREADY NEAR 12 MILLION MARK

Continued Rain Aggravates Situation

San Francisco, Nov. 21—AP—Raging flood waters today swept through central California and western Nevada for the third consecutive day, causing uncounted millions of dollars in damage and leaving at least nine persons dead and thousands homeless.

Here is the situation in the stricken areas:

Nevada—The main section of Reno was covered with six to eight feet of water as the swirling Truckee River hit with crushing force last night. Plush hotels and gambling casinos were flooded. A three-block-wide torrent ripped through the heart of the "biggest little city in the world." There were two flood deaths.

California—The American River swelled over its banks at Sacramento, forcing 90 residents from their homes. Bear River smashed through levees at three places in Yuba County in the north. Other districts in northern California reported somewhat-improved flood conditions. California had seven deaths directly or indirectly due to the floods.

The weather bureau at San Francisco predicted "moderate to heavy rain" for the High Sierra Wednesday—the straight day of storms.

Reno reeled under the impact of the flood. Muddy water raced through the business district in a stream three blocks wide, sweeping trees, benches, cars in its rage.

The Riverside Hotel had five feet of water on its main floor. The Mapes Hotel reported six feet of water in its lobby. Merchants reported thousands of dollars damage to Christmas merchandise stored in flooded basements.

United Air Lines scheduled a special plane to evacuate stranded passengers. It was cancelled because only two wanted to leave.

In Nevada the National Guard was called out in arms to prevent looting and keep residents from panicking.

Bridges Under Water

All of the city's eight bridges across the Truckee were completely under water.

Two persons died as a result of the Reno flood. An unidentified man died of a heart attack while attempting to save stock in the basement of a department store. Another unidentified suicide by jumping into the flood waters.

The Nevada-California flood crisis was the Sutter-Yuba County area. Dikes along the flooding Bear river were sending streams of water into several towns.

Current Too Strong

In the Marigold district scores of persons were stranded on gold dredging piles along the river. They were reported to be safe, but the current was too strong for boats to maintain rescue operations.

Communist Party Leadership Shift Hinted in Italy With Togliatti Out of Hospital

By JAMES M. LONG

Rome, Nov. 21 (AP) — Palmiro Togliatti, mild-mannered chief of the biggest communist party outside the iron curtain, is out of hospital for the third time in two years.

But it is still an open question this time whether he will be able to take back active control of the party and continue his "go easy" program of attempting to oust democracy by sheer weight of numbers.

If he does not, Italy may expect an explosive change in communist action under his probable successor—the commander of a tightly - organized underground army.

Moscow likely already has decided which way it will be.

The rotund, bespectacled, 57-year-old Togliatti underwent an excision of the brain in an automobile accident last summer. He recovered quickly, but at the end of October he was back in a private mental hospital in emergency condition.

Communist guards stood watch at the doors. Two of Italy's best physicians were called in. They operated to remove a clot of blood pressing on his brain.

In a few weeks he was able to return home but doctors said it might be some time before he could be active.

Non-communist political comment implied strongly that he might be out for good — that Moscow might take this opportunity to switch party control.

If Togliatti has fallen from favor of the Kremlin, he had a long way to fall.

Through Stalin's School

During the war, he went through Stalin's own school for communist leaders in Moscow and was handpicked to rally into the red camp. In 1947 he was named a permanent member of the cominform. In 1948, when he was shot four times in an assassination attempt by a Sicilian student, Stalin himself was said to have sent a furious telegram to the Italian communist party for not protecting him.

If all that has changed it is probably because Togliatti insisted upon following his own policy instead of Moscow's in Italy, and failed to deliver the goods.

Moscow prefers a compact, secret-cell organization geared to hard, sudden blows. Togliatti's party was out in the open, with 2,500,000 claimed members, but it failed to win the majority.

Moscow's No. 2 man in Italy is Pietro Secchia, Milanese, more important, commander of the highly-secret communist underground army in Italy.

Not much is known about this army—except that it's here, armed with hidden guns and ammunition caches saved since the war, and tightly organized in cells secret even within the party itself.

NEPALESE TROOPS BRINGING WAR TO QUICK FINISH

Reach Indian Border South of Birganj

New Delhi, Nov. 21 (AP)—Nepalese government troops, trying to bring the country's rebellion to a quick finish, have reached the Indian border five miles south of Birganj, reports reaching here said today.

Birgan, key southern city where rebel Nepal Congress Party followers had set up a provisional government, fell to government forces yesterday. A Nepalese embassy communique said only one village out from remains in rebel hands, and government troops are advancing on it.

Increased insurgent activity was reported however, in the eastern sector, where the rebels claim control of 150 square miles.

Official reports earlier said 1,000 government troops had been dispatched to this sector, but so far no clash has been reported.

Rebel leader M. P. Koirala, meanwhile, issued a statement from Patna, capital of Bihar State, claiming that the fall of Birgan had only shifted the scene of operations.

"The open struggle against the oligarchy of Nepal will continue," Koirala declared, "until fully-democratic government is established confirmed in four or five administrative centres. . . . In the rest of Nepal the people, even the government forces and police, are in complete sympathy with the insurgents."

The rebellion of the Nepalese Congress party, which broke out Nov. 11, was touched off by the exile of Liberal-minded King Tribhuvana, who fled to India after a palace revolution engineered by Nepal's ruling prime minister.

The refugee king's three-year-old grandson now sits on the throne.

Says Husband Had Her Use Newspapers Instead of Towels

St. Louis, Nov. 21 — (AP)—A socially prominent woman filed suit for divorce yesterday, charging her wealthy husband insisted that she use old copies of local functions and made her use old newspapers instead of towels in the kitchen.

Mrs. Frances Valle Reyburn Lee, 32, also said her husband of less than a year made her save the breakfast dishwater and that lunch and dinner dishes could be washed in it.

The husband is James Martin Nelson, who in 1946 received a one-sixth share of his father's $700,000 estate.

London, Ont., Nov. 21 —(CP)— A young London father's battle to make a telephone call for help before he was overcome by gas in his home early today saved the lives of himself, his wife, and three small children.

Roy Pollard managed to call the fire department who saved all five.

Blast Endangers Gang of Workers Far Underground

Detroit, Nov. 21 (AP)—An explosion endangered a gang of workmen 95 feet underground in an east-side water conduit last night.

Six men were injured and four companions escaped harm while making a risky flight to safety.

An accumulation of marsh gas, ignited by a spark, was believed the cause.

Foreman, Jack Agnew, 26, was seriously burned. All the injured men and four others who were underground made their way to safety.

Agnew, an engineer, is a city water board inspector. Yesterday was his 26th birthday. At his hospital bedside his wife, Sheva, collapsed. She was kept in the hospital overnight.

Police said they believed an air-hammer struck a spark off a rock and caused the blast.

Firemen fought the blaze for nearly one hour to bring it under control.

The men were working inside a metal-enclosed pneumatic tunnel, 15 feet high and 17 feet long.

Agnew had just completed an inspection of the area about 2:20 p.m. Workers said he reported "considerable" gas in the area. The men were digging muck.

Suddenly the blast bowled them over and seared the six men nearest to it.

Agnew's clothing caught fire. Some of the men grabbed sawdust bags and knocked out the flames.

Police Piece Together New Evidence in Sullivan Murder

Ottawa, Nov. 21 — (CP)—Police bottle found in suburb-haired Mrs. Sullivan's belongings and which has since been examined at police laboratories here is being kept.

Police were called into the case late Saturday, eight or more hours after Mrs. Sullivan left a downtown hotel clerk for help to get her automobile out of mud.

Police indicated new witnesses were being sought some of them at east of town police — as they traced the movements of the chief solicitor of the Ontario Lands and Forest Department whose nude body was found early Saturday on the bedroom floor in a tower suite in the swank Chateau Laurier Hotel.

His 50-year-old Toronto society widow, Mrs. Marion Sullivan, was formally charged in police court yesterday with his murder and was remanded for a week and taken to Carleton county jail. Another remand will be sought to give police time to complete their investigation.

Probe Proceeding Favorably

Chief Inspector of Detectives A. B. Cavan said investigation of the death of Sullivan, who medical authorities said was killed by blows on the head with a blunt instrument, was "coming along favorably."

He said police were not certain if Sullivan was struck while lying in bed or while lying on the floor of the hotel suite bedroom.

"We have a number of witnesses to interview and we can't immediately locate some of them because they are out of town."

Inspector Cavan refused to discuss what evidence police already have amassed. However, previously police Inspector Borden Hobbs said an empty ginger

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Nov. 21 (CP)—Synopsis: Though temperatures further sharply on Monday they are now near normal. Most of Ontario is covered with cloud and skies will clear in Southwestern Ontario late this afternoon.

A new storm centre, much weaker than the last is last west of Lake Superior and will bring cloud and snowflurries to northern and central Ontario tonight, with clearing skies in most of the province Wednesday.

Nationalist China Expected To Lay Charge Reds Dominate Peiping Communist Regime

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 21 — (AP) — Nationalist China is expected today to spell out her charges that the Russians completely dominate the Peiping communist regime and are trying to stamp out China's ancient culture and civilization.

T. F. Tsiang, chief Nationalist delegate, is prepared to present a new batch of evidence to the United Nations to support the government's accusation that the Russians engineered the Chinese Civil War.

The General Assembly's political Committee today began consideration of the complaint. Tsiang has proposed that an inquiry commission be formed to investigate the charges and report back to the 1951 Assembly.

The basis for the Nationalist case is Tsiang's accusation that the Russians boosted Mao Tse-Tung's communists to power in violation of Chinese-Russian Treaty provisions and the U. N. Charter and now have flooded China with Soviet technicians.

When Tsiang first made his accusations last year, Russian-bloc delegates walked out of Nationalism in the debate. Since then the Russians have fought in various UN organs to have the Nationalists ousted and their places given to the Chinese communists. The Assembly still faces the task of making a final decision on Chinese representation.

The Assembly yesterday rejected a Soviet proposal that all UN agencies operating in the development of Secretary - General Trygve Lie's 27-nation peace program. One of those conditions was Chinese communist representation in the U.N.

A nine-power resolution calling for a special U. N. session on the development of Lie's plan was approved, 51 to 5, with Nationalist China abstaining. The Soviet bloc cast the negative vote. Canada is a sponsor.

At the heart of Lie's program is a proposal that special UN meetings be held periodically, attended by high-level officials, work through the years for an easing of world tensions.

Students Asked To Join Defence Research Board

London, Ont., Nov. 21—CP—High-ranking University of Western Ontario students in applied and natural sciences have been invited to join the defence research board.

G. S. Wright, of the defence board, said here Monday the board is seeking 150 scientists to meet steppedup activity in the defence department.

As an inducement, Mr. Wright said, the board will offer financial assistance to a limited number, of students who are completing their university course this year.

Assistance will be channelled into fields where there is difficulty in recruiting, he added. The search is being carried out in all universities throughout Canada.

Students who qualify will be considered as employed by the board from the date their applications are accepted, and will be expected to remain with the board four years, Mr. Wright said.

Fire Destroys Small Cottage, Six Are Saved

Hamilton, Nov. 21 (CP) — An 82-year-old woman and a family of two were saved from possible death when flames swept through a double frame cottage early today. Starting in the home of E. E. Dobrosky, the flames threatened adjacent homes whose residents had to flee to the chilly streets in night attire.

Mrs. Martha Johnston and three Dobrosky children were safely escorted from the double cottage, which the Dobroskys were fully taking refuge with neighbors and Mrs. Johnston being taken to the Salvation Army Home for the Aged.

Firemen fought the flames for almost two hours. The interior of the Dobrosky home was gutted.

Mr. and Mrs. Dobrosky managed to get their three children to safety and then ran in to arouse the aged Mrs. Johnston in the adjoining cottage.

Progress to Reunion of C. of E., Various Free Churches Seen Slow

London, Nov. 21—(Reuters)—A committee of churchmen, today gave little hope for early success in reuniting the Church of England and other Protestant churches.

The committee, which has been studying the problem for 2½ years, added however "We rejoice in the removal of many misunderstandings and in the large measure of agreement that has been reached."

The report now goes to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the various free churches for consideration.

The carefully-worded 50-page document—which abounds in such phrases as "might be considered"—made it evident that progress towards reunion will be slow.

The most crucial and complex difficulty was that which has arisen over the centuries over the Church and the Ministry, and especially over the special position of bishops in the Church of England.

The report discussed the possibilities of the free churches appointing bishops in some form of the Anglican system.

The practice in some lay churches of accepting women into the ministry and of lay celebration of the Holy Communion aroused from the Anglican point of view, "gravely complicate and perhaps prevent intercelebration of ministries and the establishment of intercommunion."

War Can Make Woman Feel Younger And She Can Come Away Spoiled

By BARBARA BRINES

With U.S. Troops in Korea, Nov. 21 (AP) —A war can make a woman feel 10 to 12 years younger. And she can come away feeling pleasantly spoiled.

A woman is an oddity — and apparently a pleasant one — to the foot soldier going up to the front. She may look like a potato sack in her fatigue suit, but if she wears bright lipstick and a big smile the wolf calls and whistles from 18 and 20-year-old men will make her feel like a real-life pin-up girl.

And it doesn't hurt her vanity—even if she should have to do five miles around slop to keep away from colonels with glints in their eyes.

But there is another side of it, too, instead of making her feel 10 years younger, war can make her feel 50 years older.

She rides in a jeep slithering at five miles an hour through a sea of mud-churned ice. She is shelled by both sides by infantrymen. She has to dig her own foxhole by the way their backs are bent.

As they plod along through the mud, some are bent more than others, depending on the burden they carry.

She is jounced riding in the jeep, while they slog along on foot. She hunches her shoulders and pulls down her helmet, not daring to look them square in the face.

CHRIST CHURCH LAYMEN CONDUCT SERVICE

Once each year the laymen of Christ Church conduct the evening service. November 19th was Laymen's Sunday. Arthur Simpson sang "Evensong", Roy Best said the state prayers; Oliver Owen read the 1st lesson, "Chris" Leggat the second.

The sermon was delivered by R. F. Micklestone, layreader from St. Peter's Church, Brockville. The rector, J. D. Creegan, announced the absolution and the benediction.

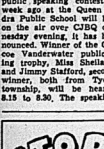
Sidesmen were the Wardens, Frank Greegan, and Fred Beebee, assisted by A. Swain, and Albert Holland. Captain of the sidesmen was Cecil Cherry.

A large congregation was present for this, the laymen's special service.

ONLY FEW CLOTHES DAMAGED IN BLAZE

Firemen were called at noon today to 77 Cleveland Street, the residence of T. D. Barriage where a fire was reported in a clothes closet. Origin of the blaze was not reported by firemen but little damage resulted with the extinction of a few clothes being burned.

SAFECRACKERS UNABLE TO OPEN SAFE



Would-be safe crackers were unsuccessful in their attempt over the weekend to smash open the safe at the City Cleanem on Moira Street. The proprietor of the cleaning establishment reported that an entrance to the building had been gained by breaking a window. The combination of the safe could not be found knocked off the stfong box, but apparently the intruders had not been successful in opening the safe.

BOGUS BILLS SEEN IN RURAL CENTRES

Bogus ten dollar bills are beginning to make their appearance in the rural centres in the Bay of Quinte district with at least two reports having been received by police of such bills having been passed. The last report was of a counterfeit "ten spot" having been passed at Foxboro.

PRESENTATION MADE TO CHOIR MEMBERS

At the conclusion of the morning service in the Victoria Ave. Baptist Church on Sunday the choir met to honor Russell Soule who is now stationed at Petawawa in the Royal Dragoon Brigade. The presentation was made on behalf of the choir by Miss Marjorie Hales with Russell replying graciously expressing his appreciation to the choir members for their thoughtfulness and kindly gesture.

160 - 170 Makers Will Show Cheese At Dairy Exhibit

Entries from between 160 and 170 cheese makers from three provinces are expected to be on hand when the British Empire Dairy Show opens Dec. 6 and 7 at the local city hall. Close to 300 cheese are expected to be on exhibition.

After being shunted around from pillar to post during recent years, the Dairy Show this year is returning to its original location at the city hall. It will be the first time in seven years that the cheese show will be held at the city hall market room.

Honorary president of the show Mr. J. C. Irwin is particularly happy that the show will be held this year at the city hall. He says that the city hall lends itself admirably as a location, it being closer to the cheese makers than general public can conveniently bring in the cheese on exhibition. "Getting people interested in cheese is a sure way of increasing consumption," he says.

As in other years the bulk of the cheese entries will be from makers in Ontario, but as in previous years heavy entries are expected from Quebec as well as a number from Manitoba. Already over a hundred entries have been received.

Sessions In Hotel Quinte

The cheese show is being held in conjunction with the Central Ontario Cheese Board Convention, sessions of which will be held at the Hotel Quinte, with addresses by prominent men in the dairy industry, as well as by representatives of both provincial and Federal dairy branches. President of the association is Thomas Heath, makers at Wilton cheese factory, who was named reserve grand champion butter maker in dairy of cheese at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto.

Presentation of prizes and trophies will take place at the Wednesday evening session of the convention when the election of officers will also take place.

Concluding the convention will be the annual Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association banquet to be held Thursday evening, Dec. 7 at Tobe's County Gardens. Guest speaker for the evening will be Rt. Hon. Sir Francis M. Forde, Australian High Commissioner to Canada. Professional entertainers under Duncan R. Cowan, Toronto, will be on hand to entertain the guests.

Young People Of Bridge Street Church Meet

Games, directed by Miss Lorella McDougal, got the Monday night meeting off to a jovial start. Miss Betty Jose, led a sing-song of well-known hymns which was enjoyed by all.

The convener, Miss Nel Morley then introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Don Williams, who gave a resume of his trip to the west coast last summer. Mr. Williams showed pictures of Banff and described the beauty of Lake Louise, and the magnificent Alpine views in the park area.

A vote of thanks for his excellent talk was tendered Mr. Williams.

The Devotion by the convener closed the meeting.

Refreshments were served by Miss Lenore West and the evening closed with "taps".

Inspector of Libraries Asks For Greater Financial Support For Public Library in City

An appeal for additional financial support by the municipality for the Corby Public Library was made before city council Monday evening by Mr. Angus Mowatt, inspector of libraries for Ontario and former librarian at Belleville.

"The public library is one of the important sinews of our democratic way of life," Mr. Mowatt said as he asked for a higher municipal grant for library support. "It is the greatest weapon we have for our way of life."

He said a good library represented an education for its members and termed education as more than schooling. "Education," he said, "is the result of the contact of minds with those of others. Adult education is the job of the library."

Since 1946 the Provincial government has made available generous grants for libraries which earned those grants," Provincial grants totalling $8,000 approved by the library inspector are governed mainly by the amount of municipal support.

Statesman Grant Not Enough

With today's rating stats the customary 50 cents per capita grant for municipalities was no longer any good in running library according to Mr. Mowatt. Today the minimum was 80 cents and up to $1 per capita. In this respect Belleville had not kept up with the rest of the province. The speaker said that the present city library building was outmoded. The annual book budget at Belleville at $2,900 was too low with the expenditure by comparable cities being roughly $5,000 - $7,000. Also salaries of staff members at Belleville were from $400 to $800 below the average and more staff was needed.

Depends on Council

"To sum up," Mr. Mowatt concluded, "it is all a matter of finance and financing of the library depends on council. No library staff is better than the finance that is given it, and only the library board is able to provide it".

Mr. Mowatt suggested that a special committee from the library board and the council meet to discuss the matter of library finances.

Members agreed that the Corby Library was not in keeping with other services in the city and felt certain that council would do something to increase their annual grant.

All members of the library board were in attendance at session in a body with the board chairman Dr. J. Russell Scott introducing Mr. Mowatt to councillors.

$53,000 Debenture Issue Approved for Hospital Bd. But Pared From What Asked

Approval of a debenture issue of $53,000 for capital expenditure and purchase of certain equipment at the Belleville General Hospital was given by members of city council at Monday evening's meeting after the request from the Hospital Board of Governors had been pared by several thousand dollars.

The money to be provided by the debenture issue will re-imburse the board for money taken out of current revenue for capital expense and will also cover contracts entered into, also wiring for the X-ray department, architect's fees and approximately $4,000 for providing a storeroom from the old laundry.

The original request from the Hospital Board was for a sum of $59,000 but this included certain work which is planned at the hospital but not yet let by contract had been let. The $4,000 included in the council-approved debenture issue will coincide with contract until the money is required. The by-law was given two readings and forwarded to the municipal board for approval.

Objects to Full Amount

Alderman Haig objected to providing the full amount of $59,000 as requested by the hospital board, noting that before council approved or projected work at the hospital it should be given information. He proposed that council deal only with "immediate emergencies."

This also was the feeling of Mayor Allin who said council at this time should but re-imburse the hospital for monies taken out of current revenues to pay for capital expenditures and for work contracts which were completed. He said council should have a tender price for proposed work at the hospital.

Projected Work Important

Alderman Lattimer wanted it clearly understood exactly what was projected at the hospital and suggested that some of the projected work at the hospital was also important.

To this Alderman Haig replied that he did not grudge the full amount asked did not mean council would not pass the amount later if they knew for sure that the contract prices were required for capital expenses at the hospital and stated that the city must improve its method of doing business with city organizations.

City auditor F. A. R. MacFadden was present at the meeting and at the request of Mayor Allin amended the hospital schedule listing the $59,000 debenture. The amended total of $53,000 will provide for immediate emergency capital and also for financing charges on the debenture.

Would Re-imburse Board

Funds from the debenture sale would provide $38,868.35 for reimbursing the board for monies taken out of current revenue for capital expenditures, $12,325.40 for completion of the laundry and purchase of X-ray equipment; $1,816 for X-ray wiring and architect's fees and roughly $4,000 for conversion of the store room.

As a note of information Mayor Allin observed that already this year a sum of $54,000.75 had been budgeted by council for the hospital, while the total debenture asked for the hospital was $262,000 plus the $53,000 approved by council Monday evening.

Kinsmen Hear Three Students From Albert

Living conditions and other matters pertaining to life in foreign lands were related to members of the Kinsmen Club at their regular bi-weekly dinner meeting held Monday evening. Speakers at the meeting were three young students at Albert College.

Rev. Dr. Bert Howard, principal of Albert College introduced the boys to club members, but before doing so spoke briefly on Internationalism; and the need for co-operation between nations.

Student speakers at the meeting included Ted Hermson, of Porta Platia, Dominican Republic a two year student at Albert; John Wong, of Kowloon, near Hong Kong in his first year at Albert, and Neal Burke, of Tolara, Peru, three years at Albert.

Also speaking at the meeting was Alderman William Argue who outlined the proposed health department on which residents will vote at the forthcoming municipal elections, and how such a department would increase the health services in the city.

President Lloyd Davis was in the chair with Kin Gardiff as song leader and Kin Ken Smith as fine collector.

IN MEMORIAM

REEVES — In loving memory of my beloved wife, Agnes Florence Reeves, who passed away November 21, 1946.

I miss you at a thousand turns
Along life's weary way.
For life is not the same to me
Since you were taken away.
You left behind many aching hearts
That loved you dearly.
That never, never will never cease
Dear, dear.
Ever remembered by husband Cecil.
N31

REEVES — In loving memory of my dear mother, Agnes Florence Reeves, who passed away November 21, 1946.

Death leaves a heartache nothing can heal.
Love leaves a memory no one can steal.
And all through the years, be it many or few
Will be filled, dearest mother, with memories of you.
Lovingly remembered by daughter Ora.
N31

REEVES — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Agnes Florence (Taylor) Reeves, who passed away November 21st, 1946.

No one knows how much I miss you.
No one knows the bitter pain
I have suffered, since I lost you
And the grief I must endure.
Oh my heart grows empty longer,
Sweetly tender, fond and true.
There is one I will remember,
I do not think of you.
Too dearly loved to ever be forgotten, Grace, Speedy, Gordon and Buddy.
N31

REEVES — In loving memory of a dear mother, Agnes Florence Reeves, who passed away November 21st, 1946.

I often sit and think of you
When I am alone.
For memory is the only friend
That hath can call its own;
Like yon on the withered oak,
The leaves of memory cling.
My love fondest will still keep green
And never fade away.
Lovingly remembered. Betty.
N31

REEVES — In loving memory of my dear mother, Agnes Florence Reeves, who passed away November 21st, 1946.

Time takes us from you out of sight,
But never out of mind.
They are cherished in the hearts
Of those they leave behind.
Loving and kind in her ways,
Upright and just to the end of her days.
Sincere and true in heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she left behind.
Ever remembered by son, George.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 21 (CP) — Industrials were mixed as the session progressed on the Toronto Stock Exchange today.

Following yesterday's strong gains they opened mixed, eased a little in forenoon dealings and then turned mixed again in quiet trading. Base golds were narrow and steels, textiles and manufacturing companies showed a majority of gains in the groups.

Base metals turned lower after advancing to new high ground yesterday. East Sullivan, Falconbridge, Noranda, Quemont and Waite Amulet showed small losses ranging to 25 cents.

Golds drifted lower. McIntyre led the senior group down, losing 3-8. Junior producers slipped pennies in very narrow and quiet trading.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 21—CP—Trade was dull on plain quality supply with prices steady to a shade lower at the Ontario Stockyards today. Receipts: cattle, 820; calves, 180; hogs, 360; sheep and lambs, 180. Left from yesterday 2,200 cattle.

Common to medium light steers and heifers brought $18-$25; good cows $18.50-$21; canners and cutters $15-16.50; good bulls $23 $24; medium to good fed yearlings $25-29; common to medium stockers $20-$25.

Calves were steady at $21-$23 for choice vealers; common to medium $22-$29.

Hog prices were not established.

Lambs were firm at $28-$28.50 for good ewes and wethers; bucks $1 discount; good light sheep $14-16; culls down to $7.

BUFFALO LIVESTOCK

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 21. (AP)—Cattle 150; steady; holstein cows $18-$19; good dairy type heifers for slaughter $21-$23; good weighty sausage bulls $23-$25.

Calves 100; good and choice handyweight calves $26-$30; medium to good $32-$36.

Hogs 100; good and choice hogs $17-$18.50; good sows $14-$16.

Sheep and lambs 100; market not established.

PRODUCE MARKET

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Produce prices quoted on the spot market here this morning.

Churning cream: No. 1 truck price, 57 cents; delivered, 60 cents.

Creamery prints: First grade, 59 cents.

Supplies were ample at the egg market today with large and medium grades firm and pullets weak. Country shippers quoted graded eggs, cases free: Grade A large, 56-57; A medium, 52-53; A pullet, 47-48; Grade B, 44; Grade C, 29-30. Wholesale to retail: Grade A large, 60; A medium, 56; A pullet, 51-52; Grade B, 48-49; Grade C, 33-36.

Butter solids: First grade 57½ cents, second grade, (nominal) 54½ cents.

Dept. Declines To Approve Salary Boost

The Department of Municipal Affairs in Toronto failed to give their stamp of approval to the request of local city council members for a $200 increase in their annual pay. Council had passed a by-law bringing councillors pay up to $500 per year and this was passed on to the department for approval.

Last night at city council a communication from the deputy minister of the department was read stating that the increase in pay asked by members of council was not in keeping with pay for councillors in other municipalities of comparable size.

Also the letter indicated that the proposed deduction of $5 for each council meeting missed by a councilman was out of line with the salary and asked that the citizen pay section be reconsidered.

Referring to the letter Alderman Haig said the attitude taken by the department was unfair as some consideration should be given to aldermen for the many hours they spend on committee work. He suggested that council repass the by-law and send it back to the department.

It was agreed by councillors that the matter would be again taken up at the next meeting.

Mackenzie Bowell Thanks Mayor, Council for Program

Expression of appreciation to Mayor H. J. Allin and members of the city council for the planning of the program in connection with the recent unveiling of the monument to Sir Mackenzie Bowell, has been received in a letter from Mr. Mackenzie Bowell in Vancouver, grandson of the former Canadian prime minister.

"Since returning home I have had a better chance to look back upon the way the reception was staged by your good self and your council," wrote Mr. Bowell. "I thought it was one of the best managed affairs of its kind I ever attended—everything went off without a hitch. Having some experience in staging affairs of this nature I wish sincerely to compliment yourself, your council and the local Chamber of Commerce."

"Speaking for all the relatives concerned and myself, I wish to express appreciation for the invitation extended to us by the city of Belleville and our heartfelt thanks, also our deep regret for the passing of Mr. Mikel who could not be there to see his dream realized."

Madoc Shorthorn Grand Champion

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Lady Minnos 3rd, owned by John Trotter and Son of Madoc, Ont., today was judged grand champion female and all-purpose shorthorn at the Royal Winter Fair.

Reserve champion female was Lady Mollie Monica 2nd, owned by A.D. McGibbon and Son, of Lachute Mills, Que.

Business Area in Parkwood Heights Defined by Council

A building by-law restricting commercial development in the Parkwood Heights area was formally passed by members of city council at their regular meeting Monday evening. Three readings were given the by-law. It to be forwarded to the Municipal Board for approval.

Alderman Angus Duffy, as chairman of the special committee set up to bring in the building restriction by-law for Parkwood Heights said the by-law as presented represented a compromise between the two parties concerned. These were homeowners in the area affected, and Mr. Bert Docter, landowner in the proposed commercial area.

Speaking to the by-law Alderman Duffy noted that discussion regarding the proposed commercial area in Parkwood Heights had been underway since shortly after the development of the area. He said that a development plan had been drawn up by Mr. Docter as developer of the sub-division and this had been approved by the Municipal Board. However, homeowners in the area had said they had been misled of the proposed commercial district when they purchased their homes.

Suggest Passing By-law

He assured there would be nothing to be gained by further delay and suggested the by-law be passed by council and forwarded to the Municipal Board for approval. If there was objection from either side a public hearing on the matter would be held by the municipal board in the city.

Kenneth Ross of the law firm Robb, Ross and Case, as solicitor for the interested homeowners, spoke briefly to council. All his clients wanted, he assured, was some restriction on commercial development in Parkwood Heights. They wanted commercial buildings back a distance of at least 100 feet from the street instead of 50 feet as outlined in the by-law.

He stressed that action on the matter should be taken as soon as possible as only a "hodge podge" would result if nothing was done.

Mr. J. T. Ransom, Ontario Land Surveyor, and member of the local planning board, pointed out that if council made restrictions as to the distance of the building line from the street, the matter of compensation to the owner for the restricted land should be considered.

Thought Clause Wrong

He also referred to a clause in the by-law which stated no accessory building such as a garage could be constructed within three feet of the property line. "This," he said, "was a mistake because if a garage was built within three feet of the line, that three feet became useless to that owner. It would be much better for the owner, if he was to protect his building, to build right up to the line."

Mr. Ransom stressed that council should provide for a considerable sum toward carrying out of town planning as suggested by the planning board. He added that the planning board were working on a scheme for commercial development in Parkwood Heights, which would prove of much greater benefit than the proposed by-law and suggested the passing of the by-law be delayed until this plan could be finalized.

Council decided, however, to take action on the matter and after approving of an amendment presented by Alderman Wm. Argue which eliminated the clause with respect to the three-foot building line, the by-law was given its three readings.

Parent Education Group Meets

The first meeting of the Parent Education group of Queen Mary-Prince Charles Schools was held at Queen Mary School last Thursday evening.

The meeting was opened by Mrs. Hudgins who introduced Mrs. Hayman who in turn read a letter telling of the work the group intended to do.

Mrs. Franklin introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Beach, of Albert College, who spoke on the first four chapters of "The Mature Mind", by H. A. Overstreet, which was enjoyed by all.

The meeting ended with a discussion period regarding the book read.

Tentative Plans For New School Are Discussed

Tentative plans for the construction of a new school in the Avondale district immediately to the west of the city were discussed Monday evening at the regular monthly meeting of the Avondale Parents' Association.

The needs of a new school were outlined by Mr. James Musgrove and Mr. Dorland Houston while W. A. Watson, local architect, showed school plans, which might be adopted for the school section. Mr. Watson was introduced by Mr. Musgrove, while Ralph Knowlton, president of the Association, presided over the meeting.

Three guests from the Prince of Wales Home and School Association were present at the meeting.

Mrs. Arthur Daniels and Mrs. Parks favored with a vocal duet with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Kenneth Bird and after a sing song refreshments were served to conclude the evening.

POLICE COURT

Pleading guilty to being in charge of a motor vehicle while intoxicated, three local residents were sentenced to seven days in the county jail by Magistrate T. W. Wills in city magistrate's court this morning.

There was a lengthy docket presented before the magistrate, including nine cases under the C.C.A., two of them being second offences. Two other charges of being in possession of liquor were laid over for a later court.

One motorist was charged with making unnecessary noise by driving without a muffler and was assessed $5 and costs, while another driver convicted of careless driving paid $28 fine and costs.

Several speeders settled charges out of court paying fines ranging up to $15 and costs.

ONE OF THE GREAT MEN OF HISTORY

Honored and recognized as one of the great men of the age and of history is Winston Churchill, wartime leader of Britain in the most trying period in history. He received attended the momentous meeting when the new British Commons was used for the first time. The restoration of the House of Commons which was then opened served to bring to all the world notice of the honor which had been shown him in the naming of an arch in his honor. Mr. Churchill must have been very proud and thankful that he had been privileged to give his talents towards the defence of the free world in the days of the Second World War. No more fitting tribute to his service could have been made than this arch, the symbol of the liberty which the British Commons signifies to the world.

Recently in a BBC overseas program John Connell made reference to the arch which Mr. Churchill had given Britain and the Allied Powers and said "Winston Churchill is a living defiance of all the ordinary rules of human existence within the confines of history. He is one of history's immortals not because of what he has done and historical because of the superb record he has made of his achievements and his time. In this aspect of his fame — and it is only one aspect — he ranks alongside Thucydides or Caesar. In another aspect — as an impostor in the art of practical politics — he probably ranks alongside Alexander. In yet another aspect as the defender and unifier of his country in a time of peril, he ranks in British history beside the younger Pitt, in world history along with Bismarck or Abraham Lincoln. And today in his memoirs and achievements he strides a tremendous bridge between the present and the past, the living and the dead. This man, who ten years ago was doing deeds and uttering words which exalted and fortified the British nation and welded it into one in face of the greatest ordeal in its history, had worked and talked in the company of, as the equal of, the illustrious dead. He was, and is, living history."

CRYSTAL PALACE CENTENNIAL

Britain is planning a great national festival to be held next year marking the centennial of the Crystal Palace Exhibition. Plans are now being made for which people coming from many parts of the world.

The centennial celebration of 1951 will be a showroom of the present day greatness of Britain. The summer is to be given over to the event, which will reveal the quality and vitality of the British people in the arts and industry. In the words of His Majesty, every family in all parts of the country will share in the celebration.

Plans are already under way for the demonstration of the progress of industry and the arts. People in all walks of life will contribute to the success of the plan. Craftsmen in industry and people associated with the arts will have no small part to play in this demonstration of the vitality of Britain in the arts and industries.

AN OLD PRINCIPLE

Halifax streets are beginning to look more like those of the 1890's when they have as many taxis as the intervening period. They are lined with posts. It is true that they are glittering posts with gadgets at the top which glow a sinister red when the law is being broken. They are not the old fashioned kind with the rust hitching posts with a ring at the top through which the reins could be laced.

There are other differences, too. No one ever thinks now-a-days of tying a driving horse to a post. Nor is it assigned fashion as they stood at the posts, would rush out, snatch-a buffalo robe from a sleigh and toss it over the animal. Then they would retreat to their homes, warmed by their exertions, their indignation at someone else's neglect and their own sense of a good deed well done.

But Halifax may in time become exceptional if it disregards today's standees. By far the most shiver-provoking item of the winter has come in from Saskatchewan. There the city council is considering a new feature for their parking meters. Each is to be equipped electrically. The motorist drives up, sniffs the frosty air, looks at "Old Faithful" and decides in his mind whether he will keep the motor warm as long as the meter runs. It is a far cry from the horse-blanket or the buffalo robe, but the idea is the same. Just as it took time to de-frost Dobbin's knees and hips, so does it take time to warm up the automobile engine. Nowadays apparently time is too valuable to waste. Hence the parking meter car warmers, available at a price and a profit to the city. — Halifax Star-Mail.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Nov. 21, 1930

Some $1500 has been spent for playground equipment at the Ontario School for the Deaf. The most noticeable apparatus that money can buy graces the grounds and judging from the way it is used, the boys and girls are certainly training fingers for future fame. It is a physical fashion.

Election in Belleville are only ten days away and nominations but three days off and yet there is little indication whether there will be a large or small field of candidates. There has been a little talk of late; there is a general opinion that practically all of the present council will seek re-election to their time-honored offices.

30 YEARS AGO

Nov. 21, 1920

A reception service was held at Bridge Street Methodist Church Monday evening when 45 persons by profession of faith and by letters from churches in other places united with the local congregation. This is an exceptionally large number to be received into the church at one time. The service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Cleaver, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Bates, the Rev. W. F. A. Wilson and the Rev. Prof. Malin.

The Albert College students were entertained last evening at the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Hugh Walker, License Inspector for West Hastings, today handed to Mr. David Price, city treasurer, a cheque for the sum of $2,295, which is the city's share of the license fees for the half year.

The local committee governing the Boy Scout movement in Belleville elected the following officers at a recent meeting: — president, Chief Constable Ponton; vice president, A. Marsh; secretary treasurer, G. I. Sovereign.

Messrs. Charles Dolan and W. Wims went to Peterborough today where they will represent the Belleville Football Assistance Society in a debate with representatives of the Total Abstinence Society in that city.

The PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In the poorer and more congested residential districts near the down-town areas of cities, you will see on Sundays and holidays a phenomenon of the poor squeezed out in front of restaurants and quick lunches.

They bring in their best clothes, their off-hours clothes. In five, ten of even twenties, these cavies of neighborhood culture, wait, look and a queer impression of unanimity they are talking; they prepare to be in agreement. These assemblages of men are characteristic of the down-town scene on off days.

From them you might deduce that poor men, working men, are more gregarious than well-to-do men. Where are all the women? Have these men no homes, families?

The fact is that the well-to-do men, at this same moment, are doing the exact same thing. In the golf season, they are congregated at the golf clubs, the links and tens, they are assembled at select clubs, ski clubs, or gathered on stag weekends at cottages and cabins. Man is a gregarious animal whatever his economic state. And for the most part, his normal little gatherings are agreeable.

Anxious students of these disturbed times are inclined to fret about the apparent unanimity of labor and what seems to be, at very handily, the working class. They think that what it would be, they suppose, to carry a torch through these down-town streets of Belleville described of a Sunday and recruit a mighty mob.

It has happened, of course, in old, conscience-bitten, guilt-conscious societies where they had no ski hills, resort areas, highways, golf clubs, boat liveries, where the millionaires wear frowsy windbreakers too.

timber structures. They must have experience as administrators and will be employed in the social projects branch of the transport department.

Apart from the one reference, the commission made no further mention of the St. Lawrence waterway system. However, Transport Minister Chevrier and other members of the cabinet have hinted in public addresses that the country may consider ahead with the project herself if it continues to be stalled in the U. S. congress.

Mr. Chevrier and his deputy minister, J. C. Lessard, on a trip to the west coast, were not available for comment here.

Letter to the Editor

Some Comments On Civic Affairs

Editor
Ontario Intelligencer

Within the next three weeks we are to go to the polls to elect a new council for the year 1951. These weeks might profitably be spent in assessing our administrative performance during the past year, and hearing from our 1950 council a report of its stewardship. I trust that the necessary provision may be made in the well stocked budget for the opportunity provided for the aspirants for the 1951 council to tell us that they hope to do should they be elected. We have now emerged as a full-fledged, important city in our province, and must so conduct ourselves in the conduct of our administration of it.

Our council is that body which will tell you and me what amount of money they are going to extract from our pockets each year in the way of taxes. It decides this by anticipating in the way of budget the amount required for the year—then the mill rate is struck. If the total budget is exceeded, then of course we have to draw from the reserves of the following year, and the new council starts off with two strikes against it first having to make up the deficit and then to provide the money necessary for it to do its work. It doesn't need the wisdom of Solomon to understand that if we have a surplus we spend and spend a dollar and five cents where a dollar should have been spent. That, probably, is where we are going to finish up as at December 31st, 1950, and the new council is not to be congratulated.

As important functions of the council is the appointment to the various boards of the city, of the personnel. In each case each of these include the local Bd. of Health, the P.U.C. and in part also the Belleville General Hospital, which is of course municipally owned and operated, but is not financially responsible. None of these bds. is authorized to spend money other than as per the general allocation of their boards, the expenditure of which is carefully investigated only in the city council. The mayor, being the chief magistrate of the city is the member on all these boards as ex-officio member, and therefore has a pretty running knowledge of all that goes on, and should keep council fully informed on the matter of administration and finance. If these boards are getting out of hand, then immediate remedial measures should be taken. I suggest that these boards be seen taken during 1950, and the mayor and council are answerable.

We are being asked to express an opinion on December 4th, as the wheeling and dealing starts aside of $25,000 a year for-our health program. The question is ambiguous and misleading before election day. For at the present time we have a hospital bonhood of $12,000 a year is being spent for this purpose; recently the county council voted us $4,200 towards the salary of a full-time medical officer, thus making $16,800 in total; and leaving only $8,200 required to complete the $25,000. But the question before the people are being asked to vote on the further expenditure of $8,200 because the $16,800 will probably be spent anyway.

There is little doubt but that the ratepayers will approve the by-law, and vote overwhelmingly in its favor, for there will be no voting on it. But the real service is not more important than the administration of this same amount for some road machinery which may or may not be pressing. Priorities of values in their right perspective.

The public has waited long for a report on the new site for the General Hospital, and I realize that the board has been delayed ground in raising the question. However, it is some weeks since the auditor presented his report to council, and no amount of delay can change the figures in the report one iota. I understand it is the intention of the council to ask the ratepayers, before election day, which of course is right and proper.

There is much within our city administration that should, and must be improved. Has the city of Belleville is a grown-up city of something over 22,000 with an administration which controls the expenditure of something well over a million dollars annually, a million and a quarter in 1951. Surely it is time that it must be spent wisely, and not in vain sport.

It is my belief that many of our problems would be overcome were the city to have the head of administration from our present system of a mayor and 14 councillors to a city manager, with one representative from each ward in this city to act as his advisors when he needed them—call them aldermen, controllers, or anything you will. He should need a man well versed and experienced in municipal affairs, with a technical knowledge of the operation of every department of our civic life, and with the fullest authority to manage without interference. He might have to be prepared to bedepartment of our civic life, and with the most complete and thorough not necessarily so. But he must have the overall responsibility of controlling the expenditures and keeping within our budget. Such a valuable person probably worth his weight in gold.

I had hoped that this question could have been placed before the ratepayers in a more logical approach to the council was met with deathly silence, except that the mayor did volunteer the opinion the information that "the people" the turmoil of 1950 would settle when it was last voted on. Being of an enquiring state of mind I looked up the records, and found that on December 28th, 1936 the question of $50,000 was put to the vote, and voted on, with the following result: — in favor 1594; against 1,000. That was a year of leave of 30.

That was 14 years ago, when we were a smaller city than we are today, and I would suggest that this question whether necessary should be set in motion to give our citizens of today the opportunity to express themselves on the question.

While I am not advocating too much of a furore were I to suggest that if we are to continue our present form of administration, that the added wisdom of one or two more councillors would not be amiss. The male does not form the complete intelligentsia of our civilization and apart from the dignity and grace which the female sex accomplish this we must select those things to do, and devote our lives to which we are best fitted to do.

I have a friend whose early life was engrossed with interest in ward his failure because that father insisted upon the son becoming a lawyer, and not a mechanical engineer, to be an artist. He was always happiest when gnawing, sketching or painting. In later years he became famous as an artist, but it was the wanted to do that gave him the greatest joy.

The slowness of Western Europe in responding to the needs for defensive armament is causing concern among the democracies.

While observers generally are not expecting any attack from Eastern Europe at this juncture, the cold fact is that right now the Western Allies probably couldn't stop Russia if she suddenly decided to send her powerful armies through to the English Channel.

Potentially the Allies have the power for the job, but practically the defensive organization has been disappointing. This has been due in part to indecision in some quarters, and in part to lack of accord on the methods.

Sensational Proposal

One of the major problems has revolved about the sensational proposal to rearm Germany. Many and make her a part of the defensive force. The Allied military experts have definitely stated that, despite the original firm decision to keep Germany under wraps for a long time, her rearmament was essential to protection of the free world in Western Europe.

France and Britain finally agreed to this, with misgivings and reservations because of German militarism. Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of the West German republic also was willing. The government was prepared to co-operate. It seemed as though the whole matter had been solved.

The last weekend elections were held in the States of Hesse and Wuerttemberg-Baden, in the American Zone, and Socialists blew the lid off. The Socialists, who had been fiercely opposing German rearmament, support Western defence, won a smashing victory. They forburdened it as the result an endorsement of their opposition to rearmament and a protest against Adenauer's policies.

Terrific Beating

More than incidentally, the Socialists gave the Communists a terrific beating. Not one red candidate was elected, and the result is that the Communist reflection of Moscow's policies.

The net effect of this rejection of German rearmament isn't necessarily the final word. Though it's a definite setback to the proposal has powerful opposition among the Western powers undoubtedly will continue working on the project, and it will be surprising if there isn't some sort of German rearmament, with the exception of German units into the Allied forces.

THAT SCHOOLGIRL COMPLEXION

The complexion is only one of many features which contribute to personal appearance or good looks. Because of popular credulity it has been exaggerated out of all proportion to other factors of beauty. It is a toss-up whether the morons or the scientific thinkers (who achieve publicity in high school and college) are the better customers for cosmetic nostrums. There is little difference between the moron with a 12-year I. Q. and a sophomoron with a 16-year I. Q., so far as her make-up and behavior indicate.

Literal consumption of milk has been associated with a perfect complexion in art, literature and folklore for centuries. Sharp publicity agents achieved nationwide acclaim for the cosmetic comedy client with the story that she bathed in milk. And it is probably this association that accounts for the squandering of billions of dollars annually on "creams" and "skin foods" that purport to feed the face through the skin.

Holstein milk, the fact remains is the best source of a good complexion is the consumption of not less than three glassfuls (1½ pints) or still better a year. In fresh Grade A Raw milk daily, from tuberculin-tested herds of cows, of course.

Never buy Grade A milk from tuberculin-tested herd is the most nearly perfect food. Plain wheat, whole wheat bread and fresh butter ly ground (it must be fresh, for it quickly turns rancid) is the cereal from which nothing is removed in the grinding or milling, is the best cereal food. But what one is deficient in certain factors which are essential for good nutrition. For example, wheat germ (the germinating material) in wheat is what physiologists call "incomplete," that is it does not have all the aminoacids the human body requires. Any protein milk is "complete," lacking anything that the child or adult requires for building, growth or repair. The combination of the two most nearly perfect foods, whole wheat from which nothing has been removed or discarded and pure fresh milk not doctored, homogenized, fortified, pasteurized, pasteurized or otherwise tampered with, is the ideal health and beauty food.

Among the vitamins which pure fresh raw milk contains in abundance is riboflavin, formerly called vitamin B2 or vitamin G. It was this vitamin which Prof. E. V. McCollum, one of the world's foremost nutrition authorities, said tends to "preserve the characteristics of youth."

Fortunately any kind or form of milk is rich in riboflavin — whole, fresh milk evaporated milk, skim milk, dried milk, pasteurized milk, homogenized sour milk, cultured whole milk or cultured skim milk (Bulgarian, Acid-philus, Yoghurt or whatever type or flavor you prefer.) And so is almost any kind of cheese, in case you prefer to take the equivalent of one or more glassfuls of milk in the form of such milk derivative.

Milk is good to fatheads: In words of one syllable, each glassful (8 fluid ounces) of milk yields 160 calories. One who is up and moving about the house several hours a day would have to drink 12 glassfuls a day to prevent loss of weight on a diet of 1000 calories. One who wants to gain any weight. So you may be sure milk is not "fattening."

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Little Taste Sense in Throat

Several men in the office insist the taste sense is located in the throat and is the mechanism that controls swallowing. Please give me a correct answer. (E. R.)

Answer—Tip, borders and rear upper surfaces of the tongue are most sensitive taste regions, though lining of entire mouth, soft palate, pharynx, larynx (voice box) and even trachea (wind pipe) have many taste sensitive cells, but not some taste sensitivity is lost after swallowing. The act of swallowing is a reflex produced by touching sensitive areas of a morsel or foreign body (which may be tasteless) upon the back of the tongue.

POWER OF THE LAITY

Many people complain today that Christianity has become a clergyman's religion. Christian work is in charge of the Church. Christian work has become an organization with full-time professional Christian workers operating the machinery. What is there left for the layman to do?

Plenty. We need to bear in mind that the Founder of our religion was a layman. Every one of the original disciples was a layman. The people who spread the Christian faith throughout the first century of the church's history were practically all laymen. Throughout the early days of the Christian Church laymen have played such an important part that it is hardly too much to say that the church would have perished had it not been for the Christian consecration or laymen. Christianity has become a clergyman's religion, the layman should be nobody but himself. He has left to the clergyman many duties with which the clergyman should not have been burdened. Ministers are set aside for a certain type of spiritual work which, with their professional training, are best able to perform. The greater part of the work of every church must be done by laymen and laywomen who sincerely and truly dedicate and try with all fidelity to perform it.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

DO THE THING MOST WANTED

All over this world there are people wishing to dress well, to buy grand clothes, those that do not fit, and which only serve to irritate and to annoy the wearer. These people are wasting precious days in doing something for which they have neither love nor adaptability.

After all, it is personal happiness and inward satisfaction that we all should consider as our pleasure in life. We have to be first useful to ourselves before we can distribute this usefulness to others, or to the world. To accomplish this we must select those things to do, and devote our lives to which we are best fitted to do.

I have a friend whose early life was engrossed with interest in ward his failure because that father insisted upon the son becoming a lawyer, and not a mechanical engineer, to be an artist. He was always happiest when gnawing, sketching or painting. In later years he became famous as an artist, but it was the wanted to do that gave him the greatest joy.

It is just as important to flavor our soup with salt as it is to insure as it is to flavor one's food with salt. People who love their work are the most successful, and happiest. One does not strive to be successful, but does work if he will but do the thing he most wants to do, regardless of monetary returns. The greater part of the work of every church must be done by laymen and laywomen who sincerely and truly dedicate and try with all fidelity to perform it.

Robert Frost is America's greatest living poet. Forty-seven years before his great talent was recognized—and that in England! He was a farmer in New Hampshire, and only an occasional contributor of poems to publications, before he was discovered by an editor who took to poetry. As of today no American poet has been so honored and justly so. He literally did the thing he most wanted to do.

His success serves to plague one who has for long devoted himself to an inward cultivation of mind and spirit, but has remained permanent. The personal, happy experiences are the ones we all want most, and should strive to gain.

The damaged vehicle was owned by Gus Scaletta, and the second by Graham's Garage.

Address Mail to Canadian Army Special Force Soldiers Thru Army P.O. at Vancouver

Ottawa, Nov. 21 —Mail for Canadian Army Special Force soldiers stationed at Fort Lewis, Washington, or in Korea, should be channelled through an army post office at Vancouver and not addressed direct to the men concerned, Army Headquarters announced today.

Authorities urged anyone writing to CASF personnel to follow the example below as a guide in order to ensure speedy and accurate delivery of letters and parcels:

A-123456 Pte. J. C. Smith
2nd Battalion Royal Canadian Regiment,
CAPO 5000,
C/O Postmaster Vancouver, B.C.

It was stressed that the address on all parcels and letters intended for Special Force soldiers should contain the man's regimental number, rank, name, initials, and his unit in addition to the Vancouver address.

Civil and military postal officials urge that Christmas parcels and mail be dispatched early to assure delivery to the troops before December 25.

Ordinary mail and parcels for the troops in Korea should reach the Vancouver Post Office address not later than November 26, and air mail letters and parcels, not later than December 12.

For troops at Fort Lewis, parcels should reach Vancouver by December 18, and ordinary mail by December 20.

Owen Sound to Vote On Hospital Addition

Owen Sound, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Ratepayers will vote Jan. 1 on a proposal for a $2,109,418 addition to the General and Marine Hospital it was announced last night. The addition will increase the hospital's size to 188 beds, from its present 89 beds.

Preliminary specifications have been approved by the Ontario Health Department.

Council heard the proposal from the Hospital Board and decided to pass it to the ratepayers for decision.

Between 40 and 50 per cent of the cost would be paid by the city. The balance will be covered by provincial and government grants plus possible grants from Grey and Bruce counties or surcharge against non-resident patients.

FORT CHURCHILL INVADERS LOSE BATTLE

Youngest and smallest of the three bears that invaded the sub-Arctic air base at Fort Churchill, Churchill, Man., gave Capt. G. A. York of Vancouver the thrill of a lifetime by charging into the captain's rifle fire. The 500-pound baby bear and two others roamed around the Fort Churchill camp until a group of hunters took after them in jeeps. Capt. York, shown here with his raw material for a bearskin rug, downed the polar in two shots. One other bear was killed — the third escaped. — Central Press Canadian.

Electors Not Voting on Health Unit But Health Department Ald. W. Argue Tells Council

A health department such as the electors will be asked to vote on December 4th would cost the city of Belleville only up to $12,000 more than is now being spent annually on health services in the city.

This was told to members of council Monday evening by Alderman William Argue, who in reply to a statement by Mayor Allin regarding the cost of Peterborough's health unit told councillors that at no time had there been a request for a health unit in Belleville alone.

Mayor Allin had noted that in Peterborough the 1950 cost for their health unit had been $38,245 with the bond of education spending an additional amount of $14,000 on health services.

"Never was there a request that Belleville should go into a health unit alone," observed Alderman Argue. He said it had been recommended that Belleville and Hastings co-operate in establishing a health unit but unfortunately this had not materialized.

Vote on Health Dept.

He said it had been estimated the cost of such a unit would have been approximately $77,000 annually, the city's share, after receipt of government grants, would have worked out at something like $14,000.

The alderman went on to note that now the city electors were being asked to vote on establishment of a health department—not a health unit—which would cost up to $25,000 annually. Already however, approximately $12,000 was being spent on health services, so actually an additional amount of only $13,000 was being asked.

The cost per capita if Belleville and Hastings had co-operated in setting up the unit would have been roughly 65 cents. Under the proposed health department scheme the cost for health services in the city would be about $1 per capita.

The alderman went on to say that Dr. Struthers of the health department in Toronto had suggested that Belleville might join with the Prince Edward county health unit. He did not elaborate.

"I noticed," pointed out the Mayor, "that you voted for the recommendation to allow the electors decide with respect to the health department."

Brought in Amendment

"Yes", was the reply, "but I did bring in an amendment setting $15,000 as the additional amount to be provided for health services in the city."

"Then I trust that you will take it upon yourself to inform the public to this effect", remarked the Mayor.

Mayor Allin and Alderman Argue had a further wordy debate with respect to a statement by the mayor at the last council meeting that a majority was required for a committee meeting quorum. He quoted from the Municipal Act stating that only four members were required.

"As long as I am mayor I will call for a majority for a quorum at committee meetings," returned the mayor.

To an inquiry by Alderman Clarke, Alderman Lattimer replied that the committee set up to discuss the Rawson Bus franchise was still investigating the matter and would soon report to council.

Alderman Thomas wanted to know why council had not been informed of the proposed move of the chest clinic from the hospital.

Recommended No Action

He pointed out that council had recomended to the hospital that no action be taken with respect the chest clinic vacating their quarters at the hospital.

Mayor Allin replied 'that the majority of the hospital board still felt the space was needed at the hospital and apparently the chest clinic officials had become tired of waiting and decided to obtain other quarters. He admitted council had not been notified to this effect. The chest clinic will locate on the second floor of the new garage showroom building now being erected by the Belleville Motor Car Company on Bridge Street, West.

Alderman Liddle asked why the traffic lights had not been installed at the intersection of North Front and Moira Streets, noting that the money for the installation had been provided in the budget. To this Alderman Lattimer as chairman of the traffic committee, stated the money had not been provided in the budget although he admitted this had been discussed.

Council Recessed

Mayor Allin referred to a letter written by E. Guar Porter which appeared in the press last week announcing his resignation as chairman of the local Board of Health. The letter gave as the reason for the resignation the council delay in dealing with a proposal to hire a full time medical officer of health. The mayor said the reason for the council delay was the fact that council had recessed for the summer months.

Under general business Alderman Tice said he was opposed to parking meters being placed in front of residences in a residential area, noting that certain residents had received parking tickets while parking at noon in front of their own home. He said he would bring in a motion at the next meeting dealing with the matter.

Strange Disease Of Throat Takes Life of Child

Peterborough, Nov. 21 (CP) — Eight days after complaining of a sore throat, a three-year-old boy died of a mysterious disease Monday.

Medical authorities warned parents in the Peterborough district to call a doctor immediately if their children complain of sore throats.

Jimmy Mason, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Lindsay Mason, was the victim of the unidentified disease. He told his parents he had a sore throat. Five hours later he died, gasping for breath.

His older sister, Patricia, 5, is in hospital receiving treatment for a similar throat complaint. Her condition is slightly improved although doctors say they are puzzled by the strange attack.

Dr. H. G. Carleton, coroner, who performed an autopsy on the dead child, said it did not show the nature of the disease that killed the boy.

WEDDINGS

SOMERVILLE—RUSHLOW

St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Saturday, November 18, at 3 p.m., when Archdeacon Arthur Smith, rector of the church, united in marriage Doreen Bredam, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Rushlow, of Belleville, to Ross Robert Somerville, of the late Robert Somerville, of Belleville, and the late Mr. Robert Somerville.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a powder blue suit with corsage of pink roses, with navy blue hat and accessories. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Carl Rushlow, who wore a navy blue suit with corsage of yellow roses.

Mr. Carl Rushlow, brother of the bride, attended the bridegroom.

The reception was held at the home of the bridegroom's mother who received the guests, gowned in silk blue with corsage of yellow roses. The young couple will reside in Belleville.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto; Newtonville; Port Hope; Cobourg; Brighton.

BOWLER—COX

A wedding of wide interest was solemnized in the Baptist Church, Weston, Ontario, on Saturday, November 18, at 4 p.m., when the Rev. Mr. Greer, pastor of the church, united in marriage Dorothy Hilary Cox, of Weston, to Garth Edward Bowler, of Weston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gardiner.

The wedding music was provided by the church organist, and the soloist, Mr. Bill Higgins, of Weston, sang before the ceremony "The Lord's Prayer", and during the signing of the register, "Because."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Jack Reid, Denison Road, Weston, was radiant in her white satin bridal gown featuring a moulded bodice, sweetheart neckline, at the lower corners of which were two rosettes of satin encrusted with sequins, and also at the sides and back of the bodice adjoining the full skirt which fell gracefully into a slight train. The sleeves were long and tight fitting, ending in lily points at the wrists. The embroidered nylon net veil was caught by a feathered headdress and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and white mums with satin streamers.

Miss Dorreen Reid, of Weston, was maid of honor, gowned in blue corded taffeta with long matching mitts, and halo headdress and fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of mauve chrysanthemums.

Miss Doreen Bredam, of Brampton, Ontario, was bridesmaid, wearing a pink satin gown with long matching mitts, matching halo headdress, fingertip veil, and carrying a shower bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

Mr. Jack Bowler, of Wooler, Ontario, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman and the ushers, Mr. Arthur Callum, and Mr. Bob Woods, both of Weston.

The reception dinner was held in the Oddfellows Hall, Weston, which was tastefully decorated with white bells, pink and white streamers. The sunt of the bride, Mrs. Jack Reid, received the guests, wearing navy wine ensemble with black accessories and corsage of yellow roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Fred Gardiner, who was gowned in a black satin ensemble with black and white accessories and corsage of red roses. Dancing was enjoyed following the wedding dinner.

Later, the young couple left for points east, the bride wearing navy sheer, navy topcoat and accessories and corsage of red roses. Upon their return they will reside in Weston.

Guests were present from Belleville, Trenton, Brampton, Detroit, Thistletown and Milltown.

BOYD—SEMARK

A pretty, but quiet wedding was solemnized on Saturday, November 18, at 7 p.m., in the chapel of St. Thomas' Parish House, when Archdeacon Arthur Smith united in marriage Ruth Semark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Semark, of Belleville, to John Gordon Boyd, of Mt. Dennis, Toronto, son of Mrs. Catherine Boyd, of Nova Scotia, and the late Jacob Boyd.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a smoke grey gabardine suit, with pale blue accessories and corsage of pink Sweetheart roses. She was attended by Mrs. Isabelle Hunt, wearing rose gabardine with black accessories and corsage of yellow Sweetheart roses.

Mr. Gerald Semark, of Belleville, brother of the bride, attended the bridegroom.

The reception was held at the bride's home, where the bride's mother, wearing an embroidered, navy blue crepe gown, black accessories and corsage of pink roses received the guests.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd left for Weston and points west, the bride travelling in a navy green dress and topcoat with Persian lamb trim, and black accessories. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd will reside at Mt. Dennis.

Out-of-town guests were present from Kingston, Toronto, and Weston.

Women's Institute

QUINTE W.I.

The November meeting of the Quinte W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Reid, Bridge Street, with an attendance of thirty. The president opened the meeting in the usual manner and welcomed all the visitors present, including to Armistice Day being near all joined in the singing of "Faith of Our Fathers."

Letters and cards of thanks were read and business was discussed.

Mrs. Clifford Reid spoke on the motto:

"A little word of kindness spoken,
A motion or a tear,
Has often healed the heart that's broken,
And made a friend sincere."

Mrs. Arnold Mitchell, Mrs. Eric Leeming gave a full report of the Institute Convention.

Mrs. Bert Docter was in charge of the program.

Mrs. Miller favored with a piano selection entitled, "In the Wood."

Miss Helen Sulman gave a reading entitled "The Food Crank", Mrs. Docter spoke briefly. Miss Sulman favored with another reading entitled "To Be by Her Side", followed by a piano selection by Mrs. Miller.

The meeting then closed and a social time enjoyed by all. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and the lunch committee.

Oscar Natzka's Powerful Voice Well Suited to Classical Songs

BY GENE LANG

The 1950-51 series of concerts given by the Belleville Community Concert Association got under way to a splendid start last evening when the distinguished bass, Oscar Natzka sang his way into the hearts of a completely filled auditorium at the Belleville Collegiate.

Before one note was uttered forth from his powerful voice, his regal bearing and imperialistic profile stirred the audience to a more than usual concentrated attentiveness as this six-foot-two bass baritone made his way into the centre of the stage. His deportment was of the grand manner reminiscent of that era at the turn of the present century, a manner that other singers would do well to emulate.

Four Arias

The opening group consisted of four arias from the operas, not like number of famous operatic masters. Arias of varying vocal content were juxtaposed, Handel's "La Sonnambula", Mozart's "The Magic Flute", Verdi's "Simone Boccanegra" and Boito's "Mefistofeles", Regardless of the mood and character of the four arias, Mr. Natzka imparted to each one a fine lyric sympathetic understanding, this being a result of sincere insight and consummate vocal technique requirements demanded by each aria.

Picking out two of these numbers, one must say that the Mozart selection was deliciously served and tastefully performed. And the gruesome and spine-tingling "Infernal Spirits, Let Negs" of Boito—here was dramatic opera fare given a most impassioned and effective dramatic rendition, showing the powerful and reverberant qualities of Mr. Natzka's resonant voice.

Part two of the recital featured four representative songs of early German Lieder of the 19th century romantic song-masters — Schubert, Wolf, and Schumann. Again, as in the previous numbers, Mr. Natzka brought forth the diversified qualities of his voice, exemplifying a sorrowful atmosphere in Schubert's "The Hurdy-Gurdy Man," a majestic timbre in Schumann's "Two Grenadiers" and a great deal of emotionalism in Ich Grolle Nicht (I Blame Thee Not) from Schumann's "Dichterliebe" song cycle.

Mossourgsky's familiar encore humorous ballad "Song of the Flea" once more showed this great voice in gradations of tone varying from delicate plaidation to grandiose fortissimo. Even though the meaning of the songs was given a double chance of reaching to the listeners when sung in English, they were lost in a good portion of their appeal when not sung in the original German tongue, owing partially to the difference in metrical spacings of the words and partially to the forced rhyming that is necessary when translated into English. Mr. Natzka sang one of the four in English translations.

Great Composers Represented

Following intermission, the two giants of the 18th century, Bach and Handel were included in the repertoire of the artist of the evening. Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" sung most reverently, but marred by a too heavy accompaniment in the triplet quavers, was followed by two positive gems of Handel "Come Live With Me" and the ecstatically lovely "Where'er You Walk," both from "Semele" a long since forgotten opera whose vocal tears could be brought to ones eyes, it was in this latter number, as Mr. Natzka drew from this song every moment of its beauty that was possible to elicit from it. What lovely phrasing! And then "Honor and Arms" from Samson. A monstrous aria sung by a stupendous voice—the result—shivers of excitement that froze one to one's seat.

Mr. Natzka's very able accompanist, Mr. Joseph Seiger played three well known favorites, of Brahms, Chopin and Debussy in a most commendable manner and was rewarded for his efforts by the audience bringing him back for two encores. The lyric A Flat Major Waltz of Brahms and Scarlatti's most familiar (and hackneyed) Sonata in G Major. There are over 490 other Sonatas by Scarlatti—lets hear one of them sometime—for a change. Nevertheless, very well done, Mr. Seiger.

Round Songs

The concluding group of songs was a mixture of the nondescript that is used to balance off the usual vocal concert. Outstanding among these was the very fine interpretations of the Song of the Volga Boatmen (sung in English) and "Vivi-ca" a buoyant and virile opus by Bruno Hahn. The latter received applause of the loath - to - let - him - go listeners, Mr. Natzka responded with four encores, ranging in satisfy all tastes. "Jack and Jill" the nursery rhyme set to music satirical of Handel was a delight to hear, also was Oley Speak's immortal "On the Road to Mandalay", vigorously thrown forth by that dramatic voice. The applause of the evening was the endearing "Bless This House" a sacred music favorite which was sympathetically sung.

Mr. Natzka's enunciation was generally clear and distinct, and his phrasing and breath spacing was well achieved, contributing much to the art of marked success for this gifted singer. The accompaniments were satisfactorily rendered by Mr. Seiger with perhaps a little too much fortissimo, especially in the Volga Boatmen Song.

Club Activities

NURSES' ALUMNAE ASSOC.

The regular meeting of the Nurses' Alumnae Association met in the Mary Ritchie Residence with Mrs. Jewel Holway, president of the Association as chairman. A slate of officers for 1951 were voted on as follows:

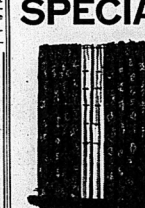
President Miss Sine; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Hodson; 2nd vice-president, Miss Leafesty; secretary, Miss Wilson; treasurer, Miss Chambers; nominating committee, Mrs. Holway and Miss Sine; editorial, Mrs. Holway and Mrs. Smith.

A euchre party was planned for the first week in February and committees were appointed to plan for the coming event. In order to help make more money for a project started in 1950 it was decided to sell tickets on a Kenwood blanket and have the draw at the euchre party.

CATHOLIC W.I.

The November meeting of the Catholic W.I. was held in St. Michael's auditorium with Mrs. K. Doyle, presiding.

A letter was read from Mrs. McGlade, the Diocesan president, in appreciation of the co-operation of this sub-division at the regional meeting.



The president reminded the members of the commencement exercises to be held in St. Michael's and of the prizes to be awarded.

Mrs. Hudon and Mrs. McIntyre were named hospital visitors for the month of November.

Mrs. B. Burley read a letter concerning the establishment of a Health Clinic in the city. Members of the League are interested and would appreciate a better health program.

Mrs. J. Boyd reported that the membership is now 502.

Plans were completed for the fall bazaar and events outlined for the Christmas season.

Always scrape and rinse dishes before washing them in the dishpan or mechanical dishwasher. Scrape burned or clinging particles of food from pots and pans first soaking in clear water, if necessary. The cleaner the dishwater, the better the job of washing!

Churchill Hats Now in Fashion In Paris Salons

Paris, Nov. 21 (AP)—Churchill hats — a feminine version of the bespatter habitually worn by the statesman — were displayed last night at a fashion showing staged by French couturier Pierre Balmain.

The hats look like a cross between a derby and a homburg, have three-inch-high crowns dented slightly through the center, and narrow brims sharply furled at each side.

Balmain makes them of anything from gay Paisley wool to scarlet breast feathers and crimson chip straw. Decorations cover a wide field, too.

The inevitable cigar — Churchillian size — adorns a number called "Winston" which is made of navy-blue breast feathers. It has cobweb-fine, coffee-colored veiling shrouding the face and has an end ending in streamers down the rear.

Forerunner for spring is "Chequers," a hat named after the famous country home of Britain's prime ministers. This is a high-crowned chip straw and accompanies a new spring dress in checked navy-blue wool featured by ting red buttons and wide collars and cuffs of glaze linen.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking?

A man was a millionaire in King David's time if he owned enough raisins.

People paid their income tax then, too. It was one of the few times when a man could enjoy his cash by simply eating it.

There are two types of dried grapes—seedless and seeded. The seedless are grown without seeds while the seeded have the seeds removed. The seeded are usually the larger of the two, are more meaty and are inclined to be somewhat more sticky.

A pound of raisins represents four pounds of fresh grapes before drying.

If raisins are a little old or too dry, they may be plumped by steeping them in hot water 10 minutes or by placing them in cold water and then bringing the water to a boil.

Raisins go particularly well with roast goose or duck. They may be cooked with the gravy or with dressing, as in today's recipe. For best results roast the duck at a low steady temperature of 325 degrees. Throw off the fat from the pan two or three times during cooking to prevent excessive smoking.

Roast Duck, Rice and Raisin Stuffing.

1 cup raw rice
Salt—pepper
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 small onion chopped fine
1 small green pepper chopped fine
½ teaspoon ground sage
1 egg slightly beaten
3-4 cup raisins
One 5 to 6 lb. duck.

Wash raw rice in four cold waters. Drain. Put rice in top part of double boiler. Add 2 cups hot water and 1 teaspoon salt. Cook rice covered over simmering water in bottom part of double boiler for 30 to 40 minutes or until tender. Do not stir during cooking.

Remove rice from heat. Cool slightly.

In a saucepan melt the butter. Add onion and green pepper. Saute until onion turns yellow.

Mix together the rice, onion, pepper, sage, egg and raisins.

Wash duck. Singe if necessary. Remove pin feathers. Stuff duck with rice dressing. Sew neck and vent shut or fasten with small wooden skewers. Sprinkle the duck with salt and pepper.

Put the duck, breast side up on a wire rack in an uncovered roaster. Roast at 325 degrees for 2 hours or until done.

Fashion Flashes

VARIETY is the big word for suits this season, with something for every type and budget—with old standbys dressed up and with many original novelties. In the latter group is a suit with a long, fitted jacket of orange Harris tweed—it's like a riding habit, and a skirt of beige wool jersey. The jacket has tiny double collar and cuffs of the jersey.

THERE'S APPEAL in the new dressy separates. Consider a costume composed of a gold lace sleeveless top buttoned snug below a deep neckline, a slim black velvet skirt and a boxy, torn-about jacket—one side velvet, the other side white lapin, handled like ermine. Each piece good on its own.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Another for a girl to have

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am the mother of four children, three boys and one girl. My daughter is only 13 years old, but already she's very interested in boys. She talks about a 15-year-old boy all the time.

My husband disapproves of her even thinking about boys at her age and wants her to wait until she is 15 herself. I think she shouldn't go with boys until she's at least 14, but if she waits until she's 15, she may lose this boy she likes so much now. This boy is the nicest one I've ever known and my daughter says she never thought as much of any boy as she does of this one.

What do you think we should do?

Mrs. T. C.

Dear Mrs. T. C.:

I think it is fine that you are trying to look at things from your daughter's point of view, and that you want to do the thing that will make her happy. With such an understanding mother, I'm sure she'll be able to solve all her problems very happily as she goes through the teens.

I do feel, though, that 13 years old is pretty young to go out very much with boys. If this boy should ask her to go to a movie now and then, I'd let her go, but I wouldn't encourage any "going steady" or anything of that sort. Tell her that you're perfectly willing for her to go out occasionally on a Friday or Saturday night, when it doesn't interfere with school work, but that you think she should be two or three years older before having very many dates.

Afraid to marry because of inadequate education

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Do you honestly believe that a girl who has never had any formal education, but has tried to educate herself through wide reading and observation of life, could make a professional man happy? My friend is a doctor.

Because of my self-conscious-ness over my inadequate education I have for years discouraged someone I love very dearly. We like the same things and have the same ideals and interests.

I have tried to forget him by going out with someone in my own circle, but it only made me realize all the more how much I really need him. I am interested in his work and would like to help him in it.

What shall I do? I know he, too, is suffering.

V. T. S.

Dear V.T.S.:

If you and this man are as congenial as your letter indicates, then I think perhaps you're making too big a problem out of the situation.

Since you've been wise enough to try and develop yourself through reading and intelligent observation of the world about you, you probably have a good deal of practical commonsense, which is sometimes an even more useful asset than academic achievement. What you learn from books isn't necessarily more valuable, than what you learn from life itself, you know. Think of all the outstanding men and women in this country who had little or no formal schooling, yet managed to reach high places in many different walks of life. If you keep your eyes, ears and mind open, you will continue to learn from what you see and hear about other people doing, and there's no reason at all why you shouldn't be just as interesting a companion as anyone else.

I advise you to talk this whole thing over with your friend, and see how he feels about it. If he agrees with what I have said, then you're foolish to make an issue of what you believe to be your educational lack. On the other hand, of course, if you find that this difference in education you haven't graduated from some school or other, you'd be right in thinking marriage between you would be unwise. Then you'd have to have character enough to close the chapter and turn your attention elsewhere.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. SPECKMAN

Here they come . . . Christmas Cards!

This year there are, I notice, many more Christmas cards of artistic and real distinction than ever before. . . from the good straightforward simplicity of the many varieties of 5-cent cards on up to the expensive creations, there seems to be an honest effort to present Christmas cards that express, with grace and dignity, the inspiring message of Christmas, ever-old and ever-new, the great message so vastly important this year, so deeply needed.

On many of the 1950 Christmas cards, and in every price range, there are great-spirited and deeply-appealing designs of reverent religious subjects. What a powerful force for good will be these religious Christmas greetings that lift and be exchanged this year.

When you step forth to choose your Christmas cards, you'll note with delight that colors this year are strikingly clear, very brilliant. Glorious colors. . . and shining colors they are, too, to radiate the atmosphere of Christmas.

Many artists, some well-known and some new in the art field, have created collections for this year's presentation.

There are many intriguing Christmas card innovations. The twirlaround is one of the cleverest—a flat card which falls into shapes appropriate to hang on your Christmas tree—several designs of stars, lovely snowflakes Christmas bells, gay, miniature trees, engaging spirals, circles within circles. Many other cards have special movable features, some most surprising. Others have sound effects . . . one musical card has a little box with a handle to turn for the tuning-up of "Jingle Bells." There are clever cut-out technics too, some of brilliantly-colored paper patterns on glowing white or rich, dark-red or dark-blue backgrounds.

On many cards this year there are blank pages for us to write our own greetings. And I wish that there were many, many more! For how much more welcome is just "Christmas Greetings" written in the handwriting of a friend than an impersonal, printed message.

For the modern-design enthusiasts, there is a wide choice of modern designs in cards, several representing the works of Picasso. For "ultra" taste, there are ultra cards —elaborately flashing sequins, tinsel, gold and silver wire, celluloid and cellophane.

On many cards this year there are blank pages for us to write our own greetings. And I wish that there were many, many more! For how much more welcome is just "Christmas Greetings" written in the handwriting of a friend than an impersonal, printed message.

A Tame-Cat Leopard

By PRUNELLA WOOD

A HANDSOME lounging jacket with shawl collar and self belt is easy to wear over slacks or skirts, and has been a classic for years. But 1950 gives it a jolt by turning it out in fake leopard skin, using a fabric which apes the pattern, the surface look and the color of a jungle pussycat, but contriving it all from rayon yarn.

You can get all types of ready-made cannat fashions in this and in other fake furs you can also buy the fabrics in yardage and whip up your own, Me, I've got a whole rattan patio set upholstered in leopard, and it is lots of fun and chic in the tame-cat jungles of Florida.

BEAUTY

Speaking of voices.

Women are judged by their dress, their manners and their voices. No doubt about it. Let us suppose that your telephone rings. You listen to the voice of a stranger, a woman. You start guessing right away as to the kind of a person she is. If her conversation is clear, business like and well-worded, you feel pretty sure that she is cultured and capable. If she mumbles, runs her words together or drones, you are glad she is no special friend of yours; she would be a tiresome companion. Should it happen that she has a light, laughing voice and hands you a bit of gay chatter, you know she is a good egg, a live wire.

We take it for granted that the members of this beauty class look after their complexions, their hair, their hands, and their figures. We wonder how many of them take heed of their voices, even know if their voices are pleasing or not. A sweet, low one has quality and charm. A high, shrill one signifies nervousness and instability, is a strain on the ears of listeners. Something to think about, my hearties.

Tension tightens the vocal cords. Shallow breathing means that the voice will not have fulness and quality. Keep your body upright, backbone extended, chest lifted, head balanced and the chances are your voice will carry on according to the best traditions. Notice the full chests and fine figures of opera singers.

Children will follow their mother's example.

Above everything else, curb volume; if you don't, you may develop into a shouter, and shouters do not stand among the beauty-and-charm set of this world. One shrill-voiced person in a family can destroy the peaceful atmosphere of the home, make the other members jittery.

As children are little imitators, every mother should do her best to cultivate a voice that is musical and pleasing. The quiet word has power. The mother who speaks quickly and with irritation will soon find that her children are following her example, screaming at their elders as well as their companions.

Certain speech habits should be corrected. Avoid long lapses between sentences, as if you were trying to dramatize what you are saying. Over-emphasis is tiresome. You know the girls to whom everything is "perfectly darling!"

Regard the tones and inflections you use. The way you say "hello" will convey different meanings. It can be courteous, it can be cold, it can be insulting, according to the tone of voice in which it is spoken.

Kilts Lose Favor In Scots Dancing

Edinburg. (CP)—A flared tartan skirt worn with matching scarf and white shirt-blouse threatens to rival the kilt for Scottish country dancing.

Traditionally the scarf is worn over one shoulder, but can also be used as a stole.

Some members of the dancing-club set say the skirt is more flattering to the figure, than the kilt, which gives a short, stubby look. Another point is that a skirt outfit costs about $9 compared with $30 for a kilt.

Die-hard opponents contend the skirt detracts from the appeal of the men in the kilt. Nothing, they say, can "tak' the place o' the swing o' the kilt in a country reel."

Flattering Fez Turban

By ALICE ALDEN

IT'S nice when chill breezes blow, to be headed for comfort and to look mighty pretty too. Lilly Dache takes cognizance of such demands and comes through with a delightful fez-turban in putty colored velvet, deftly draped to a flattering angle. It is a modern adaptation of the fal-coner's cap of medieval times that proves that fashion is where you find it.

Daughter of the wartime and continuing president of Credit Foncier de France, she was first married to Count de Dampierre, who fought in the French army until France fell and then returned home to join the underground with his wife. He failed to survive torture by the gestapo, dying in a boxcar on his way to exile in Poland.

The former Countess was also captured and was shunted from prison to prison. She managed to escape the firing squad twice and survived torture rather than give

She finally escaped from a bus carrying her to Poland and managed to stay out of the enemy's reach until her country was liberated. Two years later she met and married Mr. Moore, at the time serving with the American army at Nuremberg trials. They came here in 1948.

Rayons Aid Britain to Fight Wool Prices

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London. (CP)—Britain's new "cost-of-living" clothing materials, the wholesale manufacturer's answer to rising wool prices, will be on the market soon.

Wool and worsted mixtures carrying as much as 50 per cent of rayon or nylon, they will lower considerably the average cost of new clothes. For instance, a low-price men's suit will cost just under £7 ($21) compared with nearly £10, present cost of the same suit in an all-wool material.

The new materials are claimed to be harder-wearing than wool, less "scratchy" and of equal warmth. Those with a nylon content, the manufacturers say, will wear three times as well, and all are uncrushable.

Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, viewing the materials at the British Rayon Federation Exhibition, said that the cost of living would be higher now but for striking developments in the substitution of rayon for cotton and wool.

"Prices of natural fibres have risen greatly," he said. "Raw wool is nearly nine times and raw cotton 7 1-2 times pre-war."

To Revise Controls

Manufacturers predict that the increased use of rayon and other yarns and the rising cost of all-wool textiles will result in the greatest change in government price controls since their inauguration in July, 1941.

Price-control revisions, to be announced in December are expected to remove government restrictions on prices of wearing apparel, instead, control will be levied on textile prices.

In other words, instead of present price controls on finished articles, restrictions would be on textiles in the unprocessed stage.

This would give the greatest price flexibility since pre-war days, say manufacturers. Instead of specific prices there would be a minimum price that could be varied upwards according to the cut, quality and trim of the goods.

Wilson, declined to confirm these forecasts of revised controls. He said he intends to hold full discussions with the clothing industry to see what can be done about the rise in wool prices.

Teen-Age Etiquette Has Tips for Many Elders

New York. (AP)—Checked your manners lately? Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts in the United States in their first joint publishing venture, are now policing teen-age etiquette—or lack thereof—in a breezy, illustrated booklet called "your ticket to popularity—good manners."

Actually it's the story of Sally Mariner and Sam Ranger, a couple of high school students just setting out on the treacherous sea of social life.

Sam and Sally learn it is bad manners to smack bubble gum and yell back and forth in movie theatres; that it's rude to linger in a cafeteria line deciding between two deserts that girls don't stand up when introduced to boys, but they do when introduced to their elders.

The whole knotty problem of a restaurant date is threshed out: girls order less expensive items on the menu and they keep their handbags and gloves on their laps, not on the table. When the bill comes, the proper tip is 15 per cent—and if any flat silver is dropped, let the waiter retrieve it.

On The Telephone

Good telephone manners involve short calls—particularly when it's a party line. A girl does not telephone a boy unless she has a real reason.

At a tea party, guests may stay a half-hour or longer, should never wear gloves while drinking tea, or try to handle more china and silverware than is easy. Boys serve older guests—and both girls and boys, even if shy, smile and carry on a conversation with strangers, if it's no more than a discussion of how pretty the flowers are.

When it's a dance, a girl is wise to suggest sitting one out when she can't follow her partner, and, although never declining a "cut-in", can discourage it by looking past him or shutting her eyes. If a girl refuses a dance to one boy, she can't accept another partner—but must sit it out. She shouldn't suggest a stroll, or encourage romantic conversation unless she expects her escort to turn wolf.

With the exception of the bubble-gum advice, there's nothing in the book which does not apply as well to Sam and Sally's older relatives.

Crippled Girls Go in Business With Telephone

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa (CP)—If you remember war-time struggle with those green-back ration books then you'll have an idea of problems now facing the British housewife.

Back home after a visit to the United Kingdom one appreciates how easy it is to go into a grocery store and choose foods without calculating "points".

The housewife in the United Kingdom still takes her ration book along when she goes shopping.

Maybe she sometimes gazes, longingly, into shop windows filled with gaily-wrapped candies —sweets of which she can buy only a few ounces every couple of weeks. But she has been told most of these together with woollens, automobiles and other British-made goods are headed for such dollar countries as Canada and the United States. The dollars they bring will be used to import raw materials and the food which eventually will lighten her ration load.

Hits Visitors Too

In a three-week tour living in British hotels, it isn't possible to draw a picture of how rationing affects the average woman in her home. But one picks up impressions along the way.

Hotel pamphlets bear brief notices that ration-books must be presented if visitors stay five nights or longer.

Eggs—chiefly powdered—appear infrequently on the average hotel menu although they show up more often than in others. And it's milk, not cream, in a cup of tea or coffee.

Individual rations permit two fresh eggs weekly per person. Butter and cooking fats also are on the rationed list.

Game foods are not restricted and one often finds such dishes as jugged hare or Welsh rarebit on the menu.

That all-important cup of tea is more precious than ever in Britain. The ration is 14 ounces of tea monthly for each person. Incidentally, Britons are a bit scornful of the North American "quickie" method of making tea. "Pouring hot water on those little bags with the strings attached", is the way they describe it.

Even in the lower-priced teashops you'll find tea made in the old-fashioned way. First the loose leaves are put into a heated container to steep and then boiling hot water is poured over them.

The friendly chat, the urgent reminder, the important business decision . . .

IT'S HARD TO MEASURE THE TRUE VALUE OF ALL THE THINGS YOUR TELEPHONE DOES FOR YOU.

YET TELEPHONE SERVICE is one of the smallest items in your family budget. And at the same time your telephone brings twice as many telephone users within your reach as it did ten years ago. Today, as always, your telephone is big value.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF CANADA

IF YOU ARE WAITING FOR A TELEPHONE, or for a higher grade of service, you have our assurance that you will have it just as quickly as we can provide the necessary facilities. Our continuing goal is to provide the kind of service to all who want it, when and where they want it.

FOR SAFE DRIVING in USED CARS SEE BATEMAN

A Wise Old Lady

. . . whom we know rather well, owns a hat shop One day, not long ago, she was offered a choice of two gifts: a $1,000 cheque, or a trip to Europe She gave her decision without any delay at all. "I should prefer," said she, "to take the trip to Europe!"

We agree with the old lady We agree because she had earned her trip We agree because her reasoning was very wise indeed. "All my life," the wise old lady said, "I have saved my money against the day when I could close up my shop – and retire from business. My Bank Manager tells me the day has come when I can afford to take it easy. Now, I agree a cheque for $1,000 would give me a little more security . . . But I already have that

And a trip to Europe would give me memories no money could buy!"

This story has a pleasant ending . . . The old lady went to London and Paris and returned home refreshed . . . and with many new ideas for hats She hired two clever young girls to help her in the shop and now she is teaching them to save their money so, they too, may travel to Europe themselves one day.

One of the greatest lessons age can teach to youth . . . is the habit of thrift . . . A Savings Account with The Dominion Bank can give you more than Security . . . It can give you the chance to be Enterprising . . . when Enterprise is wise.

Whenever you visit any Branch of The Dominion Bank you'll find friendly courteous and efficient service. Drop in today!

FIT AT FIRST. . .

Sam and Sally learn it is bad manners to smack bubble gum and yell back and forth in movie theatres; that it's rude to linger in a cafeteria line deciding between two deserts that girls don't stand up when introduced to boys, but they do when introduced to their elders.

The whole knotty problem of a restaurant date is threshed out: girls order less expensive items on the menu and they keep their handbags and gloves on their laps, not on the table. When the bill comes, the proper tip is 15 per cent—and if any flat silver is dropped, let the waiter retrieve it.

On The Telephone

Good telephone manners involve short calls—particularly when it's a party line. A girl does not telephone a boy unless she has a real reason.

At a tea party, guests may stay a half-hour or longer, should never wear gloves while drinking tea, or try to handle more china and silverware than is easy. Boys serve older guests—and both girls and boys, even if shy, smile and carry on a conversation with strangers, if it's no more than a discussion of how pretty the flowers are.

When it's a dance, a girl is wise to suggest sitting one out when she can't follow her partner, and, although never declining a "cut-in", can discourage it by looking past him or shutting her eyes. If a girl refuses a dance to one boy, she can't accept another partner—but must sit it out. She shouldn't suggest a stroll, or encourage romantic conversation unless she expects her escort to turn wolf.

With the exception of the bubble-gum advice, there's nothing in the book which does not apply as well to Sam and Sally's older relatives.

DENTISTS COLLECT

London, (CP)—Dentists in Britain were paid a total of $5,870,706, between April 1 and Sept. 30 this year by local health authorities for their work in the National Health scheme.

BATTLE SMOKE NUISANCE

Vancouver, (CP) —Skies over Vancouver will be clear of "smog" in another year, says John McGregor, city smoke inspector. Smoke reduction measures—new refuse burners to eliminate smoke —will do much to banish the 10,000 tons of solid matter that settled over the city last year, he said.

Fashion Flashes

FILL-INS are good and varied this season, just right for scoop-neck dresses and horseshoe-neckline jackets. Pale beige nylon lace over brown nylon taffeta makes a smart dickie done on classical design. The little pointed collar has a brown velvet shoestring bow.

COUPLED dresses and coats major for afternoon and evening wear this season, and appear in various price ranges. A honey of an ensemble is made up of a pyramid coat in purple fleece and a short, but full-skirted, pink lace dress. A pink beaded design on the huge patch pocket of the coat ties up the colors, but each garment is fine on its own.

NICE DECORATION for, a simple dress is a chiffon hankie besprinkled with rhinestones. Tied about the neck or fluttering from a pocket, it's a fine attention-getter!

A WHOPPER of an alligator bag is an investment that pays smart dividends for years. Sixteen by twelve inches are the dimensions of a beauty of a bag in honey brown alligator that has a lovely sheen. It has double braided handles, an envelope-shaped outside pocket and gold edges to the closing tabs.

AND NOW it's the plain old knitted wool dress that is undergoing the glamorizing process. A gray wool glove goes gay with two rows of small, brightly hued wool rosettes, each one centred with tiny pearls.

THE BIG PARADE of afternoon and after-dark dresses includes many charming little numbers in silk or fine rayon taffeta. A bright young dance dress in black, brown or navy has an appliqued velvet scroll outlining the softly scalloped neckline that can be worn on or off the shoulder. The skirt flares out below the snug bodice, and the circular hem is finished to match the neckline, velvet applique and all.

ANCIENT COIN

St. John's, Nfld. (CP)—One of the prizes in the museum here is a solid copper coin dated 1611. One side of the coin found at Cupids some years ago bears the head of King James.

Ontario Court Dismisses Appeal Against Sentence

Toronto, Nov. 21 (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal Monday dismissed an appeal by Joseph Herbert McAuliffe of the death sentence passed by Mr. Justice R. W. Treleaven on McAuliffe's conviction on a murder charge in the death of Arthur Lierman at Langton, Ont., last June 21.

Counsel for the 32-year-old Windsor and North Bay, Ont., resident, Arthur Maloney contended that Mr. Justice Treleaven erred in instructing the jury that it could not return a manslaughter verdict. He also claimed that improper evidence had been admitted at the trial.

McAuliffe was sentenced to be hanged Dec. 19 for the machine-gun slaying of Lierman, 31, who was shot down together with William Goddyn, 24, as they pursued a bandit following the $23,000 Langton bank robbery.

McAuliffe was arrested near Strafforville, six miles from Langton, after a three-day manhunt through surrounding bush by constables in which provincial police and district residents participated.

Mr. Maloney said today that only three of nine persons in the bank at the time of the holdup identified McAuliffe as the gunman after his arrest.

He submitted that evidence of 10-year-old Larry Holmes as to the finding of a coat allegedly discarded by McAuliffe should have been set aside because the judge "made no sufficient inquiry to determine whether the boy understood the seriousness and consequences of an oath."

The boy's evidence had been "crucial" to the Crown's case, Mr. Maloney said, and evidence given by the boy's mother did not corroborate it.

McAuliffe's counsel argued that the accused had been prejudiced by Crown evidence showing that the car in which the bandit made his escape had been stolen in Windsor. There was no evidence that McAuliffe had stolen the car, merely that it had been stolen.

COSTLY DEER

Fort Frances, Ont. (CP)—Getting a deer was expensive for Les Busby. His truck killed a big buck ten miles east of Emo and the truck had to be towed back for repairs costing $200. Game officials said he could keep the deer.

Chinese Crossed From Manchuria Into Korea Oct. 20

Tokyo, Nov. 21 — (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said Monday the Chinese communist thirty-eighth Army crossed from Manchuria into Korea one month ago, Oct. 20.

The troops carried a motley collection of weapons, a headquarters intelligence officer said, including Canadian machine-guns and mortars. The officer said he did not know the source of the Canadian weapons.

An intelligence spokesman said the time of the red crossing indicates the communists' decision to commit Chinese troops was made about Oct. 1, when U. S. forces were approaching the parallel 38 boundary between South and North Korea.

The spokesman said this story of the entry of the Chinese 38th army was pieced together from 450 prisoners.

The Chinese 38th originally was at Changchun, capital of Manchuria. It comprised three divisions, of 9,000 or 10,000 men each, plus some special units. It moved to Mukden Oct. 15.

In Mukden the troops were outfitted with winter clothing. They received some unusual instructions:

Destroy all letters and papers that might identify them as Chinese red army regulars.

Don't talk or otherwise fraternize with Koreans living in Manchuria. Don't speak Chinese in the presence of Korean civilians.

The intelligence officer said it is not clear whether the Chinese knew they were going to fight United Nations forces. Officers had been ordered to "assist the North Koreans in driving out the invader. Conquer and occupy the land."

The Chinese said they did not volunteer for the Korean fighting as reported frequently by the official Chinese red Peiping radio. Neither, they said, did they know any Chinese who had.

Political officers were attached to each unit. They warned the men to die rather than risk capture. They said U. N. troops would kill them if they did surrender.

VISITORS' RECORD

Girl, 14, Says Devil in Her To Blame for Shootup Spree, Hits Uncle, Fires at 5 Others

Natchez, Miss., Nov. 21 (AP)—A frail, 14-year-old girl had a simple explanation today of a two-hour shooting spree in which she terrorized the community of Stanton, Miss.

"It must have been the devil in me," said she, of yesterday's rampage in which she wounded her uncle and fired rifle shots at her step-father, mother, grandmother and two policemen.

Sheriff Robert Burns listed her as Ollie May Byrne, a high school student, and held her in jail without charge. He gave this shot-by-shot account of her outbreak:

The first shot was fired when step-father Grady Johnson went out in the yard to give Oil May lunch money. It was a miss.

Mrs. Johnson started towards her daughter, Another shot, also a miss. Mrs. W. E. Hayles, Ollie Mae's grandmother, called from a window. She was answered with a bullet—another miss.

Then Ollie Mae saw her uncle, Marvin Hayles, in the doorway. She cracked down on him and this time she didn't miss. He was winked in the eye.

Ollie Mae saw a mail truck in the area and fired on the driver, Joel Prather, and ordered him to leave. Postmaster Prather left. The morning mail wasn't delivered.

Ollie Mae arrived at a general store just ahead of its owner, Lynwood Hightower. As he started to park, she drew a bead on him. He fled to cover with her but failed. He called out to an imaginary figure behind her and as she dropped her guard he backed away.

"Frankly, I took off," he recalled later.

Deputy Sheriff Guy Smith and Police Lieut. E. E. Haley drove up to the store. Ollie Mae fired a shot through the automobile door. Haley went to the rear of the store. A bullet ripped through his raincoat and went between his legs.

Ollie Mae next took her stand at an old barn.

By then, Sheriff Burns had arrived on the scene. He edged his way to within earshot and began pleading with Ollie Mae to surrender. She did and went quietly to jail.

TROPHIES FOR WHEAT KING

Four Captured At Gunpoint By Constable

Toronto, Nov. 21. (CP)—Four persons were captured at gunpoint by traffic constable Fred Vass in Toronto's east end last night and charged with theft and receiving stolen goods.

Arrested after a four-block chase were Walter Martin, 26; Sally Cook, 33; John Johnson, 27, and Ann Gallagher, 24.

Police said Vass rounded up his suspects in a chase through back lanes after their fleeing car crashed into another vehicle. Vass had commandeered a passing automobile to chase the car, reported as stolen.

Police said the car contained goods believed to have been stolen from several east-end stores.

Ask to Have Ottawa Separated From Carleton County

Ottawa, Nov. 21 (CP) Carleton County will request the next sitting of the Ontario Legislature to remove the city of Ottawa from county jurisdiction for judicial purposes.

The Carleton county council yesterday approved a resolution asking the legislature to amend the territorial jurisdiction act to divorce Ottawa from the county 13 judicial matters.

It would mean, if passed by the legislature, that the city must build and staff a new courthouse to handle city cases. The county would have the old building to handle such cases as arise outside the city.

The matter arose over the city's refusal to share the costs of renovating the old courthouse.

Policewoman Says She Feigned Ailments Included Cold Tea

Santa Barbara, Calif., Nov. 21 (AP) —A policewoman complaining that "he pinched my toes until I winced" testified about the arrest of James Martin on a charge of practising medicine without a license.

Diagnosis of her feigned ailments policewoman Dorothy Bryant said, was based on squeezing of her pinkies. She said Martin explained that the little toe, for instance, was an indicator of heart ailments; the big toe complaints involving the liver, kidneys, and so on.

Miss Meyer said that when she consulted Martin she pretended that she had cold feet, for one thing.

Martin was arrested yesterday in his office, where equipment included a cancer machine which, Miss Meyer was told, would send electric waves through her body and cure her cold feet.

1950 One of Best Seasons In History of Ontario Crops, Sugar Beet Production Large

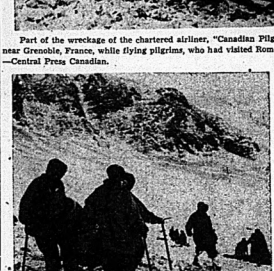
Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Latest 1950 crop estimates indicate Ontario farmers had one of the best seasons on record, the Provincial Agriculture Department said today in its monthly report.

Aggregate output of principal grain crops amounts to 213,000,000 bushels, compared with 169,000,000 in 1949 and a 1940-49 average of 182,000,000. This year's aggregate figure was exceeded only in 1918 (218,000,000 bushels) and 1920 (216,000,000).

Production of hay and clover crops and alfalfa this year was 6,280,000 tons, compared with 5,117,000 in 1949.

The yield of corn for ensilage was 4,837,000 tons, compared with 4,180,000 in 1949 and 3,238,000 in 1948.

The commercial sugar beet crop has been moving to factories at the rate of 1,000 tons daily after 17,000 to 18,000 tons a day. Beet production is estimated at 382,000 tons from 10,8 beet acres for each of the 33,700 acres planted.



Tobacco production was cut by adverse weather — an estimated 1,000,000 pounds was lost to an early-October frost, 5,000,000 lbs. because of black rootrot — but the flue-cured crop likely will be about 105,800,000 pounds, compared with 114,161,000 last year.

Barley tobacco output is estimated at 5,500,000 pounds, compared with 13,452,000 in 1949. However, only 40 per cent of the 1949 acreage was allotted this year.

Catholic Bishops Urge U.S. Parents to Assert Rights

Washington—(CP)— A sharp challange to parents to re-assert their primary rights in educating their children is made in a statement just issued by the Catholic Bishops of the United States.

Their declaration, entitled "The Child: Citizen of Two Worlds" carries a warning that parents have abdicated many of their duties and privileges to the school, the state and popular entertainment forms.

"In recent decades striking advances have been made in meeting the child's physical, emotional and social needs, but his moral and religious needs have not been met with the same solicitude and understanding," says the statement. "As a result many of our children today betray confusion and insecurity.

"The child must be seen whole and entire," they emphasize. "He must be seen as a citizen of two worlds. He belongs to this world surely, but his first and highest allegiance is to God. From his earliest years he must be taught that he is destined for life with God in eternity."

The 180 members of the Catholic Hierarchy who drew up the statement at the annual meeting at the Catholic University here took issue with advocates of sex instruction in schools and with those who want government agencies to take over the field of orphan care.

"We protest in the strongest possible terms against the introduction of sex instruction in the schools," the Bishops declared.

"To be of benefit such instruction must be far broader than the imparting of information, and must be given individually. Sex is more than a biological function. It is bound up with the sacredness and uniqueness of the human personality. It can be fully and properly appreciated only within a religious and moral context. If treated otherwise, the child will see it apart from the coördrolling purpose of his life, which is service to God."

Urging fathers and mothers to fulfill their duties in this matter, the Bishops stated "False modesty should not deter them from doing their duty."

About the trend toward extension of state care for orphans and foster children, the Bishops acknowledged that it is proper for government authorities to enforce legitimate minimum standards of care for the dependent child, but said that the responsibility for his care should not be entirely assumed by them.

The Bishops reminded that Catholic parents are acting within their competence when they set up their own school system, because "it is they, and not the state, who possess the primary right to educate."

CONTINUE TOUR

Chatham, Nov. 21 — (CP)— Troupers of the International Jee Revue voted Monday to continue their Canadian tour after financial backers withdrew their support.

The backers, whose names were not released, held 50 per cent of the stock and decided to quit when receipts fell off with small attendance due to the unseasonable weather.

Members of the show decided to continue to operate on a co-operative basis. They formerly

Funeral Service For Stewardess Held at Grenoble

Grenoble, France, Nov. 21 — (Reuters) — A special funeral service was held here today for Mrs. Helen Johnson MacDonald of Montreal, 29-year-old stewardess of the Canadian Pilgrim plane which crashed Nov. 12 in the French Alps, killing 56. Her body was found Sunday.

After the service Mrs. Mac-Donald's coffin was taken to St. Roch Chapel. From there it will be sent back to Canada with 56 other coffins already in the chapel.

Camille Pouliot, Quebec minister, attended the stewardess' funeral.

Search for the 58th crash victim has been called off because of heavy snowfalls and probably won't be renewed before the spring thaw.

Vatican City — (Reuters)—The Pope again expressed his grief about last week's "Canadian Calgrim" air disaster in private audiences today with Most Rev. Maurice Roy, Archbishop of Quebecz

Msgr. Roy flew from Rome to Grenoble as soon as he heard about the crash in which 58 persons died.

He helped identify bodies of the victims — mostly French - Canadians he knew personally — and conducted funeral services for the dead.

Prowler Strikes Woman in Eye

Toronto, Nov. 21. (CP)—Mrs. Alfred Greene told police a prowler entered her bedroom early today, struck her in the eye and escaped with an article of wearing apparel after she screamed.

Mrs. Greene, whose husband, a 58-year-old high-school teacher, is engaged in marriage, also described her assailant as a slightly-built man, about 22 years old. She had never seen him before.

Police have sought Greene and Mrs. Beatrice Reason, one of his night-school students, since Greene's abandoned automobile was found in Rosedale Ravine with blood spots on the upholstery. Detectives believe they are living in the United States.

Officers investigating the attack on Mrs. Greene said they believe the prowler used a key to enter the north-end house.

WAR AGAINST GUERRILLAS

Singapore, Nov. 21 (Reuters) —The government of Malaya is to take powers to conscript and direct manpower to intensify the war against communist guerrillas, A. P. Foster Sutton, administering officer, announced today. He told the legislative council in Kuala Lumpur that there was the signs of an immediate break in the guerrilla morale.

10,608 REDS DISMISSED

Tokyo, Nov. 21. (AP)—Allied headquarters announced today 10,608 communists were dismissed from key Japanese industries in a program begun in July and ending October 30. This represented less than one-quarter of one per cent of the 2,585,000 workers employed in those industries.

Democracy's Part To Wipe Out Hunger, Ignorance

—Elliott Roosevelt

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP)—Until democracy is made to work and wipe out hunger and ignorance, it will be fighting a losing battle against an ideology that offers a loaf of bread with its chains, Elliott Roosevelt declared last night.

The son of the late United States president spoke at a dinner inaugurating the Canadian Jewish appeal for funds to erect a community centre and aged people's home in Toronto. Before his address, pledges for donations offered from the floor brought $1,008,000 of the $2,750,000 objective.

Can't Concentrate Since Accident Girl Tells Jury

Toronto, Nov. 21. (CP)—A 17-year-old girl today told an Assize Court jury she "can't concentrate" as a result of a highway accident two years ago.

Betty Rose Ann Ewing William V. McFadden and his son, Earl, of Simcoe, Ont., are standing trial on charges, charging she suffered serious and permanent injuries when struck by the McFadden automobile near Balsh Beach in Simcoe County Aug. 5, 1948.

The defendants claimed the girl "did not take due care of her own safety under the circumstances in that she walked on the travel portion of the highway at night with the traffic, without a light, dressed in clothing barely discernible."

Dr. Kenneth G. McKenzie said the girl suffered brain damage. She had been paralyzed on the right side of her body for some time after the accident and the use of her right hand was still impaired.

The girl testified that she is unable to do housework, cannot knit or sew and suffers from frequent dizzy spells.

2nd Battalion Of Princess Pats To Sail Shortly

Ottawa, Nov. 21 — (CP)—The 2nd Battalion of the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry is expected to sail shortly for Korea, Defence Minister Claxton said today.

Its men will sail from Seattle, probably to Pusan, Korea, where its advance party has already set up a camp. About 1,000 men will go on the trip, with the remainders of the army's special force remain at Fort Lewis to train.

Young Scientist Lists Ideal Mate's Qualities

London, Nov. 21 (Reuters) — If you know an attractive woman who is interested in astronomy, psychology, electronics, hydroponics, molecular energy and thinking machines then you might be the right woman for John Derrick Cooper.

Cooper, 26, a clever, deep-thinking young blo electronic technician, wants a wife, but she's got to come up to his exacting specifications.

He has spent £20 on neatly-typed advertisements in 60-store-front windows in the last week in the London suburb of Hornsiage bureaux. But the ideal hasn't turned up yet.

In addition to the above attributes, she must be under 26 and have intelligence, personal reserve, understanding, sympathetic response, naturalness, frankness, patience, grace, pleasing personality, dependable character, carefulness, appreciation, looks, speech and good health.

ALIENS LIABLE TO SERVICE

Canberra, Australia, Nov. 21—(AP)—Australia is making alien migrants within its borders liable for compulsory military service in the event war can do so within the rules of international law, Harold Holt, Immigration Service minister, announced today. He was introducing a bill providing for a month compulsory military training for 18-year-olds.

Rigid Price Controls Destroy Useful Barometer of Supply And Demand Says Official

Ottawa, Nov. 21—(CP)—Kenneth Taylor, assistant deputy ministey of finance, said last night that unfettered flexible prices "are a good thing."

"Rigid price controls destroy this extremely useful borometer of supply and demand,' the government prices and dollar expert said in a speech to the Ottawa branch of the Canadian Association of Consumers.

However, excessive price fluctuations could do much damage to a country's economic and social structure.

The way to halt this damage, said Mr. Taylor, is not price-control but by confining the factors behind price behavior: money and credit. They are taxation and spending policies and by a variety of other means that go to the root causes of inflation and deflation."

"For we must remember that the behavior of prices is the outward symptom of a condition; and as one does not cure a fever by fixing the thermometer so the cure for inflation or deflation must be directed to the cause rather than at the effect."

Mr. Taylor was hopeful that we can look forward over the course of years to a future in which governments, supported by an enlightened and informed public opinion, will be able to do a much better job of preventing wide fluctuations in prices . . . the wire policies are not always popular in the short run. . . that is why in a democracy we stand in so great need of an enlightened and informed public opinion. . .

Prices Tied Together

Since prices were "inextricably tied up together," controls on one set of prices could not be maintained without controls on other sets, Mr. Taylor said.

"Take, for example, a simple commodity like fluid milk, the producer, the processor and the distributor of milk will quite reasonably demand that you also control his costs.

"The dairy farmer will insist that you control the prices of his feed and his fertilizers. If you control the prices of feed and fertilizers, you are almost immediately drawn into the control of a wide range of chemicals, fish oils, and other ingredients, even to the jute bags in which they are packed.

"The control of the price of feed grains will draw you into the control of wheat and flour, because if the price of wheat gets out of proportion to the price of feed grains the farmers will not feed enough oats and perhaps too much wheat. . .

"However, if you control the price of fluid milk, you will sooner or later have to control wholesale and retail prices of products, because if you hold down the price of fluid milk and dairy feed prices are allowed to rise, you will find farmers tending to withdraw from the fluid milk market and to put their milk into other and more profitable lines.

"You may find yourself with surpluses of cheese, or milk powder, or evaporated milk, and a shortage of fresh milk. In other words, to do a thorough job of stabilizing the price of milk, you sooner or later drawn into a complete control of the whole economy."

Moderator Says Primate's Death Loss to Nation

Newcastle, N.B., Nov. 21. (CP)—The head of the Presbyterian Church in Canada said today that the death of Most Rev. George F. Kingston, primate of the Church of England in Canada, is "a loss to all the churches and to the nation as well".

Rt. Rev. F. Scott Mackenzie, of Montreal, visiting here, said Archbishop Kingston was "a great leader whose eminent gifts, clear-sighted Christian statesmanship and broad Christian charity were known and admired far beyond the bounds of his own communion."

"On behalf of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, we extend the deep sympathy of our church, first of all to his widow and family and to the entire membership of our sister communion."

Nationalists Raid Red-Held Town

Taipei, Formosa, Nov. 21. (AP) —A bold raid by 6,000 Chinese Nationalist guerrillas against the Red-held South China city of Wuchow was reported by Nationalist sources today.

The report said the guerrillas entered the city Nov. 13 and withdrew after clearing out three military depots, inflicting heavy casualties on the communist garrison and capturing 40 red party workers.

Wuchow is 120 miles west of Canton.

SCARCITY OF DEER

Thessalon, Ont., Nov. 21 (CP) —A suggestion that aerial patrols and machine guns be used against packs of wolves roaming the woods of the Algoma district has been directed at the Lands and Forests Department. Hunters and trappers report a scarcity of deer in the area and believe the wolves are responsible.

Workers Enjoying Northern Living on Labrador Base

St. John's, Nfld., (CP) — It might be surprising to some, but most of the Canadian civilian workers on Labrador bases enjoy the life of the northland.

Take Goose Bay, owned by Canada but operated jointly with the United States. Since the big airport was constructed in 1941 Goose Bay has become a beehive of activity and through the years Canadians from the mainland to British Columbia have moved in to work for the United States Air Force.

Workers find employment in every type of occupation professional, supervisory, skilled trades, fire fighting, maintenance, clerical and stenographic.

An agreeable combination of warm, comfortable living quarters, the U.S.A.F. says, combines with an abundance of good food and a post exchange that stocks everything to take care of necessities of life.

Elenor Nugent of Saint John, N.B., secretary to the civilian personnel officer since last January, is quite happy.

Good Living Conditions

"I like it here," she says, "and living conditions for the girls are fine indeed."

Betty Babil, of Montreal, secretary to the base adjutant, comments that the "climate is much drier in Montreal's."

Alberie Gagne of St. Quentin, N.B., likes the friendly people and the "very good food."

An old-timer, Ronald Maher of St. John's, says: "Living quarters are excellent and we get plenty of good food during the cold weather." He's also president of the Popular Boat Club.

Other old-timers include Louis Viel of Cornwall, Ont., and Frank Hogan of Moncton, N.B. Among the girls are Doris MacPherson of Montague, P.E.I.; Isobel Measley of Souris, P.E.I.; and Marjorie Henry of Ottawa.

HOLDING HIS OWN

Toronto, Nov. 18 — (CP) — Most Rev. George F. Kingston, 81 - year - old Primate of the Church of England in Canada, who suffered a heart attack last Monday, still is "seriously ill" but is "holding his own," his doctor said today.

Dr. Cameron Gray said there has been no change in the Primate's condition for several days.

"He is no better but he isn't slipping either," said Dr. Gray.

Archbishop Kingston's son, Rev. F. Temple Kingston, Padre at the navy base at Cornwallis, N. S., arrived here yesterday by plane.

FRANKFORD

Frankford — Mr. and Mrs. George Montgomery, Mrs. Harry Montgomery and Mrs. Lloyd Hanna were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Smith Osterbout, as they celebrated Mrs. George Montgomery's, Mrs. Harry Montgomery's and Mrs. Smith Osterbout's birthdays, which occurred during the week. Although it was a most enjoyable time, an annual affair with the folks, there was a note of sadness as all remembered the get-together of a year ago. Since that time, Mr. Harry Montgomery has passed to his reward, and Mr. Lloyd Hanna is a patient in Kingston Hospital. Congratulations go out to these folks on the occasion of their birthdays.

Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lohnes were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lohnes, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lohnes of Belleville, and Gene Lohnes. The occasion was Mr. Harry Lohnes' birthday.

Got Her Man

Frankford, like any other town or city has its gang of cowboys and Indians. Not every town, however, has a Roelin' Dootie' Cow Girl. Sue Anne Wallace can fire a cap gun with the best of boys, and is gaining quite a reputation for her adventures around town. Friday night, she accompanied her father to the United Church, where Dad sings in the choir. While the songsters were rehearsing an anthem for that Sunday, Sue-Anne, with the ever-ready cap gun slipped into the Rose-Lowery Hall to see what she could stir up in the way of adventure. Suddenly, someone was heard approaching the door, so Sue Anne stepped into a corner out of sight. As a tall figure appeared in the doorway, the heroine poked the barrel of her gun into his ribs, and in a stern voice shouted: "Stick 'em up!" When Sue Anne walked around to see who her captive was, she discovered that she had just held up Rev. R. MacEachern, pastor of the United Church.

Mrs. Martha McFarland returned home from Kingston General Hospital on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Sine and family of Harold, Mr. and Mrs. Mac Wilson and family were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Elliott.

Mr. and Mrs. William Armit, of Brighton, were Friday night guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Westlake, in Batawa.

The Young People's Union of the Batawa and Frankford United Church held a skating party in Belleville on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Charles Patrick spent Sunday with her daughter, Mrs. Hugh Patrick, in Batawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carlisle, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Chard were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Carlisle.

Mrs. C. E. Wilson, of Trenton, spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Mac Wilson and family.

Mrs. L. Sharpe and grandson, Mark Holden, and Mr. Bob Carlisle are spending this week in Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Carman Westlake spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Westlake of Frankford, and Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Sharpe of Hilton.

Mr. and Mrs. James Potts, of Trenton, were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hayward and son Jimmy spent the weekend with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Ormiston, in Whitby.

The regular meeting of the Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle C. A.'s was held Friday evening in the Church at 8 p. m. President Red Solmes was in charge of the meeting. Ray Mahope led the song service. Several choruses were sung. Lonnie Reid led the sword drill. Ruth Reilly led in testimonies. Carl Andrews brought the Word from St. John's Gospel. Ruth Reilly and Reg Solmes favored with a duet. Mr. Thomas Bata has purchased a new car from Montgomery Sales.

Ray Plumton's hunting party returned this week, and report real success, getting their count.

The Frankford Boy Scouts held their weekly meeting in the office of E. G. Lohnes Friday evening. It was necessary to vacate the regular meeting place in the Community Hall in order that the Moose Lodge could hold their banquet. The Scouts were paid a visit by Field Commissioner A.L. Jackson of Trenton. Real progress was made in passing of tests.

Commissioner Jackson gave the boys a talk on some of the points of Scouting.

The Canadian Canners hunting party have returned to town. They were successful in getting their count, as well as four black bears.

Miss Carol Wannamaker attended the Santa Claus parade in Toronto Saturday.

Miss Carol Routley of Peterborough spent the weekend with Miss Marilyn Spencer.

Miss Mary Montgomery has purchased the dwelling formerly owned by Carl Lohnes through Montgomery Real Estate office.

Mrs. Selborne Sharpe and daughter Elaine are spending a holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Parry, at Port Perry.

Mrs. Olive May, Mr. and Mrs. Jack May and son, visited Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carlisle, on Sunday.

The regular bi-monthly meeting of the W. M. C. of the Full Gospel Tabernacle, was held at the home of Mrs. George Miller in Batawa on Wednesday afternoon. The president, Mrs. Gerald Currie opened the meeting. Mrs. R.Spurrell spoke on a text from Isaiah. Letter of thanks from Rev. Bouchard in Montreal was read for the Thanksgiving gifts. Toques and mitts were handed in. The Prayer bulletin was read by Mrs. Elsie Payne. Ladies are to meet Thursday afternoon at the Church to pack boxes. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Harold Rogers. Attendance showed 15 members and three children present.

The Frankford United Church W. A. held their annual bazaar in the Rose-Lowery Hall Wednesday afternoon, and report a successful evening. The W. A. turned the candy table over to the C. G. I. T., the girls doing well at this.

DON'T HAVE A SINGLE TRACK MIND ON A DOUBLE TRACK RAILROAD!

IT PAYS TO WAIT!

Many railway crossings have more than one track, which multiplies the hazard to the motorist and makes the need for caution doubly great. The drawing above emphasizes one of the prime dangers of the multiple-track crossing — the train on the farther track obscured by the train moving in the opposite direction on the near track. This motorist would have saved himself trouble if he had waited a second or two to see if the farther track was clear before proceeding. The Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada received reports of 443 railway crossing accidents in the 12-month period ended June 30th last. These accidents took 140 lives and injured 549 others. In some cases motorists disregarded protective devices placed at crossings for their protection, and in others disregard of the basic rules of safe driving was responsible for needless loss of life and injury.

$4,000 IN CASH TAKEN

Montreal, Nov. 21.—(CP)—McGill University not only lost the Intercollegiate football title Saturday but also dropped nearly $4,000 to thieves who broke into their gymnasium.

Police said Monday thieves gained entrance into the Sir Arthur Currie memorial gymnasium-armory by smashing a window. Police said the burglars forced open a large safe containing about $5,000 and carted off a smaller safe containing $570.

The money stolen was receipts from the sale of football programs and refreshments during the game with Western Mustangs. Gate receipts were placed elsewhere and were not touched.

ABSENCE MADE READERS GROW FONDER

After a 47-day newspaper blackout, resulting from a strike by the mailers and truckers unions, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegram went back on the streets and news-starved Pittsburghers grabbed the copies off the stand like the proverbial hot cakes. Three dailies in Pittsburgh were affected by the strike, which ended with wage increases and agreements to arbitrate other differences. — Central Press Canadian.

"HARNESSED RAINDROPS, SONNY!" It's a true answer . . .

In Shipshaw powerhouse you are awed by the hum of twelve gigantic generators. They are driven by rain and snow which fill Lake St. John and pour down the Saguenay River.

The water is channelled to a man-made lake on top of a hill. Then it rushes down tunnels chiselled through solid rock to dash against turbines like the model at which the boy is peering — but weighing 50 tons.

The turbines drive generators. The electricity they generate speeds to nearby Arvida. There it refines shining aluminum out of bauxite from British Guiana.

Over 1000 Canadian companies form aluminum into all sorts of useful articles. All this means work for Canadians. This country supplies nothing but the raindrops — and the brains, hands and enterprise to harness them.

The hum in the power house at Shipshaw is a hymn of progress. It is a sound of Canada's standard of living going up . . .

Rockets Open Home Season By Defeating Port Hope 5-2 In Rough, Tough Contest

By JACK BROWN

The Junior "B" Rockets lived up to their name here last night in Memorial Arena as they trimmed the Port Hope Panthers 5-2.

The Meronek coached boys took an early lead, faded a bit in the second period, and then rocketed back in the third to complete as they outdrove the Port Hope crew.

The team that showed here last night couldn't be compared to the crew that lost to Peterborough Oddfellows last Wednesday night.

They used their bodies heartily in a thumping exhibition of power, and their work around the Port Hope net showed that they are going to be in the thick of the hunt all season long.

A rousing free-for-all at the end of the game saw almost every player on both squads scuffling at the north end of the rink. The mix-up started when Bill Turland of the Rockets and Flesch of Port Hope roughed each other, and referee Hall cut the two as the referees restored order.

In the first period, play ranged up and down the ice from one end to the other, with neither side having any advantage. Both teams were a man short at times, but neither took advantage of it. The break came when Carey got a beautiful goal from Doran. The Panthers evened it up at 8.17 on a beautiful assist one from Medhurst, who was one of the big guns for Port Hope all night.

Second Started Even

They went into the second canto even-stephen, and the locals showed up well even though Turland was put in the sin bin a minute after the period started. He almost got himself a goal when he stepped back on the ice, and immediately after drew a faceoff. Henoulk slid one right across the Port Hope doorstep, Houle, a standout all night for the Belleville squad, stickhandled his way through three of the Panthers, and then lifted it over the net.

The Rockets were away ahead on the play in the first few minutes of the second round, but they just couldn't get the puck in the Port Hope net. Then at 8.17, Port Hope went one up when the Fisher-Wilson-Fisher line combination clicked one. Six penalties were issued in the period, Hennessy of Belleville drawing two. The locals seemed to play their best when they were a man down, and although they burned the heat on in the last few minutes of the second period they couldn't beat McGregor in the Port Hope net.

But oh, that third period! Henoulk got the second of his two penalties at 19.32 of the second for slashing, and the Rockets had to play a man short for the first minute and a half of the third. But they roared up and down the ice at full strength until finally Houle put them back into the game for sure at 4.10 on a beautiful solo effort.

Houle followed that one up by passing to Green at 8.46, and the Belleville Kids were ahead, and never looked back. They were handing out bodychecks that were jarring the rafters, and the going behind the blue line was hot and heavy.

Mason Scores One

Within another four minutes, Mason put the locals two up when he potted a pass from Henoulk, and with that under their belts, the Rockets still tore. Flesch, of Port Hope, got a well-deserved boarding penalty when he bashed Henoulk into the end boards and knocked him out. He was off for five minutes, and while the Port Hope crew stayed in the game, that miscue broke their backs.

Finally, Houle (he's in again), nailed another one from Henoulk and Mason at 17.07, to end the scoring. Turland, on the Belleville defence, played a good game of goal, and that isn't taking anything away from Hall. Penalty Time and time again the defence pokechecked or batted the puck away from the Port Hope attackers.

Turnbull and Mantle played a whale of a game on defence, too, as they smacked into the Port Hope boys time after time. On the forward lines, you just couldn't pick out two or three boys who were flying—they were all going for all they were worth all the time. The pass plays were dazzling, and several times they kept the puck in the Port Hope ballwick for minutes on end.

The Rockets go again tonight in Lindsay, in a game moved up from Wednesday night.

The lineups:

Belleville: Goal, Barclay; defence, Mantle, Turland; centre, Doran; wings, Carey, Gilmour.

Alternates, Houle, Mason, Henoulk, Brown, Hunter, Carey, Turnbull, Green.

Port Hope: Goal, McGregor; defence, Hennessy, Flesch; centre, Wilcox; wings, D. Fisher, J. Fisher; Alternates, Goody, Flesch, Campbell, Medhurst, Downey, McKeen, Lawless, Freeman.

Peterborough, Nov. 20 (CP) — Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational School Juniors defeated Welland High School 25-8 here Saturday to win the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association title for the third straight year.

Kowal scored a major which wasn't converted to put Welland ahead early in the game but from then on the visitors were outplayed.

American Imports Ruled the Roost In Football Year

(By The Canadian Press)

Figures can be boring but cold statistics on the Canadian scholastic football season make interesting reading. The American imports figured mainly in the shape of things with Canadian - born products listed "among those present."

The Yanks stole everything but admission - ticket stubs.

They made room for only one Canadian on each of the Big Four and Western Canada Conference All-star teams selected annually by writers and coaches of the Canadian Press. They split the 11 berths with Canadians on the Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union mythical team.

They made the leading scorers in two of the three leagues, took two of the three individual trophies awarded players for outstanding performances and scoring, and provided the coaching talent for nine of the 11 teams.

Sixty-six Americans on the roster and 30 received an award of some kind, either as all-star or runner-up. It was the first year of Canadian football for 22 of the 23 all-stars.

One team, the Imperials of the ORFU, went "Canadian" all the way — to the Union playoffs.

Paddy Young, New York middleweight slugger, and Kid Gavilan of Havana, ranking welterweight contender, were matched Monday for a 10-round Madison Square Garden bout, Dec. 15. Young lost a close decision to Fraser Clarke of Belleville in his last start Nov. 10. Gavilan outpointed Billy Graham at the Garden last Friday.

A cigar-smoking cherub of 76 who writes best-sellers, paints pictures, exhibits shorthorn calves and "eats like a horse" says Hitler is also a renowned racehorse owner. Winston Churchill has just purchased another foal, bringing his string of under-age animals to five. He also owns a brood mare and a filly. He has only one colt in training now, like its owner, it's one of the finest stayer in Europe. The Conservative leader bought his first horse last year. It was the French bred Colonist II which since has won 11 of its 16 starts and amassed at stake money totalling more than five times the 1,500 guineas (about $4,500) Churchill paid for it.

New York Rangers of the National Hockey League sent veteran forward Alex (Killer) Kaleta to Hershey of the American League yesterday. The move was part of last week's deal with Boston Bruins. In that swap the Rangers obtained forward Ed Sandford and Zellio Toppazzini from the Bruins for Dunc Fisher.

Kaleta, extremely popular with Garden fans came to the Rangers after the 1947-48 season in trade with Chicago Black Hawks.

"A plan to train a jumping team worthy to represent Canada at the 1952 Olympics was announced Monday by Maj. Gen. Churchill Mann, non-riding captain of the Canadian equestrian team. Young riders from all five of Canada would be given a chance to train under top instruction for the difficult Olympic courses and, to form a team composed of the best horses in the Dominion.

Gordie Drillon, coach of Moncton Hawks of the Maritime Senior Hockey League, has been given his release. Club officials said that George Bell, former player in the M.S.H.L. and secretary manager of the club, will be acting coach pending appointment of Drillon's successor.

The United States Golf Association has announced that Willie Turnesa of Elmsford, N.Y. has accepted appointment captain of the Walker Cup team and Western Canada Conference All-star teams selected annually by writers and coaches of the Canadian Press. They split the 11 berths with Canadians on the Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union mythical team.

Former heavyweight champion Joe Louis was pronounced in good shape Monday for his 10-round "comeback" starter against Cesar Brion at the Chicago Stadium Nov. 29. Both Louis and Brion appeared before the Illinois Athletic Commission for physical tests.

A Maritime Senior Hockey League team between Saint John Beavers and Halifax St. Mary's was called off after the first period last night following the death of lineman Bill Guilliver, about 40, from a heart attack. Guilliver, a Saint John resident, suffered the seizure 40 seconds before the scheduled end of the period. He died in a dressing room a few minutes later. After a long interval, announcement was made that both officials and players felt the game should not be continued.

Canadian skiers face a stern series of tests this season which will largely decide their chances of making the 1952 Olympics at Oslo, Norway.

Candidates for team berths will have to compete in four of North America's top races in order to receive consideration from the trials selection committee. The western district, Canadian Ski Association, made the choice at a weekend meeting here. The major tournaments are the Open North American championships, the U.S. Nationals, the Dominion championships and the Western Canadian championships.

Larson Thinks Breaks to Decide Grey Cup Final

London, Ont., Nov. 21 (CP)—Take it from Frank Larson, coach of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Toronto Argonauts have "cornered football club."

And Larson isn't trying to juggle the odds in favor of his Bombers when they meet Argos in the Grey Cup final at Toronto's Varsity stadium Saturday. The amiable Bomber coach is basing his statement from his scouting of Argos in their triumphs over Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the Big Four final over Toronto Balmy Beach in the eastern championship.

"Argos are a well-balanced team," Larson said. "They have a good variety of plays and run a good offense.

Butch—as he is known to most of the Bomber players and officials—says the final should be a "wide-open affair, with plenty of passing. As both teams play a similar game, it probably will be the breaks which decide the issue."

He concedes Argos an advantage in Sam Etcheverry Bombers' terrific team spirit—an offset that point.

"I'd sure like to be able to operate on a two-platoon system as Argos do," Larson said. "But as long as our key men are able to keep going, we'll be all right on offence or defence."

Larson, who sat in the press box at Saturday's eastern final, said one really gets a different picture of a team from high up than from along the sidelines.

Not a Single Weakness

"There's quite a few things I noticed from the press box I probably would have missed from down below," he said. "But even at that, it's pretty tough to point out a single weakness in the Argo attack."

Yesterday the Bombers passed through Toronto and arrived in London without fanfare. They got a damp reception at both airlines, a driving rain greeting them in Toronto and a wet snow spelling their arrival here.

Despite the unfavorable weather, Larson soon had his men out on their eastern training grounds at the University of Western Ontario stadium.

Practice was confined to running back of punts, signal drill and a few blocking-up exercises.

Bombers hope to work out here until Thursday, then proceed to Toronto for a practice at Varsity stadium Friday afternoon. They'll spend Friday night in a small Toronto hotel, plastered with signs:

"No Grey Cup tickets—do not disturb."

FIRE LOSSES LOW

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP) Forest fire losses in Ontario this year were the smallest in 10 years, the Department of Lands and Forests reported Monday.

Of some 107,000,000 acres of bushland in Ontario, 37,707 acres were burned by 962 fires, most of which were in the spring. Only 1,412 acres were of mature forest.

T. E. Mackey, chief of the Forest Protection Division, said the low fire toll was chiefly the result of favorable weather. An improved and expanded system of fire detection and suppression, including 50 new steel lookout towers, also contributed as well as better-trained personnel.

Belleville Redmen Swamped By Kingston Nylons 16-2 in Senior Game at Harty Arena

Kingston, Nov. 21 —All the Nylon players but Patterson and Londry figured in the 21 scoring points racked up by the Nylons last night in their 16-2 rout of the Belleville Redmen in an OHA senior game at Jock Harty Arena. The win was Nylons second in the league.

Joe Catlin led the parade with six points, including four goals. Ken Partis with three goals, and two assists, Jack McKeown with three goals, Bob Joyce and Joe Watts, three assists each, and Ken Potts with two assists and a goal were tops.

Keith MacDonald and Mulvihill were the Belleville scorers. The Kingston team had too much power, too many passing plays, and a defence, which turned attacks away all night. Belleville were disorganized with their passing plays not sticking and were rushed on defence. Floyd Udall had a comparatively easy night compared to LeForte in the Bellerive net. LeForte suffered a crack on the nose during the second period and had to retire for repairs.

Pressed Early

For the first three minutes, Nylons kept the puck in the Belleville end but could get no clean shots on goal. Gerow missed an open corner and the play changed ends with Green taking a shot at Udall. Catlin took the puck from Partis, stickhandled his way through the Belleville defence at 3.15 scored. Patterson was given a penalty for interference, then Free joined him 35 seconds later for hooking. No goals were scored while the teams were shorthanded but at 9.43 Aitken slapped the puck past LeForte on a pass from Joyce. The Redmen were disorganized as the Nylons continued pressing. LeForte made two nice saves on Gerow and Londry but 'Bud' Aitken put the Nylon three up when on a pass from Potts he scored. With Londry playing a nice defensive game, the Nylons held off a Belleville bid for a goal and McKeown eased the pressure when he scored on a pass from Watts.

Twenty-three seconds later on a fast break, Mulvihill took a pass from Wardhaugh and scored the first Belleville goal. A. McKeown ended the first period scoring from Joyce at 19.17.

Seven Penalties

The second period which started slowly livened up considerably with seven penalties being handed out. The Belleville defence was going to the dressing room for repairs and six more Nylon goals were scored.

Ken Potts scored first from a scramble after a face off in the Belleville end. At 3.46 Jones drew the Nylon's defence to one side then fed a pass to MacDonald who scored. Harrison and Armstrong missed the open net and MacDonald was given a holding penalty. LeForte looked good on Aitken's drive then Patterson was given a penalty for elbowing. LeForte was struck on the nose by Partis' deflected shot and had to go to the dressing room. On the same play Mulvihill drew a two-minute sentence for slashing.

With both teams at full strength Free missed the net on a break and McKeown came back and scored from a scramble around the Belleville net. Green and Londry went to the penalty box and Nylons struck for three fast goals. Catlin got the first from Watts at 7.03. Joe scored the next at 18.31 on a pass from Partis, then Kenny scored unassisted at 19.14. With eight seconds remaining in the period, Joyce and Day were penalized for high sticking.

Udall Makes Save

Udall saved on Mulvihill's shot at the start of the last period, Harrison was checked, when he went in for a shot, then Ed Plumb put the Nylons 11 goals up, when he scored off from Harrison, L. Goyer and Free were taken out by Watts and Gerow on a rush. From a face off in the Belleville end, Partis scored unassisted. A beautiful stick check by Joyce on Catlin to Gerow led to the next Nylon goal at 7.03. Wardhaugh and Plumb were sent off for high sticking and Armstrong scored from Potts with both players off.

Plumb and Wardhaugh came back on and 17 seconds later Londry and Schreider were given two and five minute penalties respectively for fighting. The next penalty at 15.00 to Williams for holding the puck followed Catlin's goal from Watts. Belleville minus two players held off a Nylon attack until Partis scored in the corner of the net from Gerow and Catlin.

The Teams

Belleville: Goal, LeForte; defence, V. Goyer, Williams; centre Wardhaugh; wings, Green, Mulvihill. Subs: Jones, Day, MacDonald, L. Goyer, Sawyer, Free, Schmidt, Schreider.

Nylons: Goal, Udall; defence, Plumb, Patterson; centre, McKeown; wings, Joyce, Aitken. Subs: Watts, Londry, Armstrong, Potts, Harrison, Partis, Catlin, Gerow and Stone.

Canadiens Now Hottest Squad In National Loop

Montreal, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Montreal Canadiens currently are the hottest team in the National Hockey League, with three straight victories, but Toronto's Ted Kennedy is the most effective individual player.

The Canadiens have moved back into undisputed possession of third place with their three in a row. Before that the Habs hadn't won a game in seven starts. But the Canucks now are two points ahead of Chicago Black Hawks, whom they trimmed twice in two nights during the weekend.

Kennedy picked up five points during the week, league statistics released today show, and he now is in second place behind teammate Max Bentley.

Bentley got three points and his total for 17 games is five goals and 17 assists for 22 points. Kennedy got two goals and three assists in three games and now has 12 goals and 13 assists for 19 points.

Toronto's strong hold on the scoring leadership shows up in the team standing. Or the top 16 N.H.L. point-getters, six are from Toronto—and four are right at the top.

Toronto, likewise, heads the teams with 23 points—one more than Detroit. The Leafs have won 10 out of 17 starts and have tied three. The Toronto snipers have fired 55 goals and have allowed only 38, despite a recent slump in the nets.

Detroit, on the other hand, has racked up only 41 goals with 25 against.

But Detroit has the top goal-tending record. Young Terry Sawchuk has two shutouts and an average of 1.67 in 15 games. Toronto's Turk Broda, although he has four shutouts—best record on the circuit—has an average in 14 games of 2.21.

Leaf defenceman Gus Mortson has 42 penalty minutes to top that department, and Toronto also has the toughest team reputation. The Leafs have had 195 penalty minutes called against them compared with 197 for Montreal and only 116 for Detroit.

FRANKFORD

Last Three Teams In Bowling Loop Gaining Ground

Frankford — The Frankford Bowling League saw action again Thursday night in Trenton, with the last three teams gaining valuable ground in the standing. The Hornets took five points from Screwballs, to climb into a seventh place tie with the Royals, who were taking three points from the Sharpshooters. The Monarchs strengthened their hold on the league lead by taking five from the Aces, but failed to widen the gap by much, as the Alley Cats made it a clean sweep over the Lucky Strikes, moving into second place.

Next week, the Sharpshooters and Monarchs will tangle on 1 and 2, the Alley Cats and Screwballs on 3 and 4, Aces and Royals on 5 and 6, with Lucky Strikes meeting Hornets on 7 and 8.

Standing:
Team	Won	Lost	Points
Monarchs	18	14	42
Alley Cats	17	15	40
Aces	16	16	37
Screwballs	15	15	36
Lucky Strikes	15	15	35
Sharpshooters	15	15	34
Hornets	12	18	28

Christmas is fast approaching and before Christmas come the exams (horrible thought!)

By the way, what became of those good old days when students were students and assemblies were looked forward to as a lot of fun?

Have you ever had someone say to you 'Gee, but it must be nice to have a cafeteria in your own school. Imagine having a hot dinner every day!" You groan and remember the last time you tried to buy your lunch at B.C.I. If you're lucky you may get in the middle of the lineup, but you might as well be at the rear. This line just doesn't move. Students form a double line at the front and get waited on before those who have been standing much longer. Is this fair play? Remember that you may be in the same spot some day.

OPEN EVENINGS

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Bridge players are often in doubt about a defensive overcall of one no-trump. For instance, suppose south opens with one heart and west bids one no-trump. What kind of a hand does west show?

In Horse Sense this overcall of one no-trump is a modified double for takeout. It shows a hand that is similar to a takeout double. But there are three variations in its basis.

A takeout double shows a hand that is as good as an opening one bid; five tricks, four of which are high cards, two of which are sure. Notice that two are sure and only four need be high.

The defensive no-trump also shows five tricks. But all five of them are highs and only one need be sure. Besides which, there are two stoppers in the opponent bid suit.

Notice that each shows five tricks. In other details they may differ. But each compensates for any difference. One shows four highs and two sures; the other shows five highs and two opponent stoppers.

Or compare them like this: The takeout double shows all that is expected in an opening one bid; the defensive no-trump may have one less sure if he has one more high and two opponent stoppers.

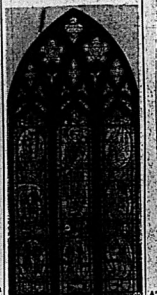
For another comparison, a defensive no-trump is like an opening no-trump, needing five high cards each. But the first needs only one sure and two opponent stoppers; the other needs two sure.

Take a look at this west hand:

♠K J 6
♥Q 10 9
♦A Q 5
♣K 9 3

South opened with a bid of one heart. What should west do? He lacks two sure tricks for a takeout double. But he has two stoppers id hearts and five high cards.

So, he makes a simple defensive overcall of one no-trump. He may have more than these minimes. But he should not have less in either.



Every bid has its own meaning and should mean it.

Jap Phone Book Is Best Seller

Edmonton (CP)—A best-seller in Japan is the English translation of the Tokyo telephone book.

Barbara Vanlandingham of Wisconsin, a stewardess who flies through Edmonton on the Orient run for Northwest Airlines, describes the book as "a must" on everybody's reading list.

"You can find practically anything but what you're looking for in it," she said.

For instance the Made in Order Tailor Control Union is listed under food products. Pawn brokers come under Finance and Northwest Airlines is listed under land transportation.

If you want something repaired there are specialists running the gamut from automobile dissectionist to hair brush repairer.

Listed under food products are such oriental delicacies as scorched snake and devil's tongue paste.

"Now I know what they mean when they say the mysterious east," said Miss Vanlandingham.

BIG PAYMENT

Largest marine insurance payment is believed the $7,000,000 paid for the stranding of the Magdalene off Dio De Janeiro in 1949.

Hollywood, Nov. 21 — (AP) — George Murphy, back from a national tour, announces that Hollywood should learn some things about love, juvenile style.

The actor has just returned from a 40-day jaunt to 23 cities in 16 states during which he was interviewed by about 100 high school paper editors and spoke to an estimated 25,000 high school kids in nine cities.

I got a special report from him on what the youngsters think of Hollywood.

"On one thing they were unanimous," Murphy declared. "They hate the mushy love scenes in movies. They have their own ideas about love-making and they don't agree with the way it is shown in movies.

They're Right

"I can see their point. Whenever there is a love scene in a picture, the two stars go into a Gorgeous-George clinch. Kids are different. I remember when I was a kid, I would walk in front of my girl's house. If she happened to look out the window, I got a terrific thrill."

But Hollywood doesn't go for such subtlety. Murphy recalled a picture he did with Lana Turner some years ago. Lana played a young gal with a crush on George. He was required to give her a goodnight kiss in one scene.

"I gave her a peck on the cheek, as a guy would with a younger sister," he recalled. "The producer said I should take her in my arms and give her a real smack. I disagreed, so we shot it three ways—his, mine and a medium-sized kiss.

Howler

"When we previewed the big kiss, the audience howled. So the picture was released with the medium-sized one. I still think it should have been a peck."

WAR CAN

The jeep takes her to a town which has just been knocked out by artillery and air strikes.

She was cold. But now she is warmed by the heat from the burning houses and smouldering rubble.

She is comforted by the thought there is no enemy alive here—unless he could live in hell.

With this thought in mind, she decides to look her woman's best when she passes the infantry again on the return trip. She redoes her lips, pushes off her helmet and lets her hair blow in the breeze.

This time the infantrymen see her, all right. And she knows it.

Smiles break the crusts of dirts around the corners of their mouths. They whistle and wisecrack:

"Hey, a woman! And she's a woman! And she's white, too."

She yells back, and then:

"Hey, what the hell kind of an army is this getting to be? Do we get women, too?"

She wants to get out and talk to them. She wants so much to march with them. She wants to do something to help lighten their burdens. But she can't.

She just laughs at their jokes, wise-cracks back at them, hopes they don't see the tears streaming down her face, and feels truly young again.

COMES FROM NIAGARA

Kingston, Nov. 21 — (CP) — They're actually carrying lime-stone to the old limestone city. The nickname given to Kingston a century ago has last some of its meaning today.

Kingston limestone, once widely used, has become too costly because of its hardness. The result is that limestone used here now usually comes from Niagara Falls, where it is softer.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Wednesday, Nov. 22

March 21 to April 20 —(Aries) —Glad to report it's a happy outlook for today. Stimulating for mental work, industrial trades, artistic and scientific professions, household tasks, all honest, useful matters.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus) —It can be a day for unusual attainment, perhaps greater gain than you expected. Of course, you must show the initiative and perseverance to make these possibilities come true. Good luck!

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)— Most encouraging planetary indications. Put a little extra spirit, but also patience, into every effort and achieve really profitable returns from your work and all activities.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)— A tip-top period for your especial talents and the many interests for which Cancer-folk on a whole are gifted. Manager, employee, teacher, student, all worthy fields are favored.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)— Make the most of fresh advantages; a soundly benefic day. Work with metals, machinery; selling and advertising hold bright prospects. Advance in manufacturing, needed commodities.

August 23 to September 23 —(Virgo)—Co-operation with those with whom you work, with superiors, making needed improvements to better quality and output of product-are top-favored now. Very benefic vibrations on whole.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Highlights of this generous, productive day are benefic for the honest worker, advancement for those who earn, deserve it and gratitude with friends. Good work in past gains recognition.

October 24 to November 23 —(Scorpio)—No "clouds" to hamper efforts now, and they can be extremely clever closely knit for research or action on mines needs. Day sponsors laborious trades, railroading, sea travel, government matters.

November 24 to December 22 —(Sagittarius)—Day may not be all favorable for quick profits, financial returns but it is excellent for honest work well planned and executed. Learn, improve, aid future security.

December 23 to January 21 —(Capricorn) — Necessarily slow progress is equally honored now with that which can advance quickly. Study, analyze, give attention to small details that often bring big rewards. Good aspects.

January 22 to February 20 —(Aquarius)— Won't be necessary to go to extremes or resort to the unusual to get ahead now. Whole day sponsors an even procedure to succeed.

February 21 to March 20 —(Pisces)— Closer attention may be needed in matters strictly confidential and of a delicate nature; also handling liquids, oils. Otherwise today encourages all honorable endeavors.

You born today: Sincere, engaging, innately optimistic yet intelligently cautious in action. Maybe not always discreet in speech. Splendid qualifications for happiness and success that should be well developed, rightly employed daily. Prayer, spiritual nourishment are potent helpmates, they build mind and body to withstand the rigors of life and to prepare properly for the life to come. You have unusual talent and skill for profession or trade, just keep building, your faith and perseverance to carry on.

Birthdate: George Eliot (Mary Ann Evans) novelist; George B. Glasing, novelist.

Monday Big Day at Royal Winter Fair

Toronto, Nov. 21—(CP)—Yesterday was a big day at the Royal Winter Fair.

Canada broke a 12-year jinx and won an international horse-jumping competition. An Ontario breeder sold an Aberdeen Angus bull for the biggest price for a bull of this breed in Canadian history. The historic King's guineas baby-beef champion was named.

And then there were more than the Fair's usual quota of grand champions named, with Shorthorns, Herefords, Aberdeen Angus and dual-purpose Shorthorn cattle getting the call.

Tom Gayford, 22-year-old Toronto advertising salesman, rode his light chestnut gelding, Nova Scotia, to victory in a jump-off with Arthur McCaskin of the United States on Paleface, a strawberry roan.

Canada's equestrian showing at the Fair now includes a first, a second—Gayford lost out to Mexico Friday in a jump off—and two thirds. A better-than-average showing, it is expected to lend impetus to the drive of Canada's non-riding captain, Maj.-Gen. Churchill Mann, that Canada should be represented for the first time at the 1952 Olympics with a horse-jumping team.

Bull Sold For $8,300

The Edwards Brothers of Watford, Ont., made history Wednesday when their bull Anoksmere 10th, was sold to Merrydale Farms of St. Francisville, La., for $8,300. The bull placed first in its class yesterday for bulls two years and over.

Alex McIntosh of Guelph, Ont., won the 50 guineas—which were presented to him by Governor-General Alexander—for the best baby-beef steer class in the 25,000 calf club members in Ontario.

Andy, the Aberdeen Angus Steer which won the guineas for 17-year-old Alex, was chosen best of about 30 Aberdeen Angus Hereford and Shorthorn steers. A Shorthorn exhibited by 16-year-old Judy Gibson, a pretty blonde from Oakville, Ont., was second.

The prized King's guineas steer is the past top brought as high as $13,300 in sale at auction during the fair.

In other beef-judging competitions, W. A. Crawford-Frost of Nanton, Alta., and the Richardson Stock Farms of Winnipeg won Steck Farms of Winnipeg kept Ontario breeders and exhibitors from Illinois and Michigan from having all the grand champion and runner-up prizes.

'Third Dimension' Is Being Perfected

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 21 (AP) — Samuel J. Pinanski, president of the Theatre Owners of America, said yesterday that a third dimensional quality is being perfected for movies. This new technique should be entirely perfected within six months, he said. It will provide a "depth" for movies by utilizing three cameras instead of one.

RECORD CATCH

Gloucester, Mass., Nov. 21 — (AP) — A reputed United States record catch of flounder — 225,000 pounds—was landed here yesterday by the Boston trawler Gudrun. Capt. Alex Joransanen said the 17-man crew traveled only three days on the Grand Banks. Gorton-Pew Fisheries company paid $12,376 for the fish.

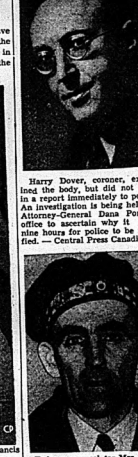
MRS. SULLIVAN CHARGED WITH MURDER "FAMILY SQUABBLE, LIQUOR," SAY POLICE



A "family squabble with liquor" is said by police to have resulted in the death of Francis J. Sullivan, chief legal counsel of the Ontario department of lands and forests. He was found in a room in the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, killed by blows on the back of the head. — Central Press Canadian.

MRS. FRANCIS SULLIVAN

Charged with murder and remanded for a week is Mrs. Francis Sullivan, who avoided cameramen by walking behind a blanket when leaving the courtroom. She and her husband were said to be devoted to one another. — Central Press Canadian.

Harry Dover, coroner, examined the body, but did not send in a report immediately to police. An investigation is being held by Attorney-General Dana Porter's office to ascertain why it took nine hours for police to be notified. — Central Press Canadian.

Defence counsel for Mrs. Sullivan is Royden Hughes, Ottawa. — Central Press Canadian.

Former Director Of Army Medical Services Dies

Ottawa, Nov. 21. (CP)—Maj.-Gen. Robert Marsden Luton, 59, director of medical services for the Canadian Army overseas during the Second World War, died here yesterday after a short illness.

The general, who lived in Chester, N.B., since his retirement from the army several years ago, had attended the recent annual meeting of the Defence Medical Association here. He was visiting his daughter, Mrs. R. J. Smallman, when he suffered a heart attack.

A funeral with full military honors will be held here Thursday, with burial in nearby Beechwood Cemetery.

Born in St. Thomas, Ont., Gen. Luton graduated in medicine from the University of Western Ontario. Prior to the First World War he served in the ranks of No. 15 Field Ambulance, Canadian Army Medical Corps, for four years. He received his commission as lieutenant in 1914 and went overseas with the Canadian Expeditionary Force in February, 1915, as a captain.

He served in France and Belgium from March, 1915 to December, 1918, when he was invalided to England. A year later he was promoted major and employed on medical service in England and Canada until December, 1919. He was awarded the military cross for gallantry under fire.

After the First World War he was appointed to the Medical Corps as a captain, rising to the rank of lieutenant-colonel in 1931. He attended special courses with the Royal Air Force and the Royal Army Medical Corps in 1926 and 1927.

Overseas in 1939

During his 35 years with Canada's Military Medical Services, Gen. Luton held the appointment of deputy director of Medical Services at headquarters here from 1930 until October, 1935. He then assumed duties as district medical officer in Military District No. 3 at Halifax, where he remained until the outbreak of the Second World War.

He went overseas October, 1939, serving at Canadian Military headquarters in London, first as senior medical officer and then as deputy director of Medical Services. He became director of Medical Services in February, 1941.

He was responsible for organization and administration of Canadian hospitals and medical units overseas.

On his return to Canada, he was sent as official Canadian observer to witness the atom bomb test at Bikini. He was appointed honorary colonel commandant of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps in 1947.

36 New Branches Of Institutes Organized in '50

Toronto, Nov. 21 (CP) — The annual board meeting of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario yesterday heard a report that 36 new branches were organized this year, raising the total number of branches to 1,463.

Mrs. J. Cooper of Fort William, provincial convener for citizenship and education, said greater emphasis this year was placed on citizenship.

She said programs were planned first around the needs of each community and extended to a study of constitutional government and the declaration of human rights.

Mrs. J. R. Futcher of St. Thomas, retiring president, gave a resume of the year's work. She reported branches raised about $24,000, quilts and clothing for the Manitoba flood victims.

Wetaskiwin, Alta. (CP) —The Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs here were sorry to see G. T. A. Hutchings of the R.C.M.P. leave for a new post at Rocky Mountain House. He was presented with a travelling bag in recognition of his services here as Cubmaster.

Larger Percentage In Actual Combat Units is Urged

San Francisco, Nov. 21 (AP) —General Mark W. Clark said yesterday that the United States Army will have to reduce the number of men detailed to rear-area service functions and put more men into actual combat units. The army field forces chief said it now takes four men to keep one infantryman in the field. This contrasts with the Russian army where the reverse is true—one man in the rear echelons serves four fighting men.

PACKS IT ALL

Winkler, Man. (CP)—For the first time since it opened four years ago Winkler's corn-canning plant this year was able to pack all the sweet corn produced in the district. That was the produce of 600 acres. In previous years mid-September frosts ended canning for the season.

TEACHERS ASK INCREASE

Hamilton, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Secondary school teachers yesterday asked for a 28-per-cent salary increase, effective this year. The demands were contained in a brief presented to the Hamilton Board of Education.

Also asked is an escalator arrangement which would automatically raise salaries to keep pace with the cost of living; a differential of $1,000 for principals over life salary paid to directors, and a $500 differential for directors over what is paid to the heads of departments.

Red-Supported Congress Talks Itself Weary

Warsaw, Nov. 21 (Reuters) — Sheer fatigue drove delegates to the World Peace Congress back to their hotels early today after a marathon session of 17 hours' speech-making.

The communist-backed Congress is due to end today with a crop of resolutions.

With all the speeches to be made at midnight, the discussion was made to go on through the night. Each speaker was allotted 10 minutes, but the session dragged on.

At 4 a.m., Gilbert de Chambrun, French member of the movement's world bureau, announced that the team of translators, shorthand writers and officials had retired on strike.

At his suggestion many of the remaining speakers — most of them minor delegates—produced their speeches for publication in the four language congress newspaper instead of delivering them.

By that time the 2,000 delegates present at the beginning of the session had thinned down to less than 500.

Prolonged cheers and rhythmic clapping greeted a recorded message from the American Negro singer, Paul Robeson, who was refused an American passport to come to Warsaw.

More speeches followed until the delegates had dwindled to a mere handful and rest was indicated. ers and mothers convicted of killing their babies. The government retains the right to reprieve in special circumstances.

N.Z. Restores Death Penalty After 15 Years

Wellington, N.Z., Nov. 21 (Reuters) — The New Zealand House of Representatives today reintroduced the death penalty—death by hanging—after a respite of 15 years.

The gallows have been idle in New Zealand since 1935 when a Labor government came to power. Labor was pledged to suspend capital punishment from the law.

The new Conservative government, within a year of its election to office, has thus replaced the death penalty in the statute book.

A rise in crimes of violence and murder after the war brought much public agitation to reintroduce hanging. But the Labor government remained firm.

The Conservatives in their election campaign last year promised to put the gallows to use again because they believed that only fear of death would prevent some from taking the life of others.

In today's vote, the government allowed its supporters to decide each according to his own conscience. Only one Conservative joined the Labor ranks in opposing the death penalty, and the vote in favor was 38 to 31.

The new law provides for an automatic death sentence on conviction of murder, excepting only the delegates had dwindled to a mere those under 18, expectant mothers and those convicted of killing their babies. The government retains the right to reprieve in special circumstances.

Bullet Intended For Cab Driver Who Was Fleeing

London, Ont., Nov. 21 (CP) — An automobile mechanic was shot last night by a bullet intended for a cab driver who was fleeing from two of his vehicle-wielding passengers.

The mechanic, William Galbraith, was taken to hospital in serious condition after being wounded while working on a car in the pitroom of a service station.

The taxi driver, John Jolly of Windsor, Ont., escaped uninjured. He told police the shots were fired as he fled from his taxi after fighting with his passengers over payment for a trip.

Jolly told the passengers he would not drive them any farther than London, apparently on a trip from Windsor, unless they paid.

The men escaped on foot.

GRANTED DIVORCE

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking to the market with ma to help her carry things and remind her to buy enough cake and stuff, and ma said, Oh dear, here comes this woman whose name I can never remember. She looked at me and asked to me a dozen times on the street, and it's always like a waking nitemare, because I'm in continual deth terror for fear somebody I know will come along and she'll expect me to introduce her my name, and said.

Meening a medium size lady that kept on smiling and she started to talk to ma, saying, Well, we meet again, it seems.

Yes, like I had nothing with but a single thawt, ma said, and the lady said, I see you're on your way to the market.

Yes, I dont know why, with prices the way they are, ma said. I declare I'd never set foot in the place if it wasn't for necessity of eating, she said.

Which just then I saw Mrs. Hews coming, and I quick pulled ma's elbow to warn her, and ma said, Oh dear, I must be on my way, I reely must.

No, you must not just yet, the lady said. Here comes a frnd of yours that I've always wanted to meet because I like her looks so. You must introduce us, she said, and ma said, Oh, I'd love to, but unfortunately she always breezes by like the wind because she's on 4 citizens committees with a hundred odds and ends invarably on her mind.

Which just then Mrs. Hews started to stop going passed, and ma said, I wouldn't dreem of detaining you, Maud, so be off to your compitises, whichever one it is.

And she gave her a push and Mrs. Hews kept on going looking perprised, and that fetch thing ma did when she got home was to make herself a cup of tea for her nerves, and the 2nd thing was to call up Mrs. Hews to tell her why she pushed her.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a Saturday walk with pop, and Puds Simkins went passed chewing a carmel or something, and I said to pop, That guy is always eating something. It's probably just a habit, pop said, and I said, I know, but jimminy roastaken, if you ask him for a hunk he always claims he's got the last piece in his mouth. That guy would even give a stale crumb to a one legged bird, I said.

Watch out for slander, pop said. The first thing you know it gets repeated and twisted out of all proportion, and does more harm than earthquakes. My frend Mr. Tidmouse was nearly ruined by an apparently innocent little slander, he said, and I said, G, pop, how?

Well, Mr. Tidmous is very absent minded and doesn't always remember where his feet are, so he frequently trips over rugs and things, pop said, and on day his wife, told him in rather a loud tone of voice that it-was a wonder he didn't trip over his own shadow, and at that moment ,,the woman next door happened to be resting her face on the screen door, and she understood Mrs. Tidmouse to say that Mr. Tidmouse had tipped over Mr. Cradow. Mr. Cradow was a nabor who was temporarily confined to a wheel chair with a broken ankle, and naturelly nobody with any sense, Institute would tip him over. Well, in no time at all the report had spread that Mr. Tidmouse was going about tipping over babies in their ca-rages, and from that it was only a step to terning him into a kidnapper, and he was arrested ,and it cost him a lot of time and money to clear his good name. So pop, what if a rumor goes around that Puds wouldn't give a stale crumb to a one legged berd, he's libel to be picked up for stealing chickins. So watch out for slander, pop said.

Which I will.

TURN TO SHEEP

Regina, (CP)— Eric Beveridge, Saskatchewan livestock commissioner, said here that farmers in the province are going back into sheep-raising. He said the future of the industry seems bright.

DUE TO CARELESSNESS

Fort Erie, Ont., Nov. 21 — (CP) — An outbreak of dog-poisoning in the Peace Bridge area during the last few days was due to carelessness rather than malicious-ness. Dr. W. C. Reid, veterinarian, said the 12 cases of dogs poisoned were probably the result of attempts by citizens to kill rats which at this season enter homes from the fields.

I Hear Adventure Calling

By Emilie Loring

"I guess you're right," she sniffed. "You needn't be so stern about it. The dancers are coming out, flocking to the garden. Stout return to my older guests. Here come the Phillips girl—she has a flair for the right clothes—and that Blake Sinclair. Don't like him." Fran stopped beside her. "

"It has been a perfect party, Miss Trent. Thanks for my share of it."

"Glad you enjoyed it." Before Fran was out of hearing she added in a voice that carried:

"Nice of you to tell me your heart's secret, Myles. Who wouldn't love Gene!"

Had Fran paused long enough to hear that or had she imagined it? Miss Trent slipped her hand under his arm.

"Escort your number one girl into the house Myles." He looked down at her sternly.

"I don't know whether I will or not. You may have done me great harm by that last broadcast, Miss Tassie. You intended Fran Phillips to hear it, didn't you?"

"Sure...It worked. The musicians are playing 'I'm Falling In Love with Someone.' She chuckled. "A perfect note on which to make our entrance."

"Sinclair is good but not so good as Jaffray," John Eckhard declared as he dropped into a seat beside Fran in the well-filled Bleachers outside the tennis court at the Country Club. "Hi, Pat," he hailed the small girl the other side of her. With a wave of his pipe he indicated the two tall, white-clad contestants. "Jaffray has endurance." Sinclair started off like a bunch of firecrackers, all snap and sparkle, but he won't last, he's letting his temper get a little out of hand, isn't he?"

A little out of hand, he was furious. Fran recognized the symptoms, the characteristic jerk of his head, the impatient bang of the racket against his knee, it was so like him, he was a bad loser.

"They appeared evenly matched when they started. Now the late Major is gaining." She felt his quick look at her.

"Why dont' you like Jaffray, Miss Phillips? I think he's a prince."

The unexpected question set the blood burning in her cheeks.

"Are you practicing mind reading, Mr. Eckhard? Why assume that I don't like the returned hero?"

"The barb in 'the returned hero' confirms my suspicions." Tennis is as good as an X-ray for charting the sort of life a man has lived."

"You terrify me with your conclusions," she declared gaily. "Are you a psychologist, as well as an artist?"

"You're ribbing me, but I don't mind." My ambition is to paint portraits. To make a success in that field, artistic, not merely financial, one must be able to discover the real person behind a face, to detect spiritual worth often obscured by material commitments."

Fran squeezed the hand of the eagerly listening small girl beside her.

"We'd hate to have him see the real person behind our faces, wouldn't we Patricia?"

"I wouldn't say that. I'm not so bad and you must be sweet all through, Fran, or I wouldn't feel so warm and cozy when I'm with you. Jeepers, He ought to see behind Mummy's and Gene's makeups. I bet he'd paint 'em bright green and red with big yellow polka dots." Eckhard chuckled.

"There speaks a surrealist—in embryo. I can't imagine a more adequate color palette for the portrayal of jangled lives. To turn to a subject more in keeping with this perfect, sea scented afternoon, I'd like to paint you in that white dress Miss Fran."

"In this spectator sports frock? Don't you want something more glamorous?"

"It's perfect with the sunlight bringing out the gold in your hair the touch of jade green in your beads and ring. Sit for me, will you?"

"Gee, don't cry about it."

Patricia's curt suggestion sent a tide of dark red to the edge of his iron-gray hair and lighted a murderous gleam in the eyes behind the owl-like lenses. Before he could verbaly express his reaction she added:

"I guess you're nuts about Fran, but it's peanuts to what a lot of others are. Hal Andrews is the latest. He was at the gallery two mornings looking at your pictures, Mr. Eckhard; then he didn't come. I overheard him tell mother you were a dumb Dora, Fran. What did you say to him?"

A smile twitched at Fran's lips. She had tried Miss Tassie's prescription for getting rid of a wolf. The second morning he appeared, she had kept up a nonsense monologue about herself, had even dragged in an ancient experience of Aunt Becky's. Apparently it had worked.

"Why are you smiling, Fran."

"What is the joke, Miss Phillips?" Eckhard supplemented.

"Game, set, match—to Myles Jaffray."

The announcement from the umpire was followed by prolonged applause. It relieved Fran of the necessity of explaining her smile.

Mr. Sinclair just banged a ball into the net," Pat shrilled. She was on her toes cracking her neck "Now they're shaking hands. I'll bet Blake is hopping 'cause Myles gave him the shut-out-love. I heard him tell Gene he could lick Jaffray with one hand tied behind him."

"Perhaps he lost because he had two to use" Eckhard suggested dryly. "Now that the contest is over have tea with me will you Miss Fran?" He bowed ceremoniously to Patricia. "Your charming friend is included in the invitation."

"Huh, I guess I know when I'd be the spare tire. I'll have tea with my grandmother. You'd better be nice to me, Mr. Eckhard or my grandmother will throw your old pictures out of his gallery." She descended the fast-emptying stand in a series of leaps.

"I didn't know such a little girl could be such a tough brat," Eckhard confided as he and Fran followed Patricia slowly.

"Pat's all right at heart, she hasn't yet learned not to say what comes to the top in that active brain of hers."

"Have you?"

"Not so, Aunt Becky used to say, 'I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, the lamp of experience.' I think my lamp is better, the Golden Rule. Often that light is shielded, obscured by my disagreeable self, but it isn't the fault of the lamp that I don't follow the gleam. It is there always. That sounds terribly preachy, my apologies. Thanks for the invitation to tea, but I promised to meet Blake Sinclair at the Club after—"

"His victory?"

"His 'jabbing' now?"

"Right. Will you have tea with me tomorrow? I'd like to talk over the portrait."

"Not tomorrow, this is my day off. I won't have another for a week. I would love to have tea with you then."

"It's a date. I see Miss Tassie ahead. She will have views on the tournament I would like to hear. She doesn't pull her punches. After I leave her I think of the many brilliant cracks I might have made in rebuttal of her views but it is always after. Where are you to meet Sinclair?"

"On the terrace. He has a table engaged. He'll have to shower and dress. Run along, don't have me on your conscience."

Why, why had Blake behaved like a silly boy about his defeat—come to think of it, a modern boy wouldn't have shown his feelings like that. They were trained to be good sports in games, she thought, as she passed between the tables toward the corner of the terrace where she had been told to meet him. Why should she feel embarrassed, as if she were responsible for his burst of temper?

"Fran, sit here with us. We have two extra seats, one for you one for Myles."

The eager ball, the hand on her arm, dispelled the fog of regret. Her eyes smiled response to the smiling eyes of Natalie Andrews. Miss Tassie was seated beside her, John Eckhard had risen and was standing behind the chair at her left.

"Thanks a million, but I promised to have tea with Blake."

Here he comes, looking as if he could bite the prong from an iron anchor, she observed as she hastened toward him with the foolish thought that if she didn't hurry the storm of his anger might break.

"You played a grand game, Blake," she approved after they had ordered.

"I'm overtrained. I was at my peak three days ago. If the finals had been reached then I would have had Jaffray eating out of my hand."

Would he? Myles must have played as many sets as he to reach the finals.

"Why aren't you playing in the women's doubles, Fran?"

"Who me? You forget I am now a working woman with a job, I can't get off for an afternoon. You're an angel to play with me after office hours, that I may keep in practice."

"Like your job?"

He was crumbling a sandwich. Fran had a premonition that the indifferent question was introductory. What was coming?

"Love it. I grow on its atmosphere, of books and more books and music. I'm learning a lot about the world of art and human nature."

"Where does that last come in?"

"My boss—customers — my boss."

"What do you think of him?"

"I think he's a grand person."

"Keep your voice low when when you answer this question. Has he spoken to you of a painting I left with him for approval?"

Henry Sargent had forbidden her to speak of the theft at the gallery, but if she encouraged Blake to talk he might find out some sort of clue to the disappearance of the Constable.

"He didn't tell me at the time you left it Blake"—so much was true—"I'll confess something that Mr. Sargent doesn't know; remember the morning you and he talked about it on the cliff?"

"I left the painting with him a short time after. Go on."

"I was on the beach below. I didn't hear a word of what you said but I couldn't miss a word of my boss's bellow. When I realized that I was listening to a confidential conversation, I covered my ears and shut out his voice and your murmurs. When I unfastened them the voices above had ceased."

"He didn't tell you that I delivered the painting?"

Trip in Servers is Thrill For Sightseers in Paris

By CAMILLE LEMERCIER

Paris—(Reuters)— Tourists in search of new sightseeing thrills can now take a boat trip along the sewers of Paris.

Every Thursday in summer, and every other Thursday in winter, a trap opens slowly near the Madeleine Church and a sewerman in blue overalls, long rubber boots and sailor cap pops out among the elegant west end crowd on the square.

Parisians and provincial visitors who have seen the municipal posters advertising the ride, and foreign tourists who have heard about it through travel agenies, gather around.

The pay about five cents to the sewerman and descend a winding iron staircase The tourists find themselves in an arched gallery built with paving stones. A small motor boat waits on the stream of polluted water. On either side of the stream, which is about 11 feet wide and three feet deep, runs a platform. The arched ceiling is about 10 feet above water level.

An occasional miniature drawbridge spanning the stream opens up as the boat chugs upstream.

Pop came down to breakfast this morning and he said, William, do you realize that suit you're wearing is 2 years old?

Yes, I know, it's practically your best suit, pop said. There's lots of life in it yet, he said, and ma said, Oh, shucks, life, if that's your only fault, I give up.

I respect your broadmindedness, my dear, pop said, and ma said, Thank you, and just for further proof that I'm on your side, I'll order a new fall trimmed outfit that I dont really need. Just so everybody will realize that you're merely eccentric and not stingy. So you'll be able to pay the bill for my new costume with a cleer conscience, she said.

You win, my dear, pop said. What do you say to meeting me downtown Friday of next week? he said, and ma said, What do you say to today of this week?

PRIME MINISTER WILL ATTEND LONDON PARLEY

Commonwealth P.M.'s Will Meet in January

Ottawa, Nov. 22—CP—Prime Minister St. Laurent announced today that he has accepted an invitation to attend a meeting of commonwealth prime ministers in London early in January.

"The meeting will discuss questions of common concern, including aspects of the present situation," said Mr. St. Laurent.

Invitation to the conference came from Prime Minister Attlee of Britain.

Mr. St. Laurent said the prime ministers of Australia, Ceylon, India, New Zealand, Pakistan and Southern Rhodesia have accepted Mr. Attlee's invitation. Prime Minister Malan of South Africa will not be able to attend but will send a member of his cabinet to represent him.

Attended '48 Meeting

Mr. St. Laurent attended the 1948 conference of commonwealth prime ministers although he was not prime minister of Canada at the time. The Canadian government then was headed by the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King.

At the 1949 conference of commonwealth prime ministers Canada was represented by external affairs minister Pearson. In delegating Mr. Pearson Mr. St. Laurent said that he would be prepared to go himself if developments at the conference made it necessary.

The conference, held in April, came only a couple of months before the last general federal election in Canada. Mr. St. Laurent was going to the country for the first time as leader of the Liberal party and as prime minister.

In his announcement, Mr. St. Laurent said the forthcoming conference will follow customary practices. The meeting will be private to enable a confidential exchange of views to take place. He did not say where he will accompany him on the journey to London.

IMPROVE METHOD

Prague, Nov. 22 — (Reuters) — Czechoslovakia's State Health Institute has perfected a method of preventing the regenerating streptomycin from the urine of patients treated with the drug, according to the Prague newspaper Svobodone Slovo. About one-fifth of the total amount given to a patient can be regenerated and filtered for re-use under the new system, the paper said, so that the final loss of the drug was removed from about 45 to 15 per cent.

U.N. Patrols Probe Front To Find Where Reds Plan Stand

Seoul, Nov. 22 —(AP)— Heavy bombers blasted communist staging bases in northeast Korea today as infantry patrols probed along the entire front to find where the communists plan to make a stand.

Waves of Superforts rained 140,000 pounds of high explosives on the Musan border area while other B-29s struck the port of Chongjin, 45 miles to the southwest, in the heaviest raid of the week at Musan.

North Koreans are reported reorganizing and Chinese communists concentrating at Musan to block the United Nations march toward the Soviet Siberian border.

Musan is 80 miles northeast of Hyesanjin, where United States 7th Division troops raised the United Nations blue-and-white flag Tuesday on the Yalu River opposite red Manchuria. Other 7th Division infantrymen went hunting for a fight with two communist battalions reported to be holed up 10 miles southwest of Hyesanjin.

Gen. MacArthur's war summary in Tokyo reported:

"United Nations forces continued to advance generally along the entire Korean battle front yesterday (Tuesday.)"

Here's the way the front appeared from east to west:

East coast'— Eight-inch guns of the U.S. cruiser St. Paul paved the way for the South Korean Capital Division pursuing "a retreating, disorganized enemy" toward Siberia.

South Koreans were eight miles south of Chongjin, port city 55 miles from the Soviet border where the reds apparently were preparing to make a stand. B-29s bombed Chongjin after marine airmen ran into heavy anti-aircraft fire there.

Doucett Opens New Bridge Over Nation River

Chesterville, Nov. 22 (CP) — A new bridge over the Nation River was opened to traffic eastern Ontario community in bitter weather yesterday by Ontario Highways Minister Doucett.

The $150,000 steel and concrete three-lane span replaces a one-lane bridge which has served the district for 80 years.

"The highways minister said on the old Chesterville span was only one of 15,000 in Ontario which has outlived their usefulness. Eventually, he added, the Ontario government hopes to replace all of them with bridges similar to the bridge here.

However, if we are to cope with the through traffice in our province we must spend more than ever before on the construction of King's Highways in Ontario," he added.

The minister said that since 1941, motor vehicle registration in Ontario has increased by more than 300,000 and now is increasing at the rate of 15,000 a month.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Nov. 22 (CP)—Synopsis: The coldest wave of the year appears imminent. The frigid air that has covered the prairie provinces for the past few days, giving temperatures from 20 below to 45 below at night, is now moving southeastward and is expected to cover all Ontario by Thursday evening.

Ahead of the cold air a storm centre will bring snow to Central Ontario and rain to the southern portion of the province with the precipitation becoming snowflurries as the mercury drops.

Canada's Deep-Sea Cargo Fleet Which Appeared Headed For Rocks Staging Comeback

Ottawa, Nov. 22. (CP)—Canada's deep-sea merchant fleet is staging a comeback.

A year ago it appeared headed for the economic rocks. Now, it is sailing smoother waters.

And it is about 50 per cent greater than was anticipated by the government last December when it announced a subsidy plan to keep a fraction of the post-war fleet under the Canadian flag for a year.

At that time, Canada had about 175 deep-sea vessels of the dry-cargo type, and many of them were in "mothballs" for lack of business due to their high operating costs in a keenly-competitive market. The fleet appeared to have little chance of survival.

"It has been demonstrated," Prime Minister St. Laurent told the Commons last Dec. 8, "that Canadian vessels with their present high costs cannot be operated."

A Subsidy

A government plan was put into effect, aimed at salvaging a portion of the fleet temporarily, until the creation of a shipping pool of North Atlantic Pact powers that would provide Canada with ships in the event of war.

Assisted by Subsidy

This called for retaining only about 60 vessels under the Canadian flag, to be assisted for one more operating year—by a $3,000,000 federal subsidy. As many of the remainder as possible were to be transferred to British registry, with their ownership remaining in Canada.

Permission was obtained for putting 123 ships under the British flag. But, in the meantime ocean shipping business has picked up, and Canadian owners of only 95 of the ships have taken advantage of the scheme to make their vessels with lower-wage British crews and participate in sterling cargoes.

Difference of Half Mile Prevented Great Disaster

By GRAHAM TROTTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Edmonton, Nov. 22 —(CP)— The difference of half a mile prevented yesterday's death toll in the mountain train crash from reaching into the hundreds, engineers of Canada's special force said here today.

Their westbound troop train had crossed a bridge straddling a 300-foot canyon and travelled another half a mile before it rammed head-on into the Trans-Continental passenger train on a mountain curve.

"If we had met over that bridge our whole train would have plunged into the canyon and not very many would have survived," said Lieut. Paul Cullen of Montreal.

Lieut. Cullen said he was sitting in the rear of the third passenger coach from the front of the troop train. The coach ahead telescoped and landed on top of the front section of the third coach.

The trooper's engine shot into the air and landed on top of the second coach, "crushing it down to the rails."

Almost all the dead and injured were in the second and third coaches, all of wooden construction, just disintegrated. The wreckage was piled a good 20 feet high. It wasn't recognizable as anything but a jumble of splintered wood."

Gunner Jim Campbell, of Mountain Grove, Ont., also was in the rear of the third coach. "I was sitting in it that coach and only five of us came out of it," he said. "The rest were either killed or injured. We could see some of our boys buried underneath it all but couldn't get at them."

One soldier was cut in two. Two others had their heads found. The leg of one of the crew was found outside the cabs. Debris was scattered all over the mountain side, some hanging high up in trees.

The dead that could be extricated from the wreckage were placed in a coach at the rear of the train that was converted into a morgue.

Says Red Jets Out-Perform U.S. Fighters

London, Nov. 22 — (AP) — A Member of Parliament asserted today Russian — made jet planes out-performed U. S. fighter craft in Korea and are powered with engines sold to the Soviet Union by Britain.

Conservative Reginald Bennett raised the question.

The Labor government has acknowledged selling Russia almost 100 Rolls-Royce jets of the third category in 1947 and 1948. Critics of this action claim it enabled Soviet engineers to produce jet power plants in the speed-of-sound class much sooner than would otherwise have been possible.

Lt.-Col. G. A. Tokaev, fugitive Russian aeronautics expert, wrote for the British magazine Flight last August:

"It is not an exaggeration to say that the U.S.S.R. is probably 10 years behind the world's foremost exponents of jet development.

"Having awakened from their slumbers those responsible suddenly realized they had strayed into a dangerous blind alley. But the way out appeared quite unexpectedly. The British authorities came to the rescue and generously placed a certain number of jet units — the excellent Nenes."

Engines Were Tangled Mass Covered By Steam Says Passenger on Train

Jasper, Alta., Nov. 22. (CP)— The story of a dramatic battle with axes and hammers to free the injured from the wreckage of two trains on a frigid mountain slope was told here today by Jack Thornton of Winnipeg, a passenger on one of the trains.

The trains collided near Canoe River, B.C., yesterday. Eighteen persons are dead or missing.

Here is Thornton's story:

There was one bump and then two more, then all the lights went out when we hit and the shock didn't seem very severe. The diner was way ahead of the back of train No. 2.

I'm pretty sure our train was almost at a stop when the collision occurred. We seemed to be just idling or just past Canoe River when it happened. We were on the right side of the diner and ran toward the front of the train.

The engines were both all tangled up together and there were big clouds of steam over everything at the front of the trains.

The baggage, mail and express cars on our train were off the track. The troop train was in far the worst mess.

The first passenger car of the troop train was a twisted mass of steel and splintered wood.

The second passenger coach was partially telescoped and almost right up on top of the third car. It was in these three cars that most of the casualties occurred.

There was, on the whole, not many soldiers were scalded when steam escaping pipes in the coaches broke.

We all ran back into our own train when we saw that there were no civilian passengers hurt and grabbed axes and hammers that are for use in case of emergency.

Everybody seemed to pitch in. But we weren't really needed.

An engine came from Red Pass Junction and supplied steam heat to the trains about an hour after the wreck. It was cloudy when the collision occurred but about the time the snow a few minutes after the crash.

There was nothing resembling panic at any time. I'm sure glad those soldiers were there.

I'm afraid they will be a long time reaching the engineers. It seems to me they will have to use acetylene torches to cut open the cabs.

We were lucky that no cars rolled off the grade. There is a 75-foot drop on each side of the track where the wreck occured.

Warns of Possible Breaks in Levees On Sacramento R.

San Francisco, Nov. 22—AP— Two north-central California areas today faced new threats from avalanches of muddy, debris-laden waters as rains have begun a general recession elsewhere in California and Nevada. The floods have caused at least 15 deaths and an estimated $20,000,000 damage in three days.

Army engineers warned residents along the Sacramento River between Sacramento, Calif., and its mouth to watch for possible levee breaks as the crest of the combined Sacramento and American rivers surges downstream. The engineers termed the situation critical and ordered out all boats in the Sacramento-Sacramento. Crews worked on levees weakened by nine days of rain.

The second danger area was Nevada's Truckee River, where waters from the Don Pedro dam are expected to flood lowland and residential areas today. The dam filled yesterday and 26,000 cubic feet of water a second was still flowing into it.

General relief seemed to be at hand, however.

The weather bureau in San Francisco reported: "An excessive rainstorm . . . is ended." The bureau predicted generally-fair weather over northern and central California today.

Emergency Train Brings 58 Injured to Hospital

By A. B. GARRETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Edmonton, Nov. 22 — (CP) — Toll of dead and missing in a Rocky Mountain train wreck mounted to 20 today as army and railway officials pieced together the story of one of Canada's worst railway disasters.

At least 61 persons were injured, 22 seriously. A doctor who supervised rescue operations at the wreck scene on a desolate mountain slope, 312 miles west of here, said he feared the death toll would be much higher.

The trains — an eastbound passenger and a westbound trooper —rammed into each other on a curve only half a mile past a 500-foot canyon.

They were scheduled to meet at a nearby whistle stop but a railway official in Vancouver said today the passing order was never delivered to the troop train — westbound from Shilo, Man., with 240 members of Canada's Special Service Force. They were headed for Fort Lewis, Wash., and possible duty in Korea.

Army officials said that the bodies of ten soldiers were taken from the shattered remains of three wooden coaches. Two of the injured died en route to hospital in an emergency train. Four soldiers are missing and believed dead. Also dead are crew members of the giant mountain-type locomotives were still buried today in the crumpled remains of their cabs.

The emergency trains—remnants of the 17-car troop train—limbered into the Canadian National Railways station here early today. It was coiled with ice and many of the windows were broken.

The temperature was 15 degrees below zero as the injured were removed on stretchers through the gap in the train windows to a waiting fleet of 25 ambulances—all available in Edmonton.

Injured were taken from the train and rushed to civilian and military hospitals here.

Two injured passengers from the eastbound Continental Limited were taken back to Kamloops, B.C.

Railway officials said the 17-car trooper was slightly late as it pounded through Canoe River siding and upgrade along a wooded hillside.

As it rounded a bend it ground headlong into the locomotive of the Limited. The baggage car and three sleepers were flung off the rails. Two sleepers were shattered. The front of the third badly damaged.

Baggage and express cars of the flyer were derailed.

Most Ghastly Sight I've Ever Seen Says Physician Describing Wreck

Toronto, Nov. 22—(CP)—The wreck of a troop train and a passenger train on the C.N.R. west of Jasper, Alta., was "the most ghastly sight I have ever seen," A Jasper doctor said in a graphic story in the Toronto Globe and Mail.

Dr. Gordon Straughan, resident doctor at Jasper Hospital, who, with Dr. Thomas O'Agan, went to the scene, in a dispatch to the newspaper from Jasper:

"Even hardened men stopped. I could hear the moans of the injured.

"Every army men on the troop train who escaped without injury were really wonderful. They had already made the injured as comfortable as possible in the undamaged coaches of both trains and had wrapped their own greatcoats around them although the temperature must have been from 10 to 20 below zero.

Those soldiers were really wonderful. I saw one of them holding lying in the snow, which was about three feet deep.

The two front coaches of the troop train were right off the track and shattered almost to splinters.

Inside the other coaches bodies were lying everywhere.

In spite of the awful tragedy there were a few children playing about in the snow before night fell. They were passengers on the two trains. Some were in the coaches which escaped the brunt of the collision.

Most of those injured were badly scalded from steam which escaped from the smashed locomotives anc the coupling steam pipes. There were a lot of people also with broken bones—arms and legs—which they suffered when thrown by the impact.

Passengers' baggage, rifles from the soldiers' equipment and other articles were scattered around the coaches and along the track.

Many of the injuries resulted from splintering glass which cut the men and women.

I lost all track of time while I tended a few little stubble hospital. We worked for hours, splinting bones, treating burns and giving transfusions.

The staff of nurses excelled themselves. The railway men at Jasper had managed to ship with us blankets, food and coffee, and I think we gratefully received by those people in the bitter cold.

We had a few packages of cigarets in the relief train and they brought some solace to many people.

Before we left we hooked up with the coaches from the troop train that were not damaged and hauled them back with us. We were administering first aid all the way back.

Passenger Extra Not Given Order Cause of Wreck

Vancouver, Nov. 22 (CP) — Failure to deliver an order causing the head-on collision of a Canadian National Railways passenger train and a troop train yesterday near Canoe River, B.C.

An official statement issued here by J. R. McMillan, C.N.R. vice-president, B.C. division, said:

"It has been established that the accident was a result of the failure to deliver to the passenger extra—the troop train —instructions to meet train No. 2 at Cedarside. . . . when it was intention that the trains should met. These instructions had been delivered to train No. 2.

"Further investigation is continuing, but full details establishing responsibility must await official enquiry."

Cedarside is approximately five miles east of where the collision occurred, taking toll of at least 20 dead and 36 injured.

Pigeon Fancier Wins New Laurels At Winter Fair

With his pens already having won honors at the Canadian National Exhibition, at Madison Square Gardens and also at the Royal Winter Fair, Mr. George K. Graham, Trent Rd., won further laurels as a pigeon fancier this year by winning many of the top prizes at the Royal which ends today.

Mr. Graham showed the grand champion pigeon of all varieties and also had the champion fantail white, black, and blue silver and purebred silver pigeons of the show. He also had the best young bird and the best old bird in the show.

It was no accident that Mr. Graham carried off so many of the top awards in the pigeon classes He showed the grand champion fantail pigeon of all varieties at the Toronto Ex last summer; the grand champ of all varieties at the Royal in 1949 and also the grand champ of all varieties at the C.N.E. in 1949.

And he has also been successful in American shows. In 1949 and 1950 he showed the grand champ pigeon at the Boston poultry show and also the grand champ at the Madison Square Gardens poultry show in 1949.

As further proof of the quality of the Belleville pigeon fancier's birds, all of the above prizes were won with different birds and the prizes were awarded by five different judges.

KOREAN ISSUE

This is how Canadian soldiers going to Korea will look in the case they have to fight in subzero temperatures. The captain, standing in this composite photo, models the Korean garb, consisting of a string vest, woollen shirt, lined parka, wind-proof pants, woollen socks, heavy mitts (with separate trigger finger) and high leather-topped boots with rubber soles. The cap has ear-flaps and the fur-trimmed hood pulls up over the cap. Rank insignia is on the front tops of the parka. — (CP Photo.)

YOUNG BOYS CHARGED

Brockville, Nov. 22 — (CP) — Following investigations carried out here by the Ontario Fire Marshal's Department into a fire that destroyed the Bell Hotel in the central section of this city Nov. 14, two local boys, aged 13 and 15, have been charged with setting fire to the property. They will appear in court on Nov. 30.

Eleven people narrowly escaped being trapped in the blazing houses, having to flee the structures in their night clothes. Firemen managed to confine the blaze to the rear sections of the buildings.

Cattle Rustlers Active In Brighton Twp. District

Cattle rustlers are active in the Brighton township area northwest of Trenton where four valuable Holsteins have been stolen from stables during the past week.

Mr. Fred Denyes, well known Brighton township farmer, stated Monday that last Thursday night he had two Holstein cows valued at over $600 stolen from his stable. The cows were not missed unit he went to do the morning chores.

Again on Monday night in the Codrington district the rustlers struck again where two farmers William Annis and Dr. Andrews had one cow each stolen from their barns. One of the cattle was a purebred Holstein. Mr. Denyes stated the stolen cattle could either be butchered for beef or could be exported.

The same men responsible for the theft of Mr. Denyes' cattle are believed to have taken the cows Monday night as their tracks found near the respective barns matched. There was a strong wind blowing each night the rustlers were active, windy nights apparently being chosen to drown out any noise that might be made.

Provincial Police in the area have been notified and are seeking clues which may lead them to the identity of the persons responsible.

Mr. Denyes said the cows taken from his barn were the two most valuable in the stable. The truck had been backed up to the loading ramp and the cattle loaded.

Big Field for Municipal Honors Expected Friday

One of the biggest fields for municipal honors in recent years is expected Friday when nominations for the municipal council, Utilities and the Board of Education will be received at the office of City Clerk Wilfred Holmes.

At least 30 men are expected to be nominated for council with all aldermen whose terms expire this year having declared their intention of again running for office.

It is expected also that four Board of Education members will again be seeking re-election.

At the present moment it appears like a straight fight for the office of chief magistrate with Mayor H. Jack Allin seeking re-election for his second term. The other contestant for the city civic ally will Dr. R. T. Potter, who has resigned his seat as alderman to contest the office. Former Alderman in the city "Sandy Lumsden will oil out of the race, he has expired term in council.

All seven aldermen whose terms of office expire this year will seek re-election, it is reported. These are Aldermen Duffy, Allen, Thomas, Lattimer, Liddle, Armstrong and Clarke.

Others Mentioned

Other names being mentioned for the aldermanic field are W. Harry Rollins, J. M. Wood, Robert Temple, "Rusty" Clarke, E. Gus Porter, Jack Devlin, Byron Reid and Wilbur Countryman.

Board of Education members whose term of office expires this year are A. C. Campbell, Arthur Burke, Ross David and George Wishart. The term of office of Col. E. A. Geen also expires, but this year he has declared that Mr. Geen will offer himself for re-election.

Thus far only one name—that of Frank S. Ketcheson has been mentioned for the public utility office.

Nominating Friday

Nominations for the various municipal offices will be received in the council chamber from 11 until 12 o'clock on Friday morning. The time of nomination for each position will be marked by the clerk on the nomination sheets and each candidate to be nominated for more than one office he must signify his intention before the clock Friday evening. Candidates must qualify by nine o'clock Saturday night.

All persons nominated to run for municipal office must either be present at the nomination or his nominator must have his consent in writing.

Thousands of Children, Oldsters Line Route of Parade When Santa Claus Pays City Visit Enthusiastically welcomed by literally thousands of young children and by equally oldsters still young in spirit, Santa Claus stopped over to the city yesterday for a brief five-hour stay.

The merry gentleman rode triumphantly into the city on a special float at the tail end of a mile long parade which started out at the fair grounds and ended up on the ice-rink on Dundas, traversing the length of Front Street. He was accompanied by Mrs. Santa Claus who occupied an observation platform of her "Santa Special" float. Kisses by the huge crowd of youngsters jam-packed into the downtown area.

The huge crowd of spectators waited patiently for the arrival of Santa and seemed not to have their ardor dampened one bit by the chilly wind. Let out of school for the occasion the kiddies romped and danced on the street while the wee ones waited expectantly for Santa from the vantage point of parent's arms. Police did a fine job of keeping the local Chamber went all out to make the Santa parade a success.

Seven Bands in Parade

This was evidenced by the the crowd it drew.

St. Nicholas visited the city with his full complement of fairyland floats at the invitation of the merchants' section of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce. And seven bands which accompanied the parade. Heading the parade was the No. 6 R.D. Band; the local Salvation Army Band; the Army Signal Band from Kingston; the Argyll Pipe Band; the Artillery Band from Picton; the Belleville Kiwanis Boys' Band with their two snappy majorettes and the Trenton RCAF Band.

Spotted through the parade were floats representing such fairyland characters as Old King Cole and his band; elephant band; Jack and the Beanstalk and many others. Boy Scouts and Cubs had specially decorated floats in the parade, the St. John Ambulance Brigade was present, while commercial displays of cars, trucks and tractors added to the length of the parade. The Belleville Fire Department with several of its vehicles, was included in the parade.

Even Rudolph "The Red Nosed Reindeer" was present. Then came the "Santa Special" train with Mrs. Santa Claus, followed by Santa himself riding high on his sleigh behind his eight reindeer.

Floats Beginned

On the market square following the parade Santa's float was besieged by children of all ages as the crowd moved around to greet him personally and receive a bagful of candies.

During the supper hour Santa visited at the Belleville General Hospital where he went through the various children's wards distributing bags of candies and other goodies. Belleville merchants contributed to Santa's supply of candy.

It was a good Santa parade and one which will be remembered by the kiddies.

LEG BROKEN IN COLLISION

U.K. Will Proceed With Rearmament Atlantic Defence

London, Nov. 22 (Reuters) — The foreign office today reaffirmed the government's determination to go ahead with its rearmament plans to strengthen the Atlantic defence system.

A foreign office spokesman made these four points:

1. Britain has every intention of playing a full part in Atlantic defence.

2. There must be an equitable distribution of the economic burden involved which must be mutually agreed and related to the financial capacity of the countries concerned.

3. The total rearmament program may involve transfers of resources between one country and another taking the form of mutual aid.

4. There is no question of Britain refusing United States assistance for the rearmament program.

The possibility of a misunderstanding over the British government's attitude has worried cabinet ministers and foreign office officials even since a luncheon speech by Health Minister Aneurin Bevan last week indicating that some cabinet ministers opposed current rearmament expenditure.

Lineup Changes Will Be Made

The members of the senior hockey team have forgotten the game in Kingston on Monday night and have set their sights on the Peterborough Eagles who visited the Memorial Arena on Friday night. To this end Walter Bent has called a practice for Thursday night and at that time some changes will be made in the lineup to give the maximum strength against a team, which has so far gone through its schedule without a defeat. The Redmen think they can take the Eagles in their own bailiwick and every member of the team is asked to turn out for a stiff workout at six thirty.

21 ARE KILLED IN PLANE CRASH AT MORAN, WYO.

Rescue Units Now Heading for Scene

Moran, Wyo., Nov. 22 (AP) — A missionary plane with 21 aboard—eight of them children—apparently crashed and burned last night in swirling clouds on snowy Mount Moran. Rescue units headed for the scene.

Grand Teton National Park officials were sure climbers making their tortuous way up the 12,100-foot peak would find wreckage of the plane. They held only slim hope there could be survivors.

A resort owner last night said he saw a burning fuselage in the flames far above timberline on the precipitous east face of the mountain. When the fire subsided he could see nothing resembling an airplane.

The missing plane, bound from Chico, Calif., to Billings, Mont., was owned by the New Tribes Mission a religious organization. It was on the first leg of a flight to South America.

Passengers included two young mothers with their children, widowed in the crash of another mission-owned plane in Venezuela last June which killed 15. Also aboard was Dr. Paul W. Flemings of Chico, mission director.

The new, twin-engined DC-3 was reported by radio over Idaho Falls, Idaho, at 3:48 p.m. MST. that was 50 miles west of here. The plane was due at Billings at 6.30 p.m.

It was about that time that residents of this area heard a plane overhead. It was far off using all its power in a swing west, just opposite to the direction the California plane should have been headed. There was speculation it was lost and hunting landmarks.

Half an hour later Paul A. Lodge, acting Teton Park superintendent, said a fire was reported about 1,000 feet from the top of Mount Moran.

Price of Steel May Go Up $6 to $10 Ton

New York, Nov. 22. (AP)—The break in the steel industry's wage-price picture may come this week.

The Iron Age, metal-working trade weekly, says today.

Negotiations over wages between management and labor heads were described as "hot—of remote control, even though meetings were adjourned.

"One thing is sure," the publication says. "If wages go up steel prices will go up too."

The Iron Age estimates probable wage increases at 15 to 17 cents an hour, price boosts at $6 to $10 a ton.

"Steel orders of civilian consumers will be cut back 30 to 50 per cent during the first quarter of next year," the trade weekly says.

"Steel producers have decided the cutbacks will be necessary because of (1) defence orders, (2) essential civilian orders and (3) heavy carryover of orders from quarter of this year."

Steel-making operations this week again were placed at 103 per cent of rated capacity.

Mutchmore Charge Will be Probed By Liquor Board

Toronto, Nov. 22 (CP) — A clergyman's charge that "moral debauchery" in Toronto exists largely because of cocktail bars and licensed rooms will be investigated by the Ontario Liquor Control Board.

J. G. Sprague, comptroller, made the announcement today. Although the charges made by Rev. F. W. L. Bradley in a United Church meeting were "vague," he "intends to get to the bottom of the matter."

"I think the gentleman should have been more specific," said Mr. Sprague.

Other officials indicated that the inspection department of the liquor commission will be asked for full reports on the operation of certain outlets mentioned in Mr. Bradley's report to the church meeting.

CANADIAN DOLLAR

New York, Nov. 22 — (CP) — The Canadian dollar was unchanged at a discount of 3⅛ per cent in terms of United States funds in foreign exchange dealings today. The pound sterling was unchanged at $2.80¼.

WILL GIVE TALK

"Korea — World Powder Keg" will be the subject of an address by Grenfell A. Fitch at the Y.M.C.A. this evening. Born in China and educated in the United States, Dr. Fitch has spent a life time in the Orient and can report from first-hand experiences on the turbulent events that have shaken this part of the world in recent decades.

His personal experiences in connection with air raids, sieges and battles are numerous. He knows intimately 23 of China's 24 provinces. He has had official and unofficial dealings with the Kuomintang and the communists for many years. He was a witness at the war crimes trials in Tokyo.

Dr. Fitch's brief visit to Belleville was instituted by the Board of Governors of the Y.M.C.A. who felt that his timely message would be of great interest to the citizens. He comes as the World Service representative of the North American Y.M.C.A's.

Windsor Boy Will be Cover Boy In March of Dimes

Windsor, Nov. 22 — (CP) — Twelve-year-old Larry McKenzie of Windsor is the cover boy for 1951 of the National Foundation for Infantile paralysis in the United States, its photograph will appear on millions of pieces of printed literature during the March of Dimes campaign in January.

Already he is slated for a coast-to-coast tour of the United States, during which he will meet governors of states and mayors of municipalities and perhaps have a private audience with President Truman.

Larry's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. McKenzie, have known their son was the choice of the Foundation for some months. Larry's case already has hit the headlines internationally because of the care given him while he was on the Queen Mary en route with polio. His particular care of the Orleans Chapter of the foundation, located in western New York State.

It was while he was summering there in 1949 with his parents that Larry was stricken with polio. It was dangerous to move him. Dr. Dorothy Millar took over and hospitalized him, treated him and brought him, back literally from the grave, according to his grateful parents.

Larry has been such a model patient and has maintained his courage and spirit throughout the long ordeal, that he was selected from among thousands of cases in the U.S as the model for the 1951 poster.

Giant Bomber Crashes in Texas Two Feared Dead

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 22 (AP) — A giant B-36 bomber crashed today about 30 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

First reports were that 10 men bailed from the craft, which is the world's largest land — based bomber. At least two men were reported dead. The B-35 usually carries a crew of 15.

The six-engined craft fell about 4½ hours after taking off from Carswell Air Force base, home of the Eighth Air Force.

The plane crashed about seven miles west of the small town of Godley where two men killed in the crash were taken to a near-by farm.

"An American Air Lines pilot says 10 men bailed out," a public relations officer said. "Ordinarily a B-36 carries a crew of 15."

Only twice before has one of the far-ranging giants crashed. Last Feb. 14 one crashed along the British Columbia coast. Seventeen airmen parachuted and 12 later were rescued from coastal islands. Five airmen were killed Sept. 16, 1949, when a B-36 failed to complete a take-off from Carswell and roared into a nearby lake at 100 miles an hour.

BIG FEDERATION

The federation of Malaya effected in 1948 — covers 50,000 square miles with nearly 5,000,000 population.

TROOP

A cloud of steam enveloped the wreck as the heating line from the locomotive burst.

The cars were quickly sheathed in ice as the steam met zero temperature.

Troops and passengers poured out of the trains to help the injured. Their efforts were hampered by the bitter cold and six inches of snow lying on the mountainside.

The soldiers quickly organized aid for the injured. Two dining cars were cleared for use as a hospital.

Dr. F. S. Kimmett, of Edson, Alberta, a passenger on the Continental Limited, took charge. His wife acted as nurse. They were assisted by Jack Cook, C. N. R. regional first-aid officer from Vancouver, and a Mrs. Lemis of Edmonton.

An emergency telephone was signed to communication lines damaged in the wreck, and a report of the crash brought wrecking trains and medical aid from Jasper, Alta., and Kamloops, B. C.

Three Hours for Help

As passengers not engaged in helping the injured waited three hours for help, they hudled in the coaches cradled on the train.

Six hours after the wreck, an emergency train made up of undamaged coaches left the trooper mound down along the mountainside.

Residents of Jasper had organized accommodation for the injured in the small town hospital and in the school auditorium, but officials decided to continue to Edmonton after some ice was removed from the running gear of the coaches.

As the train rolled east early today, a rescue special from Edmonton carrying army doctors, nursing sisters and medical orderlies from western army command went west to meet it at Edson, Alta., half way to Jasper.

Loaded With Supplies

The train was loaded with medical supplies and first-aid equipment.

Aboard the hospital train were 42 soldiers listed as stretcher cases—22 of them in serious condition. Also aboard the train were 11 injured who were able to walk, and bodies of 12 of their comrades recovered from the wreck.

Names of the soldiers were withheld until their next-of-kin had been notified.

Engineer on the troop train was Harvey Church, and his fireman was P. D. Frotnick. Engineer of the other train was J. J. Stimson, and fireman was Olesciuk.

Known injured on the troop train were two Winnipeg sisters, W. Walsh, and W. W. Worrall, P. Hodels, Jean Pattison and C. Clouzeau, Bews agent.

TWO RIBS BROKEN

Hollywood, Nov. 22—(AP)—Things got a little too realistic yesterday for Larry, a football scene and actor Paul Douglas came out of the pileup with two broken ribs. His studio reported Douglas, 42, a former pro footballer, was mixing it up with some former Pacific coast conference players.

ALMOST TRADED LIFE

Yale, Mich., Nov. 22—(AP)—August Malczewski almost traded his life for a metal lunch bucket yesterday. Malczewski, 37, of Yale, was driving a pickup truck when his lunch bucket began to slide off the rest. He grabbed for the bucket. The truck crashed into trees and was demolished. Malczewski saved his lunch—but suffered head, chest and ankle injuries.

CHURCH MOURNS PRIMATE

A really religious leader has passed in the death of the primate of the Anglican Church in Canada and all who realize what the church in all its branches means in the world mourn his decease. Archbishop Georgo Frederick Kingston gave devotedly of his great talents in service to his fellowmen. He was one of the great teachers of his age and generation and those who came under his kindly ministrations as a professor in Trinity College, Toronto, will miss one who was a true friend. His work in the Church of England has left abiding results in those whom he taught and his service in the church has been a great blessing to the membership and to all people.

As primate he was privileged to serve only three years when he was called away but those three years were years all of blessings which he was able to extend through that high office. He died in the hope of life when it might have been expected that he would have had many years left to render his devoted service to the church and the nation.

The Church of England has sustained a heavy loss but will recall the devotion of his active many years as professor and in the highest office of the church to which he had been called.

RECORDS OF CHURCHILL'S VOICE

It is good news to the world that Winston Churchill will record some of the warday addresses made in one of the great periods of history. The written word is important but however great prose may be uttered in the stirring far more, for into it the speaker or orator throws his inner artistry. Without the voice in which it was uttered speech lacks something of the human personality. Now the personality of Churchill will be one of the same as his great power in the days when he was organizing the world to down the tyranny of Hitlerism. His speeches were one of the greatest instruments he could wield for rallying the power of the free world. In war days we were millions heard his voice by broadcast and were able to form some conception of the genius the then Prime Minister of Britain possessed not only in speaking but in the rallying power of the words. Now they felt as if they would like what a treasure it would mean to future generations to have the recorded voice of Mr. Churchill in those days when the world was being saved from tyranny for many must have realized what a great contribution would be made to history had records of the voices of other great leaders in all walks of life in the dim past. But it has been reserved for this age to make possible a record of music and the spoken word of events as they happen. The very thought of this starts a train of thought concerning great men who have left influences upon the lives of the people even after long years.

New York Times the other day referred to the news that some of the great Churchill speeches are to be recorded in the great prime minister's voice. Its tribute to the great Briton is in part in these words:

"We welcome the hope that Winston Churchill has decided to record some of his famous wartime speeches delivered in the House of Commons and other places where conscription was impossible. To have the actual voices of the great figures of the day preserved is of obvious historic import. We would be the richer had such voices been preserved at the time, say, of the Gettysburg Address, and of great singers and artists of the past, remembered only by the written word.

"Now we have the tools. However, our pleasure is dampened somewhat by the former Prime Minister's reported intention to limit access to the transcriptions to a small circle of friends. Such recordings as already exist for the general public are a debt due to Mr. Churchill's record in history. As characteristic of him as what he said is how he said it. His is one voice which, at its unique best, deserves the chance to ring down through the ages. His writings have well deserved permanence, for all to read. One must hope that Winston Churchill will yet see fit to afford the same chance to his voice, for all to hear."

MOVING TOWARDS FESTIVE SEASON

The present autumn more than two thirds past has been unusually mild. Temperatures last week were very high and made a record for recent years. However usually more this time severe conditions have been somewhat felt.

Now the sign is out. Christmas is getting close. Just about a month stands between us and that happy time of the year. Tuesday afternoon's great Santa Claus parade and the vast crowds on the streets have brought very forcibly to mind that people are already thinking of Christmas and all that it has brought in other years and will bring this year and in years to come.

COUNSEL FOR CARVERS learned it from my father.

Long ago he said to me:
When carving goose or turkey always sharp the knife must be.
A blunt blade you are handed will merely tear and hack,
And the gravy that you are serving will think carving skill you lack.

It's an art to carve at table,
The you're under watchful eyes.
You must know the joints precisely and just where the wishbone lies.
The legs and thighs are darkest; on the breast the meat is light.
When some preference is spoken you must not give dark for light.

"But the knife is most important. Bear in mind this truth you must.
Your carving set to women you must never, never trust.
They will use it to cut carpet or linoleum for a shelf.
To be sure it's fit for service, you must care for it yourself.

"You can never cut this slices with a dull and battered blade.
So make sure upon the table near the knife the steel is laid.
For a keen edge graces carving. It's the only thing that will,
With a dull one you'll be hacking, using strength instead of skill."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Nov. 22, 1930

A conference of teen age boys of Hastings, Northumberland and Prince Edward counties commenced in King St. United Church, Trenton, this afternoon and will continue today and tomorrow. Fred Hamett, secretary of the Belleville branch of the Y.M.C.A. had charge of the programme this afternoon.

Mr. Harry W. Ackerman has announced that he will be a candidate for the office of mayor of this city at the next election.

Under the auspices of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers a successful assembly will be held this evening in the Academy. Upwards of 100 couples were present. Mr. H. H. Ketcheson was master of ceremonies. The committee in charge was composed of the following: Messrs G. Brown, A. Calcutt, R. Milne, G. Nayler, W. Dennis, R. Hall, and W. Morrison and J. S. Hegle.

50 YEARS AGO

Nov. 22, 1900

The electric street cars will begin operation tomorrow and the line has been closed down owing to a break at the power house.

A horse attached to a buggy was found wandering about the streets last night. The police took charge of the outfit and later the owner, who also had been wandering around, turned up to claim his property.

Mr. J. L. Taugher, formerly of this city, was sworn in and enrolled as a barrister and solicitor at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, yesterday. He passed his final examinations with honors.

The city church choirs are busily engaged practising Christmas music.

40 YEARS AGO

Nov. 22, 1910

The first electric sign in this city has been erected and is now in operation on the roof of the Queen's Hotel building. Mr. T. J. Power is having the hotel entirely renovated and remodelled.

The plans and specifications for the new T. and N. O. building have arrived.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

One thing electricity can't do was made for countless centuries, back to the dawn of time. It could be that man adopted the upright posture as a result of having to stand erect in front of a fire to make himself warm. The reason that no rapid abandoning the upright posture in motor car, office desk and even at work bench may be due to the fact that he is not getting real toast any more.

The Bell Telephone Company, as far as my reporting goes, has more gourmets per 1,000 of employes than any other widely flung organization. One of these, a friend of mine, will not eat at a restaurant that has not got a charcoal grill at which his toast can be made. "He is coming to dinner at my place tonight, to eat venison giblets on toast. And it will be necessary to build a small bonfire in the back yard around dusk, so that the embers will be just right when the toast is required.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

GOD STILL REIGNS

In the sixth chapter of the Book of Isaiah, the prophet tells us that in the year King Uzziah died, he (the prophet) saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up.

It seemed to every Israelite when King Uzziah died that the end of the world had come. Their one great hope for intelligent and purposeful rule seemed to perish with the king's passing. But in the year that the earthly king died, the prophet Isaiah saw the heavenly King sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up. Uzziah was no more, but no one was to allow himself to sink into despair. God was still king and Master of his universe.

When a loved one dies, it seems as if the light has suddenly been extinguished in one's life. Financial losses are so terrified as is suddenly found ourselves walking about the ledge of a skyscraper. In days when evil may win an easy victory over righteousness and laugh our every purpose to scorn, we are tempted to feel that there is no justice in life and that God has forgotten His world and His people.

Remember, in such times as this, the experience of Isaiah. In the year that the great early king died, the prophet saw the Heavenly King on His throne. When everything is toppling and falling around about us, let us remember that the mighty Creator of the universe still reigns.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

WITH A YAWN

I never get into a situation like this, with a swimming pool and hot weather and not really want to do, that I don't get a little nervous at myself. Almost any such favorable circumstances will bring out the three-toed sloth in me.

I can't believe it's inherited. My father was a perpetually restless man, given to hobbies and enthusiasms to keep himself busy. My mother lives by the credo that life should be leaped at. She can never understand how she got a son whose greatest ambition is to lie down in shade and watch spiders.

The thing has given me an awful guilt complex, mainly because people keep reminding me that laziness is so terribly unfashionable.

The man who pays me my income, for example, never writes me a communique without a nasty postscript: "Hope you are getting your 14 hours sleep, you lazy lout." The dastard!

I get one on a boat trip with this fellow. I'd driven up the Alaska Highway with my wife and it was fascinating. I took many maps and I was really quite drawn when we returned.

"Come sailing with us on a cruise," my boss said, "You will be able to get your usual 14 hours in."

Like a fool I accepted. When the cruise started out I was in my bar, I took off my clothes, smiled, lay down on the bow and proceeded to watch the world turn. This new position I was prepared to maintain throughout the voyage.

It was short lived. The skipper persisted in the mad idea that his guests were there to be useful, unless they were cooking the meals, washing the dishes scrubbing the decks, hauling in the anchor, or each other, getting up at dawn to fling themselves into the ocean for exercise. I lasted 18 hours, several weeks after our return before I felt my old languid self again.

This man immediately spread the news that I was a child of lethargy and now I spend a great deal of time camouflaging my pursuits of the day, for it were something to be ashamed of.

Mexican Style

Looking back on my life all the happy times seem to have been spent flat on my back. I must have been a curious child, rather like a gopher or chipmunk. I went hibernating where I could hibernate.

One I remember vividly, a Grade 3 discovered high in a maple tree (some kids of an earlier era had built this; I was too lazy, yesterday). We packed lunch and I can still remember the joy of sitting up there in my secret room of leaves, with nothing to do but read Frank Merriwell books and chortle softly to myself when I heard my mother calling me.

I suppose that really accounts for the hours and hours of travelling I've been doing since the war, a compulsion to find another place as restful as that one I explored, the roaring traffic boom as that tree fort was.

The nearest I've come to it was in the Mexican seaside town of Mazatlan, but Phoenix, Arizona, ran second.

Mazatlan though, had everything, the seat to drive away any tendency to work, and the long and beach beside the surf. Some afternoons my wife had to take my pulse to be sure I was alive.

You have to hand it to the Mexicans. They've made a fine art of relaxation. The other day when we stopped over in El Paso, Texas, to drive across the border into the Mexican town of Juarez so that Judy could see how the Mexicans live.

I showed her some of the examples little remained, but you can see in even the poorest homes. This is a kind of open room within the house and usually contained full of bread-leafed plants and cool as mint. Some even have a shallow pool of water in the middle.

I just have to look at a place like that and I start yawning and kneading my eyes, but it made no impression on Judy. She just wanted to get out of the decrepit appearance of the houses. I'm afraid the poor kid is going to be a go-getter.

Given a blade of shade, the Mexican can sleep in almost any position, and a great many of them grow old and fat and pretty dirty without knowing it. It's even endearing at 1st when I tell them.

I'll tell you what it is very close to all activity. I've never known money together to buy some old broken-down place in the Gulf Islands and live in it away for the rest of my life. Now, whenever I tell people this, they are always sure I ought to be ashamed of myself, they say, wanting to retire at 35. Maybe I'll do it sometime when I'm full of big plans.

But, after all, what is ambition? One of the most lazy men I've ever known was the Egyptian fellah who (from a hammock under pines) than it is to just want to sleep and watch the spiders.

I claim it's a good, honest ambition to dream of an escape from the routine of civilization. I like a life of his own where a guy can sit on the end of a small wharf (as I do it) and do some heavy thinking.

It will be a long time, at these prices, before I get within range of my dream. Meanwhile I am going to have fun trying to find this God-given gift or torpor for that wonderful day when I can start doing it earnest.

MacKenzie's Column: Troops' Arrival Provides Prelude To Appearance

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Arrival of American troops at the Yalu River — boundary between Korea and Manchuria — provides a dramatic prelude to the scheduled appearance of Chinese communist representatives before the United Nations at Lake Success tomorrow to argue allegations of aggression against the United States.

The appearance of the envoys is to substantiate their charges of United States aggression in connection with Formosa, Chinese Nationalist base. However, the fact that the Chinese U. N. members to include a discussion of Korea, and some observers are speculating whether there might even be a chance for reaching an agreement on the fighting regarding the Korean situation.

Such a hope obviously involves wishful thinking, especially since the Chinese have refused to discuss the Korean issue, which is a legitimate effort towards peace by a worthy pursuit. The arrival of American forces at the Yalu River might provide the basis for intensive the subject.

Moscow In Background

Allied authorities in the Far East feel sure that Moscow is the influence behind the Chinese intervention, and that the Peiping scheme is to keep the Korean War going in order to weaken the western powers, especially the U. S.

Moscow has no partners — only satellites.

The preponderable of the situation now is just what designs Peiping has. If she is mainly concerned over Yalu boundary and those electric plants, she might make a bargain for herself at Lake Success.

We shall see when the Chinese delegation gets into action.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SEEING WITHOUT KNOWING

Probably the most useful and most wonderful gift that man has, outside, of course, his mind and a heart to love him alive, is the gift of sight—his eyes. Endless are the opportunities our eyes present to us. The world of nature, the treasures of literature and painting and the multitudes wonders scattered everywhere in nature.

But how much we see without knowing its significance or its hidden secrets. A stranger once viewed the painter Turner, the English artist, at work, and remarked that he never saw such colors as those being put on canvas by the artist. Gleaming up, Turner replied: "Don't you wish you could?" As for me, I never can forget the sunset with pigments of glory I see in the sky."

This summer a friend, who is an expert photographer, took some sunsets at my island retreat. When he had them developed in color and showed them to me I gazed at their marvelous beauty. There were colors and cloud effects that I had missed appreciating, though those sunsets fascinated me at the time. The camera saw more than I had seen but did not know that so many effects were actually there.

Every day we pass scores of people. We note their faces, their dress, and their manner of walk, but we know nothing of them. We have inward eyes with which to perceive their minds and hearts, but we would have to know them to do so.

VITAMINS AS PREVENTATIVES AND AS TREATMENT

The development of vitamin deficiency diseases may be prevented by an adequate and continuous daily intake of vitamins. Once a vitamin deficiency disease has developed, it is customarily and scientifically treated by giving the deficient vitamin in quantities considerably greater than those required for prevention only.

The pharmaceutical industry has evolved two general classes of vitamin preparations. One is used for preventive purposes only. The potency of the preparation is such that it supplies the body with sufficient vitamin to prevent the development of disease, if used continuously and adequately in cases where the diet fails to provide the necessary quantity.

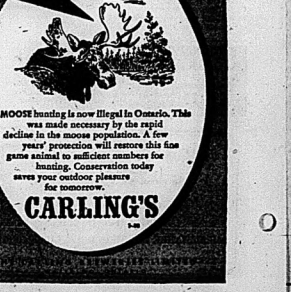
The preparations used for curing the vitamin deficiency disease are of much higher potency. To be sure, the preparations used for preventive purposes in large doses, serve the purposes of higher potency preparations, but inconvenience and needless expense would be involved.

It is not good judgment to continually use high-potency vitamin products for preventative purposes. The absorption and retention of the vitamin depend largely upon the need for it which exists in the tissues. If the tissue is not great, the excess is "thrown off" quite rapidly. As a matter of fact, some vitamins are stored or retained but very briefly in the tissues and need constant replenishment.

A continued deficiency in the diet of one or more vitamins gives rise to abnormal conditions in time before definite deficiency conditions become noticeable. This period of time is included in the term "physical subnormal state." Such a state is most difficult to diagnose in the absence of significant symptoms, and must be assumed on the basis of the character of the diet. Where the diet continuously provides adequate amounts of the various vitamins, the subclinical state may be suspected. The patient is unaware of this state and the physician is unable to diagnose it.

It follows, therefore, that the daily intake of supplemental vitamins is essential to the maintenance of optimum health even in the absence of definite symptoms of deficiency.

Letter to the Editor



Says Municipal Band Not 'Disorganized'

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

On November 10th a letter appeared in this paper signed by Mrs. Irwin, criticizing the status of the Belleville Municipal Band at the present time; this letter was captioned with the following statement "Band Disorganized."

The Band Directors of the Belleville Municipal Band would like it to be made known that the band is not disorganized; we are still functioning and are holding rehearsals each Tuesday evening at the band room. However, we feel that the writer of our previous letter, that we should not appear before you, the public, until we are able to give you the best as it has been known in the past.

Proposed City Health Unit Outlined to Kiwanis Club; Speaker Tells of Alcan Road

Kiwanians got a double treat yesterday at their weekly luncheon, when Ald. William Argue addressed them on the proposed health unit, and J. C. R. (Bud) Punchard told of his experiences on the Alcan Highway.

Ald. Argue asked the men, as businessmen, to consider the proposed health unit as they would a new piece of equipment for their business—is it needed, what is it, what will it do, and what will it cost? "A health unit is of vital importance to the public service of this city," he said. "This is the project that has been so full of confusion, misunderstanding and red herrings."

Mr. Argue charged that Belleville as a whole was still thinking in the terms of cure, not of prevention as would be demonstrated by a health unit. "A health unit here" he said, "would be a co-operative enterprise between urban and rural municipalities, to carry out a sustained program of community health."

Cases Cited by Speaker

The unit would have a fully trained medical officer of health at its head. Mr. Argue cited the cases of Picton, Napanee, Port Hope, Cobourg, and other communities on the lakefront which have permanent health units. "All those places have health units," he said, "and we are asking nothing new or fantastic here."

The speaker pointed out that it had never been suggested at any time, contrary to other reports, that Belleville should establish the unit alone. The city will seek the co-operation of Hastings County. Ald. Argue charged that after Dr. R. T. Potter had gone to Toronto at his own expense to interview a man, who would come here to be M.O.H., the local Board of Health did not act for two months.

Present Budget Given

"The city budget at the present time for health work is $7,830," Ald. Argue said. Added to that, the Board of Education budget provides for more than $4,000, so that the total amount that electors will vote on will be slightly more than $12,000, and not actually $25,000.

The health unit, if set up, will provide communicable disease control, with inspection for infectious diseases, quarantine control, inspection of school children, nutrition advice, and some dental treatment.

"This is not essentially a dollars and cents proposition", Ald. Argue said, "This is for the benefit of the children and underprivileged in town. We spend well over $100,000 per year for fire protection in Belleville."

"All we are asking you to do is spend another $12,000 to $13,000 for health."

Highway Started in 1941

Mr. Punchard, who made his trip up the Alcan highway in 1946, told the Kiwanians of the start of the project in 1941 when the United States government decided that it needed a road to supply Fairbanks, Alaska. He told of the various steps from Edmonton to Alaska, and how the road was built in 156 days, over the 1,800 miles.

The first mile of the road cost $1 million, and from there on the cost was less and much planning was discarded. "In many cases," he said, "the actual road was pretty well planned by the man on the first bulldozer."

Network Set Up

Mr. Punchard also told of the vast communication network set up over the 1,800 miles, and of its setting up. He spiced his talk with a few anecdotes of life in the north, with probably the most outstanding one being about the mosquito that was so big that when it landed on one of the strips up there, they had pumped 90 gallons of gas into the brute before they realized what it was.

He also showed a number of slides dealing with the road construction and the problems presented to the engineers.

Mr. Argue was presented to the club by President Taylor Franklin and Mr. Punchard was introduced by Ken Atwell, and thanked by Bill Stevin. Vic White and Phil Huddleston directed a short singsong.

$28,000 FIRE LOSS

Fort Rowan, Nov. 22. (CP)—Fire last night swept through a two-storey apartment building here causing damage estimated at more than $20,000. No one was hurt.

The blaze was the third which has broken out in this western Ontario port town in a week. Inspector John Richards of the Ontario Fire Marshal's office, investigating the first two fires, indicated he would add Tuesday's to his probe.

WEDDINGS

WILLIAMS—GILMOUR

A double ring wedding ceremony was performed in St. George Street United Church, Peterborough, Saturday afternoon when the Rev. Arnold A. Mathews united Sylvia Lorraine Gilmour and Edward Thomas Williams. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Gertrude Gilmour and the groom, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton F. Williams, all of Peterborough.

The church was decorated with white chrysanthemums and the wedding music was played by Mr. Charles Allen, organist. Mrs. E. Rain sang "Through the Years" during the signing of the register.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Donald R. Boulter. Her gown was of white slipper satin fitted with a high buttoned neckline on the torso fitted bodice finished with long pointed sleeves. She wore a beaded headdress which held her fingertip veil of embroidered net and carried a cascade of red roses.

Bridesmaids were Miss Una K. Boulter, of Belleville, cousin of the bride, and Miss Noreen Pollock of Havelock. They were in yellow and green taffeta frocks respectively and wore picture hats and mitts of matching lace. Each carried a cascade of bronze and mauve 'mums attached to a white satin muff.

Groomsman was John Nisbett and the ushers Robert Williams, brother of the groom, and Gerald Bradley.

For the occasion, the bride's mother chose a dress of intermission silk faille and a black felt hat with feather trim and wore a corsage of bronze 'mums. The groom's mother wore a taffeta dress in brown and beige tones and a brown felt hat and also had bronze 'mums.

When leaving on their wedding trip to Toronto and Buffalo, the bride wore a green gabardine suit with black topcoat and matching accessories and white gardenia corsage. On their return the couple will live at 659 George Street.

Many Enjoy Dainty Tea, Attractive Bazaar at Christ Church Parish Hall

Softly glowing lights, pillars entwined with evergreens, and a jolly-laughed, star-topped Christmas tree were the inviting features of the fine bazaar and tea held yesterday afternoon in Christ Church parish hall under the auspices of the Parish Guild. Although the heralded Santa Claus parade was a counter attraction, yet many patrons of the guild still found their way to the hall, either before or after the jolly fellow in red had passed along.

As each patron entered they were smilingly and painlessly relieved of their dues by the genial treasurer, Mrs. M. B. Button, after which they were free to wander at will from booth to booth located upstairs, each one prettily decorated with greens, gay ribbons and tinsel, as the fancy decided.

Like a Garden of Flowers

The first booth noticed with its cedar covered counter, greenery, silver ropes and tiny red bells, was that of the infants' wear, conducted by Mrs. Florence Fitzgerald, Miss B. Thomas, and Mrs. A. Newman. All manner of baby clothes were there, knit acquots in white, blue trimmed; others in pink; little knit blue bonnets with matching blue mitts; white, feather-y-light mufflers; little sets consisting of bevvy, cardigan and mitts all in moss green; bootees of all colors; tiny sun-suits for the wee man and the wee girl; silk, flimsy aprons, and a whole flower garden of little dresses in organdy, lace trimmed, in shades of pink, pale blue, pale mauve, yellow, blue and white, with matching undergarments attached. These had been made by a former Belleville resident, Miss K. Fitzgerald, of Mrs. L. Herring, of British Columbia, who had sent them as a donation to the Guild for this special occasion.

Useful Articles

At the fancy goods booth, which also wore a crescent of evergreens, there were daisy pot-holders in crochet, edged with red; cross crochet table-set consisting of one large centre piece with six smaller place doilies; bridge sets; glass muffs in rainbow hues; cute little needle cases shaped like a big sombrero, the thimble forming the crown; crocheted wash cloths; embroidered tea cloths; pretty bags for pillow slips; embroidered runners, and many other dainty and useful articles. This was under the supervision of Mrs. H. Dowsett; Mrs. G. G. Wright; Mrs. C. Sine; Mrs. C. Noakes and Mrs. S. Lummis.

As usual the homecooking booth was most attractive with its bevy of pies, cakes tarts, relishes, and canned fruits. There was one special cake, white iced with a lacey scroll work in palest green and pink running across the top, which was centred by a rosette of tiny pastel tinted flowers, around the four sides was an edging of shell-like decorations. A lovely looking cake.

There were cocoanut layer cakes with drifts of cocoanut toppings, highlighted by red maraschino cherries; delicious, mouth-watering custard pies, lemon pies, delicate gilt edged waffle pies of peel; chocolate-coated, nut-topped gems; tea biscuits and home-made buns, honey dipped; macaroons; fruit cup cakes; short breads and date cakes glistening with silver balls buried in white icing. All so tempting and delicious. Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. B. Hinchey, Mrs. R. Rodgers and Mrs. A. Chaplin were the conveners here, and four busy people they were.

Pretty Trinkets

Next to this was second-hand booth with its pretty trinkets of cedar jewellery, earrings, little vases, framed pictures and several readable books including "The Heart of the Hills," by John Fox, Jr., "Deep Streets" by Benedict Thielens, and "The Patrol of the Sun Dance Trail," by Ralph Connor, and several others. Mrs. K. Hickey and Mrs. Day were in charge of these.

The children's table with its many articles of baby knit and crocheted and hand-sewn hat little socks, dresses, bereta, aprons, bonnets, and whatever a little tot might require, Mrs. H. Wright was the convener.

The candy counter laden with tiny baskets, boxes and ornamental little goodies, filled to overflowing with creams, chocolates, fudge, and many other delicacies, was under the business management of the conveners Mrs. Ashton and Mrs. J. Cooper busy people indeed.

Many Aprons

In charge of the apron and novelties table were Mrs. E. Vanner, Mrs. M. Button and Mrs. Kempton who had for sale aprons of every size, design and color, as well as little pot holders in singles, two's, and sets of three, all beautifully crocheted, representing daisies in white, with red edges. Some which caught the eye were square with a raised, wild rose done in pink on a white background; others had fruit in colors; many were the dainty handkerchiefs, some with white crocheted edges while others had green or mauve. There were also jars of silver polish, home-made, guaranteed to practically blind one with the lustre they could produce.

The plant table had an array of greenery to satisfy any housewife who possessed the "green thumb." Here were begonias of many varieties; the tall sansavari, the sensitive plant, English ivy and Canadian ivy, pink-flowering ivy geraniums, pansy geraniums, and tiny cacti of several kinds. In charge of these was Mrs. W. Adams.

Dreamland of Dolls

Dreams come true, sometimes, and as one stood gazing at the Dolls booth, under the conveneriship of Mrs. J. Diment; Mrs. L. E. Vaughan and Mrs. Ivy, the fancy came true: for here were some of the things dreams are made of, little ballerina dolls with swirling skirts of fairy pink; a bridal party—minus the bridegroom—of bride, in her satin and veil; a matron of honor in her lovely dress of green and the bridesmaid in yellow, a lovely assembly of doll people there as one looked, there were two Aunt Chloes; little topsy with her black face and pigtails underneath a wide-brimmed hat; and not far off was goldenhaired little Eva. And many others including the "Boy in Blue" with his little sister "The Girl in Pink", and funny-faced clowns dolls with their pom-pom suits; doll dresses; green Baby Bunting bags with green satin edges, and matching kimonas, and a tiny pink-trimmed doll bassinete with the little "Girl in Blue" neatly tucked beneath a padded quilt. The Whole back-grounded by a simulated Christmas tree tinsel-trimmed, was a piece of artistic designing.

Pleasing Tea Room

Downstairs the tea room, with its decorations in green and the star-tipped tables, its daintily cheted lace-covered tea table with its silver basket of gold and white 'mums, its silver candelabra and tall white tapers, and gleaming silver services, flanked by rows of little quartet tables, each with its cloth and centre-piece of pastel tinted flower basket, the lush green huckeberry branches, was a picture of daintiness. Mrs. Albert Wonnacott, assisted by Mrs. Charles Bishop and Mrs. Archie Jordan graciously welcomed the guests.

Those who presided were: Mrs. Bateman; Mrs. Reg. Hinchey; Mrs. G. G. Wright and Mrs. W. Pepper. Those who replenished, Mrs. W. Adams; Mrs. H. Carter; Mrs. L. Donnoly; and Mrs. George Meagher, while those who served included Mrs. Hayes Pitt; Mrs. M. R. Sine; Mrs. D. Row; Miss L. Morton; Mrs. Bill Cook; Mrs. K. Smith; Mrs. A. Bishop; Mrs. Everett Smith; Mrs. F. Beeby; Mrs. D. Stewart; Mrs. A. Cooper and Mrs. H. Bateman.

A dainty tea and attractive bazaar nicely convened and pleasingly successful.

Club Activities

St. Andrew's C.G.I.T.

The meeting of the St. Andrew's C.G.I.T. was opened Monday by the president, Margaret C. Wilson.

The worship service was conducted by Peggy and Joan Parks. The leader, Mrs. Weir continued the study of the Gospel of Luke.

Business was discussed and it is expected to have a good representation of girls from St. Andrew's attending the vesper service to be held in December at Holloway Street Church.

A short but interesting discussion was given by Miss Martinson of the Belleville Collegiate staff, topic—"Good Grooming and Care of Skin."

The girls then enjoyed a few games and the meeting was adjourned by "taps".

RED TRIANGLE CLUB

The Red Triangle Club held its monthly dinner meeting in the Y.M.C.A. banquet hall Monday evening under the chairmanship of Interclub-President, Ken Vickers. Introductions by the chairman and grace by Miss Muriel Jobson began the festivities.

The lucky ticket for the booster prize, donated by Miss Vickers, was drawn by Sgt. Simmonds and won by Miss Audrey Robertson.

The first speaker of the evening, Sgt. Simmonds, RCAF station, Trenton, was introduced by the chairman. During his address on the part Red Triangle could play in being of service to the air station, he issued an invitation to the club members to attend a party on the station in the near future, which was accepted.

The second speaker of the evening, Mr. George Bujea, P.T.I. for the C.N.E., stated the purpose of the YMCA was to promote Christian fellowship irregardless of race, color or creed and also spoke on the place Red Triangle had in the local program.

The club voted that a cheque be forwarded to the Salvation Army to help provide Christmas hampers for needy families. It was also voted that the classes for junior girls in connection with a club project due to lack of time.

Past president Muriel Jobson gave a short talk outlining the past achievements of the club, the most important being the purchasing and making of the drapes which now hang in the Y.M.C.A. banquet hall.

This year's projects include the remodelling of the small downstairs kitchen in the Y.M.C.A. pending approval of the Y.M.C.A. building committee.

The evening closed with the showing of two films entitled "Song of the Ski and Candytown."

The next meeting of the club at the moment is too boost membership; the club is open to all business girls and young married women over the age of 20 who are interested in the type of program being presented. Any girls interested are urged to get in touch with the executive or better still drop in at the "Y" some Monday evening.

67TH SIDNEY

67th Sidney—Rev. A. C. McCallum of Bayside circuit, was guest preacher in Scotts Church on Sunday afternoon. He chose for his text the 18th verse of the 13th chapter of Matthew 18:18.

The rapt attention of the congregation showed their interest in this helpful discourse.

Mr. and Mrs. Edison Sine and daughters spent Sunday in Marmora, guests of Mrs. Lewis Phillips.

Mr. and Mrs. Carman Frost, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Dafoe and Mr. and Mrs. A. Lott spent a couple of days in Toronto last week where they visited friends and attended the Royal Winter Fair.

Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Sine were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Dafoe and Mr. and Mrs. Morley Sine.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Sanborn, of Batawa, were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lott.

Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Dafoe were Mr. and Mrs. C. Frost and Mr. and Mrs. Avery Martyn.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Don't make a situation out of Nothing

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 19, and at one of the clubs where I attend dances and other social functions with parents or a girl friend, I met a married man who is a friend of the family. This was a year and a half ago, and during that time he has called in love with me. But I'm not interested in him other than as a friend.

When at the club, he dances with me, and he has told several of my friends that he is in love with me. I don't take it seriously, and just pass it off; but, unfortunately, other people don't, and they are talking about me. I know my friends know that I haven't done anything wrong, but how can I make other people understand that?

I'm not going to stop going places and enjoying myself, and I can't ignore him completely, just because of a lot of gossip. What can I do?

M. T.

Dear M.T.:

Unless there is more to this situation than your letter indicates it seems to me that you are almost certainly taking all of this too seriously.

Naturally, you don't want any gossip going around about you and a married man. But if your relationship has gone no further than a few dances at a club party, what's there to worry about? If people talk about you with no more to go on than that, they're hard up for something to gossip about, and you should have too much sense to pay any attention.

I am taking it for granted that there has been nothing in your behavior toward this man that would give anyone cause to criticize you. Are you sure you're not being kidded when people tell you he has told them he is in love with you?

If I were you, I would stop making a situation out of this thing, behave perfectly naturally when this man happens to be one of your club parties, and ignore what anyone says. If you take this attitude, I'm sure you'll have no further trouble.

Let the young man handle this himself

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a senior in high school and very much interested in a fellow of 21. We have been seeing each other steadily for two months. He has just told his mother of our friendship, and she disapproves of it, even though she has never met me. I know that the reason is that we are of different nationalities.

He knows his mother is wrong, but he will not go against her wishes. How can I come to an understanding with her if she refuses to meet me?

A. F. R.

Dear A. F. R.:

It's not your place to make an effort to come to an understanding with this chap's mother. If you and this young man had been friends for a long time and were planning to get married, it would be different. But when you tell me you only known him two months, it's a little too early for you to get into the family picture.

It seems to me you'd better let the young man handle this problem himself. If he prefers to break off his friendship with you rather than cross his mother, you had better accept his decision. You can be sure he's not going to be happy about it if you keep urging him to go against his real feelings and wishes.

Have you thought of the possibility that in spite of the fact that you're still a schoolgirl, while her son is a young man, that might be influencing this mother? She may feel you're too young for him to get serious about.

In any event, make it clear to this fellow that you want him to follow his own conscience.

BEAUTY

Movie novices get restyled

When you see that cute starlet on the screen and note that she moves with grace, uses her hands beautifully, has a personality that appeals to your mind as well as your heart, you may not suspect that she went through a tearful and hard-working course before she got that way. She wasn't born with all the graces. Few girls are. But Hollywood knows how to create them. The process of creating loveliness and charm of manner, as well as visual pulchritude, is known as restyling.

Illustrated by Anne Brown

Silhouettes can be normalized.

It is all done by experts—make-up artists, dress designers, milliners, physical education specialists, vocal teachers. Marvelous, eh? And these experts say that there are possibilities of restyling any girl whose mind is open to suggestions and who will work hard at the job. Plain Jane had better stop bawling and get busy with the matter of making herself attractive and interesting. If she can't have beauty, she can have chic, which is rated quite as high as pulchritude by some observers.

It is encouraging to know that if you don't like yourself the way you are, you can be the kind of a girl you dream of being. Even if it is not a complete transformation, there will be modern improvements that will put you in a different bracket.

Making progress along the good looks road is stimulating, exciting, a great satisfaction. It isn't unusual for a rather colorless young thing of twenty to take on a lovely bloom at thirty. During the intervening years she found out what was lacking in her composition and went out and got it.

If the feminine silhouette is too plump or too thin, it can be brought to normal weight and measurements—if one has health and vitality and a will-to-do. Less sugar, fats and starches will starve fat cells. More of these elements will build curves. It is largely a matter of putting one's mind on this precise-change performance, controlling the appetite, getting outdoor exercise, following the laws of hygienic living.

A new, more flattering hairdo and well work miracles for a girl who is inclined to be careless about grooming, is on the dowdy side. She can buy it from any hair stylist.

Many women fail to make the grade because they lack taste in dress. They select dingy, unattractive colors, know nothing about the importance of line. Others do not qualify because of sloppy carriage. Correct posture will give any woman style and flair.

JUST THE PEAK

Christmas Island in the Indian Ocean is the top of a mountain 15,000 feet high, rising 1,200 feet above the water.

British Women Like Sea Job

London.—(CP) — Life on the ocean wave has become attractive for large numbers of British women.

One shipping official said his company (Cunard) has nearly 600 women working at sea and the "waiting list is so long we can't accept any more applicants."

There are long queues for such jobs as stewardess, nursing sister, assistant purser, telephone operator, hairdresser, laundry woman and bath attendant. No girls under 23 are employed and nursing sisters must be 30 or over.

Here's the company's description of the ideal stewardess: "She should be domestically inclined, but pure domesticity is not enough. She should be adaptable, with a capacity for understanding, have tact and patience, and the ability to submit to strict discipline."

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

When names are imprinted on cards, wife's name comes first

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

One certainly can be confused when looking at "sample" Christmas cards with a view to how to order the name imprinted on them! My wife and I went shopping for our Christmas cards, wanted to order our names printed on them, and were so bewildered as to what form is right we decided to wait and ask for your advice. We want to have just our two names (let's say Mary and John); we have no children. Should we order "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith," the form we saw printed on many of the cards? Or, if our first names, should my wife's name or mine come first? Should we include our last name?

"John"

"Confusing" is indeed the word for the name-forms imprinted on the cards shown in the Christmas card albums!

If you wish your Christmas cards to register the informality that is really appropriate for such friendly items as Christmas cards, don't order your formal name, "Mr. and Mrs. ——," imprinted on the cards. This formality is not only not appropriate on informal greeting cards, but is also absolutely incorrect when the last name is added after the message, either printed or written, on your Christmas cards.

So use your first names.

and the rule is that, when names are imprinted on cards, the wife's name comes first . . . Mary and John. And, unless your first names are easily identifiable—not "Mary and John"—you'd better order the last name too . . . and cross it out when it is well work miracles for a girl who is inclined to be careless about grooming, is on the dowdy side. She can buy it from any hair stylist.

Many women fail to make the grade because they lack taste in dress. They select dingy, unattractive colors, know nothing about the importance of line. Others do not qualify because of sloppy carriage. Correct posture will give any woman style and flair.

She is posing as "never been married"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'm in a quandary! I am to be married for the second time, and since my prospective husband doesn't want his friends to know that I have been married before, I have been using my maiden name and sent out my wedding invitations in my maiden name. My friends who have received the invitations tell me that as I have a child (the child, however, does not live with me) I should either use my married name or get legal permission to use my maiden name. Now I am fearful that if I am married by my maiden name this marriage may not be legal. Please advise me.

Worried.

I should think that, since you have a child, and since you have not legal permission to use your maiden name, your husband-to-be would prefer to have you use your married name! However, you must straightforwardly and honestly face your marital status, as well as your name-status, because when you and your fiance apply for the marriage license and for the marriage certificate, you will have to answer the important question as to whether you are "single, widowed, or divorced" . . . and, lady, you'd better be honest about it! Why not talk over your situation with your minister, or if this isn't possible, with your lawyer.

New W.M.S. Officers Elected

Wallbridge — The November meeting of the W.M.S. of Wallbridge held at the parsonage was well attended with 17 members and visitors present. The president Mrs. Charles Fair, presided.

Mrs. Charles Fair and Mrs. B. Haman read the program from the Missionary Monthly, and Mrs. H. Phillips read the minutes of the last meeting which were approved, and Mrs. L. Ketcheson gave the treasurer's report.

A brief report of the program, given at Ritic's Church, was given by Mrs. C. Fair, Readings, "A Japanese Virtue", and "This is The Year We Explore Japan", were given by Mrs. L. Ketcheson and Mrs. Bruce. These were followed by the Study Book, "Early History of Japan", by Mrs. B. Hinchcliffe, and "Modern History of Japan", by Mrs. S. Nicholson. Mrs. L. Badgley read a poem, "Little Miss Muffet", after which Mrs. H. Ketcheson gave a reading, "Witnessing in Good Confession". Mrs. James Sine, a solo, "You Can Smile" accompanied by Mrs. C. Fair at the piano.

Mrs. J. Sine then gave an interesting reading on "Temperance" and followed with the report of the nominating committee as follows:

President, Mrs. S. Nicholson; first vice-president, Mrs. L. W. Woods; second vice-president, Mrs. C. H. Wood; recording secretary, Mrs. K. Kingston; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. N. Chisholm; treasurer, Mrs. L. J. Ketcheson; temperance, Mrs. C. Fair; community friendship, Mrs. B. Haman; Christian stewardship, Mrs. F. Harris; supply secretary, Mrs. B. Hinchcliffe; pianist, Mrs. E. Lane; Missionary Monthly, Mrs. C. Sine; press secretary, Mrs. F. Harris; Mission Band, Mrs. L. W. Woods, Mrs. C. Fair; flower committee, Mrs. M. Sine, Mrs. F. Harris, Mrs. W. Wickson; nominating committee, Mrs. L. Ketcheson, Mrs. E. Lane, Mrs. M. Phillips; auditors, Mrs. M. Phillips and Mrs. Ken Kingston.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Neelands and refreshments were served.

MARMORA

Marmora—John Brownlie spent the weekend in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Chrysler moved on Saturday to their new home in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Smith and son Ronald, of Belleville, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. William Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bishop and son Clarence of Coyne, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Bishop.

Mrs. J. A. Shannon is spending a few days in Ottawa with her daughter, Mrs. James Henderson, and Mr. Henderson.

Mr. Frank Wright of Hamilton, is spending a week with relatives here.

Anniversary Service

Cordova United Church held its anniversary with a special service on Sunday afternoon at which the pastor Rev. G. D. Young, B.A., B.D., officiated. There was a good attendance augmented by members of St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora.

Zion United Church Choir, of north Marmora led in the service of praise and rendered an anthem.

In addition, a men's trio, Messrs. William Nickle, Frank Wiley and George Fox, also sang. The topic of the sermon was "Saving through spending."

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about Food ... What's Cooking?

Cabbage puts cooks in a quandary.

If they boil it a long time, they create a dish of fine flavor but the aroma in the kitchen sends everyone to the nearest exit. If they cook it covered with boiling water, the cabbage is easy to handle but most of the vitamins and minerals are washed down the drain. If they braise it slowly with a ham hock and apples, the cabbage acquires a divine taste that commits mayhem on the digestive tract.

The solution seems to be to cook the cabbage as quickly as possible in as little water as possible. This is all right if you like cabbage that is nearly-raw. It's all right too if you douse the cabbage with a rich sweet-sour sauce.

Another method, as in today's recipe, is to pantry the cabbage until barely tender, and then steep it in a sour cream sauce until serving time. Veal steaks are cut from the leg of veal. They should be slightly thicker than thin veal cutlets. Ask the butcher to pound them with a cleaver for tenderness.

Veal Steak With Cabbage Goulash
Serves 4.

1 small head cabbage
1 medium size onion chopped fine
Vegetable fat
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup sour cream
Salt—pepper
4 veal steaks 4 ounces each
1-4 cup flour
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Remove outer leaves of cabbage. Cut out heart. Cut cabbage into strips about 1-4 inch wide. Separate chunks of cabbage into leaves.

Melt 2 tablespoons fat in large frying pan. Add onion, and pantry until onion is yellow. Add cabbage and continue cooking slowly until cabbage is yellow and semi-tender. Two frying pans may be necessary. Add 1-4 cup of water to pan if necessary to keep cabbage from sticking. Cabbage will shrink as it cooks.

Add salt and pepper to taste. Add paprika. Put cabbage in top part of double boiler over simmering water. Add lemon juice and sour cream. Keep in double boiler until mixture is hot and ready to serve.

Mix the flour with 1 teaspoon salt and 1-8 teaspoon pepper. Dip veal into flour. Pat off excess flour.

Melt fat to a depth of 4-1 inch in a heavy frying pan. Brown the veal steaks slowly on each side. Then place steaks in a slow oven 325 degrees for 30 minutes to cook through. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Serve cabbage alongside veal on serving plates.

Women's Activities

WHITE'S W.A.

White's District — Mrs. A. J. Hockaday was hostess to the members and visitors of the White's Woman's Association on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 16.

The first vice-president, Mrs. Floyd Dudley, opened the meeting.

Mrs. Albert Jones took charge of the devotional. The Scripture reading John 17:1-13 was given by Mrs. Frank Sandercock. Mrs. Ernest Curtis gave a reading, "Release from Despair". Hymn, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" closed the worship service.

A financial report of the supper in October was given by the treasurer, Mrs. Ritchie Ketcheson. Mrs. Frank Sandercock reported that she would donate flannelette for cases for silverware to be made up by Mrs. Hunt.

Mrs. Young, Mrs. Dudley and Mrs. W. A. Jeffery were chosen as nominating committee to act with the president, Mrs. Glen Meyers, to prepare a slate of officers for the year 1951. The committee met at the close of the meeting.

Nineteen members were present. There were also four visitors and several children.

Mrs. Walter Jones thanked the ladies for a plant sent her at the Belleville General Hospital. Mrs. Hockaday and Mrs. Hunt also thanked the ladies for flowers sent them. It was moved that good wishes be sent to the president who had been ill.

Mrs. C. Rush paid dues and Mrs. Westfall and Mrs. George Bilham made birthday donations. It was decided to have an exchange of Christmas gifts at the December meeting valued at 25 cents.

Mrs. Dudley took charge of the program. "Three Blind Mice", was sung by all. Mrs. Casey Ketcheson gave a reading, "Free Meal".

Mrs. Fell, as guest speaker, gave an interesting resume on physiotherapy which is defined as healing by physical means such as heat, light, electricity, water, massage, infra-red lamps, ultra-violet rays and wax bath.

Physiotherapy Practised

Physiotherapy has been practised in Canada for the last 10-15 years at the University of Toronto and at McGill University, Montreal, and since June in Belleville General Hospital. It has been successfully used in the treatment of poliomyelitis by the hot pack method. It has sometimes taken two years to start the movement of muscles then recovery was rapid.

The wax bath is effective and may even be used for chapped hands. Several coatings of wax are used. This produces heat. When it is removed the hands are soft and pink.

Ultra-violet rays are used especially for shingles and poison ivy. The first treatment can last only 15 seconds.

Hypotherapy consists of hot water baths. This is used for the treatment of the blood.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Fell for her fine informative address.

Mrs. H. C. Lord gave a reading, "The Ladies Aid". The Misses Joan and Barbara Shoemaker favored with two duets, "Santa Lucia" and, "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks By Night".

The next meeting will be held on Tuesday Dec. 19 at the home of Mrs. Albert Jones, and Mrs. Westfall.

Mrs. Ritchie Ketcheson moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Hockaday for her hospitality. This was seconded by Mrs. George Bilham.

The hostess served dainty refreshments assisted by Mrs. Redditt, Mrs. Meyers and Mrs. Dudley.

SUSPENSIONS LIFTED

Toronto, Nov. 22. (CP)—Within 24 hours of the lifting of their suspension, two Toronto detectives carried out a raid early yesterday which resulted in the arrest of a man on a breaking and entering charge. The two detectives, William McNeely and John Gillespie, were reinstated after being suspended for several weeks while the police commission investigated the case of two innocent persons in a car who were fired upon by the officers after happening into a trap set for an extortionist.

Four-Day Milk Delivery Strike Now Concluded

Chatham, Ont., Nov. 22. (CP)—Kent county's four-day milk delivery strike is over.

Distributors and producers last night agreed to re-open price negotiations and resume milk deliveries in the interim. They also agreed on a price of $4.30 a hundredweight during negotiations, the price set last week by a government-appointed arbitrator.

Both groups met in special session last night after the Ontario Milk Control Board had ordered the producers to end their strike within seven days at the government-set price.

Following the meeting, they released a statement saying:

"After meeting with the Ontario Milk Control Board and at their request, the executive of the Kent County Milk Producers Association decided to re-negotiate the price of milk with Kent county distributors and to resume shipments at once."

The strike began last Saturday when producers rejected a decision by the arbitrator, Judge Eric Cross, setting the price at $4.30. 20 cents more than the previous rate but 30 cents less than the producers had demanded.

Dairies in the area have kept up deliveries in the meantime, shipping milk from London and other points.

Lyle S. Chapel, representing the distributors, said following the strike meeting the distributors will "do their best" to handle deliveries today if the milk is received from producers.

Earlier he said the distributors have definite commitments today and that they could not accept delivery from producers before Thursday.

U.S. Thanksgiving On Different Days

Washington (AP) —President Truman has proclaimed next Thursday, Nov. 23, as the national day of Thanksgiving. But two states, Arkansas and Texas, will have their own Thanksgiving day on Nov. 30. These states will observe both holidays.

President Truman fixed the Nov. 23 date in line with a Congressional resolution calling for Thanksgiving on the fourth Thursday in the month.

But in Arkansas, the law listing the state's legal holidays sets the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving. Since this is a five - Thursday November this year, that means Nov. 30.

There'll be a little confusion in Arkansas over the double holiday. Some federal workers in the state will observe the earlier date others the later.

The situation is different in Texas. Gov. Allan Shivers proclaimed both dates as Thanksgiving with the explanation that Texas "has enough to be thankful for to have two Thanksgiving days."

Also, Shivers pointed out, banks and other businesses would close on Nov. 23 and many of the state's educational colleges and high school football games are set for Nov. 30.

The tangle over different Thanksgiving dates began in 1939, when the late President F. Roosevelt decided to make the next-to-last Thursday as the date for celebrating.

Mr. Roosevelt reasoned that it would help business to have a longer interval between Thanksgiving and Christmas. His idea was that most Christmas shoppers don't get going until Thanksgiving is out of the way.

OFFENSIVE BUSINESS

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP)—For operating an offensive business—buying and selling old eggs—Nathan Epstein yesterday was fined $100 or 30 days. A Health Department inspector said Epstein bought eggs that failed to hatch in hatcheries, broke them into bowls and sold them to laneries.

Reeve for 32 Years Opposed Only Twice

Birsay, Sask. — CP — Reeve Herb Pearson of the rural municipality of Colonsay says he can't retire—the voters won't let him. The 70-year-old farmer has been opposed only twice in 32 years. He won both times. All the other years he has been returned by acclamation.

Birsay is 60 miles south of Saskatoon.

Canada Planning to Boost Air-Power Contribution For Defence of Europe

Ottawa, Nov. 22 (CP) —Canada is planning to boost the proposed scale of her air-power contribution to the peacetime defence of Europe, Air Marshal W. A. Curtis has indicated.

The original plan, before Korea, was that one fighter squadron at a time would go to Britain to train starting early next year. The chief of the air staff, in a November news letter to Commonwealth, indicates that this proposal will go by the boards and that more than one squadron will serve abroad simultaneously.

Furthermore he strips away any doubt that the squadrons are ticketted for anything less than European defence, and says "direct aid" for the United Nations and for the Atlantic Pact powers has become one of the two main purposes of the RCAF's big expansion program.

The chief says the RCAF has embarked on "two main programs," one for Canadian defence one for "direct aid" to U.N. and the Atlantic Pact.

He reaffirms that operational elements "are being equipped and trained to operate anywhere" and said that in addition to the transport squadron now in U.N. service in Korea:

"Our next operational contribution will be made early next year when a fighter squadron will be moved to the United Kingdom. It will be followed later by others, all eventually to be using Canadian-built aircraft . . . any air contribution to Europe is of the greatest value."

No. 421 First to Go

Air Marshal Curtis is out of town but a spokesman at headquarters said it is possible that more than one squadron will be posted to Europe at one time once the fighter squadron expansion program really swings into stride next year. More than five fighter squadrons are slated to be formed.

The first to go to Britain, No. 421 of Chatham, N.B., will be equipped with R.A.F. Vampires in Britain at first and then get Canadian-made F86 Sabres, deliveries of which should start by the end of this year.

Air Marshal Curtis urged former members of the force to seek recruits so it can have a waiting list of cadets. He said it needs men for virtually every trade, as well as aircrew candidates.

He said the top priority in the "vital part of the RCAF program is being given to air defence and secondly to Maritime—that is coastal and anti-submarine — operations. All squadrons would be at wartime strength, that is, considerably larger than is normal in peacetime.

Some of the aircraft have been sold off to other countries in a rising market for shipping, but 64 in all have remained under the Canadian flag — compared with the original 48 which the government hoped to keep in operation.

28 Making War Unaided

Of these, 36 are operating with the old of the federal subsidy. The remaining 28 are making their way unaided, though some of them operate under an arrangement whereby what loses they might have would be counterbalanced by profits from British-flag vessels operated by the same owners.

Losses of the early months of the year have been cut down heavily by a shipping boom this latter month, largely stimulated by the Korean conflict and the possibility of a broadened war. Cargo volume and freight rates ficials say it is still too early to assess the over-all results of the year's operations.

Meanwhile, there are as yet no indications that the ship subsidy may be extended through another year. Prime Minister St. Laurent made it clear a year ago that the transfer-subsidy plan was primarily aimed at keeping for Canada a wartime shipping potential.

That potential appears to have been attained now through the recent establishment of the North Atlantic Nations' shipping pool.

Rectors, Laymen To Attend Service For Late Primate

Archdeacon Arthur Smith, Rector of St. Thomas' Church and the Rev. J. B. Creegan, Rector of Christ Church, together with a number of laymen from both parishes will go to Kingston on Friday to attend a memorial service for the late Primate of the Church of England in Canada, the Most Rev. C. P. Fenning, which will be conducted in St. George's Cathedral, Friday evening at eight o'clock. It is expected that there will be a large attendance of the clergy and laity from all parts of the Diocese of Ontario.

Archbishop Kingston spent the early years of his life in the Diocese of Ontario and he was admitted to the ministry of the Church when he was made a Deacon at an ordination service which was held by the then Bishop of the Diocese in St. Thomas' Church here in 1913.

Body of Primate Lies in State In Cathedral

Toronto, Nov. 22—(CP)—The body of Most Rev. George F. Kingston, Church of England primate of all Canada, today lay in state in St. James' Cathedral, where the funeral service will be held tomorrow.

Archbishop Kingston died here Monday at 61. He suffered a heart attack a week earlier.

In recognition of the Archbishop's primacy it was arranged that a continuous watch would be kept at the four corners of the casket. Named to take part in the 12-hour watch were clergy and laymen representing all the church's dioceses in Canada.

Several bishops who will take part in the funeral service, which will start at 9 a.m. EST tomorrow, are attending this week's meeting here of the executive council of the church's general synod. The meeting is to be adjourned for several hours to enable the clerical and lay delegates to attend the primate's funeral.

The order of service will be Holy Communion and the Anglican church's office for the burial of the dead.

Celebrant of Holy Communion will be Most Rev. W. R. Adams, Metropolitan of British Columbia and acting primate.

Order for the burial of the dead will be read by Rt. Rev. R. H. Waterman, Bishop of Nova Scotia. Rev. Dr. S. H. Cosgrave, former provost of Trinity College here, will read the lesson. Canon J. R. Ward, rector of St. Stephen's Church, here, is to read the prayers.

Rt. Rev. W. L. Wright, Bishop of Algoma, will conduct the committal service in the chapel of St. James the Less at St. James' Cemetery.

Bishop Wright, secretary of the House of Bishops, announces that it has been requested that no flowers be sent.

WOMEN NEEDED CLAIM

Toronto, Nov. 22 (CP)—Prejudice against women working continues in Canada but if all married females suddenly withdrawn from the labor force there would be an immediate depression, Nita L. Dane, president of the Toronto Business and Professional Women's Club, said last night.

Addressing the Toronto Council of Women, Miss Dane said there are more than 1,000,000 working women in Canada making up 20 per cent of the country's entire working force. About 60 per cent of the women are married.

Parliament Votes on Sunday Opening of British Festival And Fireworks Are Predicted

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 22—CP—Parliament decides tomorrow whether amusement parks connected with the 1951 Festival of Britain shall remain open on Sundays, and the vote is expected to be close.

The issue arises on a bill authorizing Sunday opening of the festival next year. This is expected to receive second reading. But political tensions may result from a clause in the bill which would legalize a Sunday "fun fare," complete with merry-go-rounds and other carnival attractions.

Important elements of the labor government are reported determined that the bill should go through as scheduled. But there are strong Sabbatarian influences within the party and forcasts are that labor will invoke its "conscience clause" exempting rebels from party discipline.

Thus, although the government will issue a three-line whip for the debate, members who cannot support it will be told that their ethical reasons will be considered to have relieved them of faith. Votes cast against the bill would be considered more seriously than an abstention, but even then it seems doubtful whether extreme disciplinary measures would be taken.

May be Strong Opposition

Conservative opposition may be strong. Three amendments have already been tabled, the most disturbing the house to refuse second reading to a bill which, it is claimed, gives festival organizers privileges and immunities not enjoyed by other sections of the community.

Another non - parliamentary groups opposed is the Lord's Day Observance Society. Secretary H. H. Martin, who announced recently that he proposes to try to implant on Parliament the idea for a more-subdued Sunday, told reporters his society opposes Sunday opening not only of the fun fare but "of the entire exhibition."

On the other hand, the Sunday Freedom Association, which claims a membership of 200,000, suggests that it be left to the individual whether any part of the festival should be visited on Sunday.

Spirited Defence

In a spirited defence of Sunday opening, R. I. French, chairman of the festival garden wrote to the Times that nowadays an amusement park is as pious as it used to be, there isn't a house within 300 yards of the site, and anyway other amusements parks in Britain do business on Sunday.

Defeat of the bill would be a setback to Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the council and long associated with plans to make the festival a symbol of British recovery.

Last week a member of parliament accidentally called Morrison "Lord Festival," and the deputy Prime Minister seemed to like the tag.

Police Get Him .

Hoboken, N. J., Nov. 22 (AP) — Steve Dadiak said he liked to read newspaper divorce notices to get a line on possible dates with divorcees.

Last night he drove up to keep one with recently-divorced Mrs. Catherine Morrison.

But he didn't keep it. Police, tipped off ahead of time by Mrs. Morrison, took him in tow instead on a disorderly conduct charge.

SOON FOLLOWED WIFE

Napanee, Nov. 22. (CP)—Just three weeks after the death of his wife, John M. Joyce, 91, died here Tuesday.

The couple celebrated their 68th wedding anniversary a few days before her death last month.

Cats' Star Job In Food Factory As Food Tasters

Slough, Buckinghamshire, England, Nov. 22 — (Reuters) — Ten cats here have the star job in one of the largest animal - food factories in the world.

The cats are used as food testers; all they have to do to earn their keep is taste dishes of animal food each day.

As the 10 discriminating critics cluster round their enamel bowls each morning, Victor Martin, nutrition expert, stands by with notebook and pencil awaiting their verdicts. Sometimes the dish is cleared quickly, other times the cats swish their tails and walk away contemptuously.

"They never disagree," said Martin. "Either they all find it good, and eat it, or all find it bad and leave it."

Governor-General Unveils Plaque

Toronto, Nov. 21—(CP)—Governor-General Alexander today unveiled a plaque in memory of William Arthur Dryden, 68, first president of the Royal Winter Fair and managing director from 1936 until his death last year.

Viscount Alexander and Lady Alexander then made a 2½-hour tour of the 28-acre Fair layout. They visited everything from the flower show to the pig pens.

He congratulated the Fair's president, John McKee, on this year's exhibits.

"It's the best Royal Winter Fair I've seen," said the Governor-General.

Baby Beef Will Be Auctioned On Last Day

Toronto, Nov. 22—(CP)—Today's the wind-up day at the Royal Winter Fair, and about the biggest thing to be cleared off the show's decks is the auction sale of baby beef.

Steers entered in competition for the King's guineas by about 200 boys and girls from Ontario calf clubs go on the block. The champion is an 870-pound Aberdeen Angus named Andy, owned by Alex McIntosh, 17, of Guelph, Ont.

If things go as well as they did in the best year in the past, Alex stands to shove as much as $13,000 in his blue denims.

The Fair tried a new feature this year—the "sale of steers". For the first time breeding cattle are being sold at auction at the Royal. Eighty-eight Aberdeen Angus, Herefords and Shorthorns were sold at three separate auctions in the past couple of days and brought a total of $41,745.

Aberdeen Angus have brought the best average price so far and a bull owned by Edwards Brothers of Watford, Ont., was sold for $2,350, highest price ever obtained for an Aberdeen Angus bull in Canada and the highest for any animal sold at the Fair this week.

Thirty Scorthorns last night brought $24,320. Highest price of $2,550 was paid by Frelling Huysen of Homdel, N.Y., to S. S. Bennett of Georgetown, Ont., for a junior yearling bull that finished fourth in his class.

At the norse show the Fair's classy night-time attraction, Great Britain last night won the international jumping competition to tie Mexico with three firsts in the seven slights so far of the riding contest. Canada picked off the other first place Monday night.

Tonight in the international team challenge trophy contest, the teams from Mexico, Chile, Republic of Ireland, United States, Great Britain and Canada meet here for the last time this year.

Princess Pats Start on Last-Lap Preparations at Fort Lewis Before Departure for Korea

By BILL BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Fort Lewis, Wash., Nov. 22 — (CP) — Korea-bound members of the Special Force today started on last-lap preparations before departure for the Far East.

They had a busy day ahead.

On the agenda were: routine inoculation shots, final kit inspection, issuing of standard unit equipment and the checking of embarkation rolls.

The troops, led by Lt.-Col. J. R. Stone of Salmon Arm, B. C., are members of the 2nd Battalion, of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. They reached this sprawling United States Army camp last night in a teeming rain.

But they came in style.

The train which brought them from Wainwright, Alta., was described by some of the 1,037 men as luxurious.

Upholstered seats and dining - car meals contrasted sharply with the "eight horse, 40-men," type of rail transport veterans remembered from Second World War campaigns.

The four trains cleared the unit on its two-day trip.

The troops were met by Brig. J. M. (Rocky) Rockingham, Commander of the Special Force, and immediately went into a routine of sign in waiting buses.

Although the move was to be also an exercise in security, it was marked along the route by publicity-waiting crowds who wanted an extra glimpse of soldier kin who had spent embarkation leave with them only a short while ago.

Allowed on Platforms

During waking hours, relatives were allowed onto station platforms to find their departing fathers, brothers, husbands or sweethearts.

But apparent heartlessness which prevented them from straying station platforms at after - midnight stops was prompted by officers' desires to let the troops sleep.

Men still up waiting to greet families were allowed to leave the train to see them. But families could not comb cars filled with sleeping soldiers to find their loved ones.

Lt.-Col. Stone left the train at Vancouver to greet Mrs. A. R. I. Davis, who one week ago organized a Women's Auxiliary unit to arrange Christmas boxes for the soldiers.

Everything was ready to be put aboard the train during its 40-minute stop, including 400 pounds of Christmas cake, baked overnight last week by a Vancouver department store.

Also in the gifts were two store-window Christmas trees and hundreds of boxes of comforts packed by two Vancouver stores to the auxiliary's specifications.

There was one unscheduled delay in the arrival.

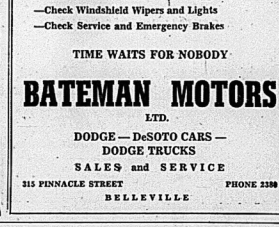
The Great Northern Railway diesel locomotive hauling the first train ran out of fuel just north of Seattle. The train ground to a halt as the locomotive gasped through its last drops of oil. However it was refuelled in an hour.

The delay also enabled a Roman Catholic padre, Capt. J. J. Valley who flew from Kingston, Ont., Monday, to catch up with the unit at Seattle.

Thief Steals First Pumpkin Pie of Bride

Philadelphia, Nov. 22 (AP)— Mrs. Ida Fein will never known how her first pumpkin pie came out.

Mrs. Fein is more or less reconciled to the theft of her silverware, table linen, frozen chicken, liquor and toy bank. But she's still furious about one item the thief took — a pumpkin pie.



"I've been married 22 years and it was the first pumpkin pie I ever baked. Now I'll never know how it turned out."

To enjoy Catelli Spaghetti at its very best, heat a tin of Catelli Meat and Tomato Sauce and pour over the steaming spaghetti.

Season to Begin That Novel

Now that November's here and indoor life seems stronger pull than the gray world outside, a certain number of persons are saying to themselves that this is the time to begin—really begin—the writing of the book they've had in mind for so long but just haven't gotten around to. There is something about late fall that seems to stir latent novels—particularly autobiographical novels—in the heads of folk who never did get written a book but who know they could if they were only to try, says a new Times columnist. For have they not read other people's novels which led them to declare that they could write a book that would be no worse, certainly, than that one by Author X, and have they not been told by their friends that some day they ought to put their experiences into a book?

Such Interesting People

Furthermore, it appears that authors lead interesting lives having none of the dullness associated with 9 to 5 routines followed unswervingly in so many offices. Authors seem to be able to achieve a certain pleasant mobility, turning up here for a day book-authors' dinner, there for a (remunerative) lecture and passing through town on the way to London or Nice, stopping off long enough to be interviewed by Harvey Breit of our Book Review. The life of an author who is free to travel south for the winter, or to Tasmania when now it is spring, and to ply his trade sitting on some sunny beach, has a powerful attraction come November.

A Vast Heap of Words

And so between now and Jan. 1 or thereabouts a certain number of novels will be begun by people who see no reason why in their spare time they cannot put one word after another until several hundred thousand words later there will be, in a neat pile, the manuscript of a novel. After Jan. 1 there may remain; from among these hopefuls, one would-be writer still plugging away; the rest will have fallen by the wayside somewhere near the end of Chapter One—or perhaps at a point as far along as the middle of Chapter Two—convinced at last that what established authors say is true: writing is work. (The lone diehard plugger may go on to complete a best-seller or an opus hopelessly unsalable; in any event he, too, will know that he has worked.)

Basically It's All So Simple

The business of writing appears to be so ridiculously simple. All that is necessary is paper and a writing implement. It is not even essential to have, or to borrow, a table and chair; Thomas Wolfe wrote thousands of words standing up. Upon the paper one need only to put down what one has to say and if what one has written is done well enough and promises to be of interest to a sizable group of people the paper may be sold to someone desirous of giving its contents circulation. And yet one has only to read books written by college freshmen—and sophomores too, for that matter—who have been exposed over a number of formative years to the theory of communicating ideas to discover that writing is not easy, for if it were all bright young men and women would be good at it, and all of them are not.

Writers' Obstacle Course

It is so easy to write poorly. Few writers are able to turn out clear, orderly sentences—sparkling or bright though in mid-air and pinning it neatly to paper—as easily as one writes notes to an old friend. "Writing," said the novelist William Daniel Steele some time ago when he was being interviewed by Mr. Breit, "is very hard work . . . To put a sentence together is like climbing a mountain range." If it is easy to write poorly it is also easy not to write at all, as would-be . . . sentences discover when they must weigh the prospect of sitting long hours in a chair, fighting off writing's thought, against the attractions of a day ideally suited to bird hunting, or when doorbell, telephone, children, fatigue or just plain laziness daily conspire against the processes of expression. Does the fact that there is more to the setting down of words than many would-be writers suspect mean . . . that we are being deprived of some fine books which would be written were it not for that "very hard work"? There are those who would say, looking round about at each year's pile of new books, that the trouble is writing is still too easy—that too many November-bound novels are being completed (and sold).

Even if that is true it is something that here books are freely written, freely bought and sold and freely read—or not read. Unfortunately, not in every country can that statement be made.

Rotarians Hosts At Turkey Dinner For Teachers

Campbellford— More than 70 persons enjoyed a turkey dinner in the Parish hall on Monday evening, when the Campbellford Rotary Club played host to the teachers of the town schools on their annual Teachers' Night.

Guest speaker of the evening was Dr. Brown, assistant to Dr. Phelps, minister of Education for Ontario. The staffs of the High and Public Schools were on hand to hear the address, and they were all introduced by their respective principals, Mr. Haig of the Public School, and Mr. Armstrong of the High School. Father Moloney of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church spoke on behalf of the Sisters who teach at the Campbellford Separate School.

Dr. Brown was introduced by Mr. A. A. Martin of Brighton, inspector of schools in the district.

The subject of Dr. Brown's address was the reasons for the large percentage of incompeting various grades into under the new educational system. The subject matter had been thoroughly studied and thought it would be well worth while for those children who were qualified, to go ahead with their work, and not limit their studies to the grade during a school year. He said the plan was in the experimental stage, and was being tried out in some places, but if it did not prove successful it will be dropped in favour of the old grade system which is now employed in many schools throughout Ontario. The new plan is not compulsory, but if pupils and teachers of a school wish to try it, they can do so if they wish.

Rotarian H. H. Carr moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, who was thanked on behalf of the club by president A. K. Loucks.

Miss Georgina DeCarrol entertained the gathering with a vocal solo, "Blue Bird of Happiness", and also sang The King.

HOUSE STOLEN

Johannesburg, Nov. 22 (Reuter)—Police in Rhodesia are investigating the theft of a house at Roodepoort Camp, a town on the Witwatersrand. C. J. De Plessis, a miner, bought the house some time ago but has not moved it. When he visited his property the house was gone and so was the fence surrounding it. The thief only left the foundations.

Must Consider Seaway Route On St. Lawrence

Ottawa, Nov. 22—(CP)—Transport Minister Chevrier reiterated last night his belief that consideration must be given to an all-Canadian route for the St. Lawrence Seaway if the United States Congress continues to cold-shoulder the project.

Mr. Chevrier reviewed the history of the long-pending hydro and waterway development on the St. Lawrence-Great Lakes route in an address prepared for delivery in the CBC free-time political broadcast "The National Business".

He recalled that Canada and the United States had signed in 1941 an agreement—still awaiting U.S. congressional ratification — for joint development of the scheme, and added:

"It is impossible to obtain the joint development referred to in the 1941 agreement, then consideration must be given, as I have said, to a already has, to an all-Canadian route."

Completion of the seaway, he said, would "guarantee forever" an all-water route for Canadian grain, coal, petroleum and other products at substantially-reduced transportation cost through the elimination of trans-shipment at the Ontario points of Prescott, Port Colborne and Port Richhill.

The seaway would permit quick exploitation of the newly-discovered iron ore fields in Ungava, Quebec and Labrador.

On the hydro side of the development, it would provide another 9,000,000 horsepower, of which approximately 3,000,000 would be available to Canada. Ontario's acute power shortage was being accentuated by increasing defence production.

47 Stranded Pilgrims Return

Montreal, Nov. 22 (CP)—Forty-seven Canadian pilgrims, stranded in Rome by the crash of the plane "Canadian Pilgrim" in France last week, arrived in Montreal today aboard a Trans-World Airlines plane.

They left Rome Monday evening.

All had attended ceremonies marking the beatification of Marguerite Bourgeoys of Rome. They were met at Montreal airport by friends.

Msgr. Rita Bourassa of Bromptonville, Que., near Sherbrooke which he served had a wonderful experience. . . ."

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Fournier of Verdun, Que., said "we went over on the 'Canadian Pilgrim' and knew many of those who were killed. That was a powerful shock to us all. But our trips to the Holy Shrines and to our travel over historic places in France and Rome have left us breathless."

Porter Satisfied With Explanation About Delay

Toronto, Nov. 2—CP—Attorney-General Dana Porter said last night that he is satisfied with the explanation for the two-month delay in reporting Ottawa's hotel-room staying by politicians.

The Ontario Attorney-General has received a report from two officials of the department indicating that the delay in reporting the staying of Francis J. Sullivan, chief of the Lands and Forests Department, was due to the fact that at first there was nothing to indicate the death was anything but natural.

Sullivan was found dead early last Saturday in a suite in the Chateau Laurier. His widow has been charged with murder.

In Ottawa, the chief investigator in the 52-year-old Toronto solicitor was bludgeoned to death some 15 hours before police were called into the case.

Sullivan's body was found on the bedroom floor about 3 a. m. Saturday. His wife had called the night clerk to help to "get him back to bed."

Coroner Hastie were finally called into the case at noon Saturday after the autopsy had been performed. Investigators traced the time of death at some time around midnight Friday-Saturday.

Ab Cayan, Chief Inspector of Detectives, said last night, however, that police have not reached a conclusion as to the cause of death.

Sudbury, Nov. 21—CP—Hearing what is believed to be a record number of voters' list appeals, in Sudbury-Manitoulin area schedules to begin today before Mr. Justice A. Stauhlo. Approximately 1550 appeals in the area have been presented to the court.

Growth of the population by more than 3,000 during the year and a considerable movement from one dwelling to another are believed chiefly responsible for the heavy appeal rate.

Now! Proof that
BRUSHING TEETH RIGHT AFTER EATING WITH COLGATE DENTAL CREAM HELPS PREVENT TOOTH DECAY!

2 Years' research by LEADING UNIVERSITIES proves that test groups brushing teeth right after eating with Colgate Dental Cream showed amazing reduction in tooth decay

Under the direction of eminent dentists, one group of college men and women always brushed their teeth with Colgate Dental Cream right after eating—while another group followed their usual dental care. The average in the group using Colgate's as directed and using Colgate's exclusively, showed a startling reduction in the number of cavities! The other group developed new cavities at a much higher rate.

Research shows that decay is caused by mouth acids which are at their worst after meals. When you brush your teeth with Colgate's right after eating, you help remove mouth acids before they can harm enamel.

FURTHER PROOF FROM SCHOOL CHILDREN

Leading Canadian dentists examined and discovered 6,000 school children in corrective dental habits. In addition to diet changes and advice, the children were asked to brush their teeth after each meal.

The result: 16% fewer children with tooth decay! . . . Cavities dropped from an average of 3 per child to just over 2! . . . 55% more children received dental care that prevented either loss of teeth or serious dental troubles later in life! . . . The number of children with no defects—increased by 200%!

CLEANS YOUR BREATH AS IT CLEANS YOUR TEETH!

Scientific tests prove that in 7 out of 10 cases, Colgate's instantly stops bad breath that originates in the mouth! Colgate's active penetrating foam gets into hidden crevices between teeth—helps clean out decaying food-particles—stops stagnant saliva odors—removes the cause of much bad breath!

HELP YOUR CHILDREN AVOID TOOTH DECAY!

Insist that your children always brush their teeth after eating with Colgate Dental Cream. They'll like Colgate's delicious cleaning flavor, so it's easy to get them to use Colgate's correctly.

Rockets Rally for Three Goals In Third but Fail to Catch Lindsay Kins Who Win 5-4

By JACK BROWN

Playing their second game in as many nights, Belleville's Junior A Rockets went down to defeat last night in Lindsay, 5-4. They just couldn't find their feet the Lindsay net in the first two periods, and their amazing comeback in the third period just failed to gain them a tie.

The Rockets went into the third period short end of a 5-1 score, before the end of the game they had rapped in three smart ones and had the Lindsay team rattled. It was just a case of too little too late.

The Lindsay boys got the jump in the first period with three goals, while Houle was the only Belleville player to flash the red light. He and Mantle combined to tie the period, after the three Lindsay scores, to keep the Rockets in the game. During the period the locals found themselves penned in their own end time and again, and when they did get away in the other end of the rink, they couldn't find the net to their shots. The first Lindsay goal came just as Henhawke stepped back on the ice after serving a penalty for playing with a broken stick. Right after Henhawke's penalty, Lindsay was put away for crosschecking, and the Kin Juniors lost the advantage.

Lindsay Two Short

The Rockets failed to pay off in the period when Lindsay played two men short for 40 seconds. Walling and Shervington were serving time. They just could not get organized on the ice, and Lindsay frustrated them every time they made a move.

In the second period, coach Jimmy Meronek pulled "Turk" Broda out of the Belleville nets, and Bob Green went in. It took him a few minutes to settle down, and from there on in he was solid. Several times during the period the Rockets camped in the Lindsay goalie's doorstep, but beat them never. Finally—guy was nothing less than sensational as he kicked out shot and nine shots in a row.

It seemed at times as if the Belleville boys' luck had completely deserted them, to boot. Houle, Strahan, Doran and Gilmour were in on the Lindsay net time after time, but they just would not bumped out of position, without the puck, or shot wide of the mark time. On the other hand, the Kin Juniors rapped in two goals and gave themselves a comfortable lead.

Different Story

The third period was a different story, however. The Rockets came out full of fire, and after persistently finally paid off. Carey, who had fought all night long, got his reward at 4.46 of the period as he tipped in a shot that had fired from the blue line. Only a couple of minutes later, Carey had been smashed into the boards, hitting his head. He came back from that to score on a passing precision attack that finally jackpotted.

Then Turland got a charging penalty a minute after the Belleville goal, it was Carey again who made the big work in the killing.

He hurried the Lindsay puck carrier in their own end of the rink, and when they got control from him, Bob Green picked off their shots with ease. By this time, the Rockets were getting to give better than they had been taking, and the whole team caught fire.

Goals in Third

Midway through the period, everything blew up in a fight that saw Carley and Brown roughed up by others. They swung a few and then about three members of each team took off the gloves. Even the Lindsay goalie, McGurie, got in the swinging duel, and when it was all over the instigators drew five minutes each for fighting, and Walling of the Kin Juniors, got two minutes for high-sticking.

Playing five men to Lindsay's four, the Rockets couldn't seem to get untracked as Green, Schenkal and Innes ragged the puck almost out of the rink on them. At five aside, however, Doran fired a hard one at McGurie, and Strahan banged in the rebound to cut the Lindsay lead to two goals. And four minutes later, Doran sank one on a pass from Strahan to pull the locals to within one goal of a tie.

By that time, the bodies were flying all over the rink, as the officials, who never did clamp down to any extent, let almost everything go. Lunn and Gilmour were given the gate late in the period for high sticking, but several boardings escaped official notice.

For Belleville, Carey, Doran, Strahan, Houle and Mantle stood out, and McGurie, Corley, Dyment and the Vasey brothers were the Lindsay stalwarts.

Referee, Peter Nye, Peterborough; head linesman, Perry McIntosh, Lindsay.

Junior Marlies Within Two Points of First

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto Marlboros, junior members of the Toronto Maple Leaf farm system, after a slow start, are once again showing the form that carried them to first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A schedule last season.

The Marlies knocked off the league-leading Barrie Flyers 3-1 at Maple Leaf Gardens last night and the victory brought them to within two points of first place.

The game, in which Marlboros held command throughout, was the first half of the double bill. In the second game, Toronto St. Michael's came up with their third victory of the season, defeating the still-winless Waterloo Hurricanes 5-1.

Undefeated in their last three games and loser of only one in the last seven, Marlboros last night made up for a 3-2 setback handed them by the Flyers in the previous meeting between the two teams this season.

They did it in fairly convincing fashion, scoring a goal in period and keeping the Flyers off the score sheet until the final frame when Jackie Hamilton beat Don Lockhart on a solo effort.

John Lumley of Marlboros, who has been out for five minutes in the penalty box after a second-period fight, scored two goals, his second with Barrie shorthanded. Paul McDonald fired home Eric Nesterenko's pass for the other one.

Probably Concussion

Marlboros suffered a blow when Bruce Poland had to be carried from the ice on a stretcher after a mix-up near the Toronto goal mouth. Unconscious for about 15 minutes before being taken to St. Joseph's Hospital He was reported suffering from a possible concussion, although feeling better.

The second half of the twinbill marked the first meeting of the season between the fourth and 10th place clubs in the junior loop.

St. Mike's, now six points out of third place, led 2-0 at the end of the first period on goals by Joe Ingoldsby and Fred Sandford. Bob Sabourin added one in the middle period, and Jackie Weldrake, who also assisted on two goals, shared final period scoring with Bill Dineen.

The Hurricanes came through with their only goal in the last period when Roger Maisonneuve beat Bob Shropshire on a passing play with Charlie MacDonald and Dunnette.

The Hurricanes who now have a record of one tie and 12 losses, have taken steps to bolster their lacklustre team. They have obtained left winger Paul Oliver, who scored close to a point a game for Oshawa Generals, in a trade for right-winger Gordon Boniface, and also have signed Ross Kelley, a Toronto Mercantile League defenceman.

There was no action in the OHA major series last night. Tonight the last-place Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen visit the second-place Hamilton Tigers.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, Nov. 22 — (AP) — Talk about over - emphasizing football, how about this? . . . Colorado College, which won the Rocky Mountain Conference title this season, already is worrying about a surplus of good bowler players . . . Seems that so many Canadian boys, and other good students, have listened to the encouragement from C. C. that 28 first-class prospects turned out this year while only 22 can be dressed for any game . . . Some of the 11 letter men may be cut from the squad . . . Colorado Springs also is coming up as a rival to Hershey, Pa., as a home for retired cross - checkers. About eight of the Canadian alumni are established in business there and will form the nucleus of a team that will oppose the C. C. Varsity in an "old-timers" game. Coach Cheddy Thompson and tub-thumper G. I. Forsythe also will try to hold those Varsity titlers.

What, No Service?

The new Oklahoma University press box, tabbed as the "most improved" in the United States by a vote of sports writers, already has drawn its first complaint from the scribbling fraternity . . . During last Saturday's game against Missouri a visiting writer moaned: "What sort of a joint is this? The pencil sharpeners are manually operated instead of by electricity."

One-minute Sports Page

Lefty Gomez has been telling upstate New York audiences that Joe McCarthy belongs in baseball's Hall of Fame because he "made more records than any other manager." . . . And Tommy Henrich adds: "I played under three great managers, Casey Stengel, Bucky Harris and McCarthy. I'll take McCarthy as the greatest manager who ever lived. He wrote the book" . . . At the football writers' gathering Monday, a scribe asked Navy coach Eddie Erdelatz: "Roughly, what's your program of preparing for the Army game?" . . . Replied Eddie thoughtfully: "That's it — roughly."

Winnipeg Fans Tell in Song About Bombers

(By The Canadian Press)

Supporters of Winnipeg Blue Bombers have their own musical version of what the Western Canada football champions are going to do to Toronto Argonauts in the Grey Cup final next Saturday. Starting 24 hours before gametime, when the main body of Winnipeg fans arrives, Toronto will hear a lot of a four-verse effort to the tune of "John Brown's Body."

The last western contenders with a fighting song, the 1948 Calgary Stampeders, were presumably inspired to Grey Cup victory by "The Red and White Sweater," an Alberta version of "Put on Your Old Grey Bonnet."

The 1949 Stampeders, who put their trust in mere cowboy orchestras and chuck wagons, were beaten.

The Bombs song, author unknown, gives Argo coach Frank Clair a fair outline of the abilities of Bombers' starting line-up, including Winnipeg's own John Brown, all-star snap of the western conference.

Jockey Willie Shoemaker booted across two winners Tuesday at Hollywood Park to tie Joe Colburn in their six-day race for United States riding honors. Colburn had only one winner at Tijuana to tie the eighth race. The score now stands at 333 winners each.

The King ranch's assault launches another comeback today in 8 furlong sprint at Hollywood Park. Making his first start since October 1949, the seven-year-old veteran will get a test in his campaign pointing toward Hollywood Park's $100,000 Gold Cup Dec. 9. Veteran rider Eddie Arcaro ends a temporary vacation to pilot the turf's triple crown champion of 1946 and a horse whose earnings of $672,520 make him the sport's fourth greatest all-time money winner.

Ken Dorsty, former National Hockey League mighty mite, resigned Tuesday as coach of Regina Caps, cellar-dwellers of the Western Canada Senior Hockey League. He will be replaced temporarily by Al Ritchie, former coach of Regina's Junior Pats of provincial hockey fame in the Regina Rughriders. "The Caps weren't winning for me, maybe they'll win for somebody else," were Dorsty's parting words.

The British boxing board of control gave its reluctant approval Tuesday to a bout between veteran British heavyweight Tommy Farr and American light heavyweight Lloyd Marshall at Carmarthen, Wales, Dec. 4. Farr, who once challenged Joe Louis for the heavyweight title, has won his only two fights of a comeback campaign this year. The boxing board said it would have preferred that Farr's next opponent be a British boxer.

Lou Boudreau says he is still undecided about his future, but probably will reach a decision within five days. The 33-year-old shortstop, former Cleveland manager who was rated the American League's most valuable player two years ago, is reportedly considering offers of employment from Pittsburg Pirates, New York Yankees, Chicago White Sox and Washington Senators. He was replaced at Cleveland by Al Lopez, the former Indianapolis pilot, Nov. 10.

Horse trainer John S. Latimer drew a one-year suspension from the Maryland Racing Commission Tuesday after a hearing on charges that one of his thoroughbreds was doped Nov. 13 at Pimlico. The horse, Bob's Birthday, won a race by six lengths that day and paid $12.80 for $2. Racing steward Joseph Flanagan testified that tests later showed the horse had been stimulated with amphetamine, a drug of the benzedrine type.

Joe Louis, blasted in Balkan newspapers as a gangster of "imperialist sport," says he is pleased that "Voice of America" broadcasts are piercing the Iron curtain

"Yesterday I made a broadcast for the 'Voice of America' denying that the communists hold all the world's records in sports," said Louis. "Today, a communist paper in the Balkans called me a gangster.

"It looks to me like the Voice of America must be getting through to somebody."

Shotton, Myers and Marion Look Like Best Bets for Three Big League Jobs Still Open

New York, Nov. 22 (AP) — Burt Shotton, Bill Meyer and Marty Marion seem to be the best bets for the three open big-league baseball managing jobs.

Shotton seems to be in the strongest position of the three. It is expected his reappointment as Brooklyn boss will be announced soon. When Branch Rickey sold out his Dodger stock, it was taken for granted that Shotton, a Rickey man, would not be back. Now it seems that idea was wrong.

Unless there is a storm of protest from the Dodger customers, kindly old Burt probably will be back for another term.

Pee Wee Reese, the popular Dodger shortstop, probably is the manager of the future. Reluctance to combine playing full time and managing, plus a loyalty to Dodger owner Walter O'Malley, kept Pee Wee's debut until 1952 or later.

In Pittsburgh, Rickey still is making up his mind about Billy Meyer. The talented skipper from Knoxville still has another year to go on his contract. After a conference with Rickey, Billy went home knowing little more than when he arrived.

Insiders at Pittsburgh say Meyer has a 60-40 chance of returning. Lou Boudreau, deposed Cleveland manager, has the best chances of the others.

Rickey has talked business with Boudreau with the managing job in view. Boudreau undoubtedly will accept if Rickey decides to make a change. The showdown is due by next Monday.

Fred Saigh still is going through his list of candidates for the St. Louis job vacated by Eddie Dyer. An original field of 18 is being narrowed day by day.

Marion, often mentioned by Saigh as a potential managerial timber, is believed to have the inside track. A personable athlete with natural leadership qualities, Marty is definitely bound for a career as a manager. Whether it will be with the Cardinals in 1951 is up to Saigh.

Biggest Goalie Problem Centred In Toronto Leafs

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto Maple Leafs probably have a bigger goal-tender problem than any other National Hockey League club. Theirs is a happy dilemma, however—which one of the two top goalies to use?

Tonight, announced Conn Smythe, it will be rookie Al Rollins in the nets against Chicago Black Hawks. That means tireless Walter (Turk) Broda will sweat it out in a sideline seat at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens watching a young fellow go after his job.

"We'll use Rollins against the teams to which we lose with Broda in the net," Smythe said last night. "We want to see how good he actually is. We have nothing to lose, so Rollins will be in the net here against Hawks and he'll play the next games in Montreal and Boston."

On the basis of that, the 36-year-old Broda will be back between the pipes on the Leafs' Thursday night game in Detroit when the league lead could be at stake.

"Toronto can't be toppled out of first place tonight because Detroit Red Wings, who have whittled down their lead to a single point, are idle. In the only other game, the revitalized Montreal Canadiens will be trying to strengthen their hold on third place in New York at the expense of the last-place Rangers.

Protecting Perfect Record

Rollins will be attempting to protect a perfect record. The 24-year-old native of Vanguard, Sask., whom the Leafs bought from Cleveland Barons last year, has played only three games for the Leafs this season and each one was a victory.

He's had the benefit of high-scoring by the Leafs, however, because he let in a total of seven goals for an average of 2.33 a game.

Broda, the N. H. L.'s seemingly-permanent fixture from Brandon, Man., has a better goals-against average—2.21 a game in 14 starts and four shutouts. The Turk has back-stopped seven winning starts for the Leafs, four losses and three ties.

Bombers' Irving Wants Grey Cup In Final Year

London, Ont., Nov. 22 (CP) — It's said that familiarity breeds contempt.

Well, if that applies to football, then most of the 27,000 fans at Toronto's Varsity Stadium next Saturday may have nothing but the highest regard for Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

There's certainly nothing familiar—as far as Grey Cup finals are concerned anyway—about this year's Bomber squad.

Bud Irving, a football veteran at 34, is the only member of the Western champs who trotted out on the Varsity grid in the last Winnipeg appearance in an East-West game.

He has come east with the team three times—1945, 1946 and 1947. That makes him the only active Blue Bomber with Grey Cup memories—even if they are all unhappy ones. Winnipeg lost all those Grey Cup games— and to Toronto Argonauts in each case, the same club in fact at least that they'll take on again next Saturday.

Group the three losses —35-0, 28-6 and 10-9—together and you have a good reason why Irving wants to win the mug this year. On top of that, he figures this will be his last chance to play for a Dominion champion because he's quitting football at the end of this season.

Irving—who seldom hears his Christian name of Harold—plans to retire to complete his law course at the University of Manitoba. He's due to get his degree next spring.

Time To Pull Out

"I'm not getting the same kick out of playing now," says Bud. "So I guess it's time to pull out." Could be that it's because he's an alternate inside wing this season, whereas he was first string in past Grey Cup games.

In any case, Irving thinks it would "be nice to wind up on a championship club." And if this team plays the ball they're capable of, we could win easily.

About the consolation Irving got out of past Grey Cup games was what he describes as a "moral victory" in the 1947 meeting, one that was decided by a last-minute single kicked by Joe Krol.

He was referring to a Winnipeg touchdown play which was called back on the referee's contention that the forward pass did not cross the line of scrimmage.

"I was playing guard at the time," says Bud. "I moved ahead a couple of steps on the play and Regan was ahead of me by at least one step—so how could he be on or back of the line."

One of the leading performers in that East-West final is around the Blue Bombers camp this year. He's Bob Sandberg, the man who tossed the disputed pass. Although he's coaching and not an active player, Sandberg is probably another of the westerners who has a little extra desire for a victory next Saturday.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being liver and onions in pop's honor, and ma said, Really, William, I mean really, if I eat a single bite, I assure you it wont be with any pleasure. I had the most greasy experience downtown this afternoon, and I still feel so low I couldn't feel any lower unless the bottom dropped completely out of everything, she said.

Yes goda, that would make us all feel low, pop said. What the dooce happened? he said, and ma said, I was blissfully wearing my new hat under the happy delusion that it was an exact copy of a Parisian model and the only one of its kind on this side of Paris. That's what I was told when I paid out 22 good dollars for it in Hoodwinder's French shop. Well my dear, believe it or not, I passed 3 separate and distinct women wearing the same iddenical hat, she said.

Do you mean they stared at you frumfamily? pop asks, and ma said, Why should they? They all probably felt as badly as I did, and every one of them is probably drooping over her dinner at this moment the same as I am, without a shred of appetite, she said.

My dear, I know exactly how you feel, from bitter experience, pop said. It happened some time ago, but the memory is painfully fresh. I had bawt myself a new hat at your confirmed insistence. It had a terned down brim, and the salesman assured me that every man I saw in the streets would be wearing the exact same model. Well, you can imagine my excruciating imbarrassment when the first 10 hats I saw all had terned up brims. I guess you I felt as if I was walking along with no clothes on. The very thawt of it cuts my appetite, but I think I can mange one more helping of liver and onions, he said.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You have made a takeout double. Your partner took you out with a bid of some kind. How many tricks do you need to raise the takeout bid your partner made?

This is never in doubt, in the Horse Sense method of bidding. You can figure it out very easily. It is simply a matter of mathematics in the elementary stages.

Your takeout double promises a hand as good as an opening one bid. The means a minimum of five tricks. Having already said you have five tricks you must not raise unless you have more.

Each raise in turn adds one other trick. With six tricks you can make one raise of the last partnership number. With seven tricks you can make two raises. Because two and five are seven.

In any bidding you never takeout to a suit that is not biddable; you never assist a suit without adequate support; you never bid no-trump without enough high cards. Unless forced by a signal, of course.

Therefore, with only five tricks you would not takeout unless it could be done without raising the number. Nor would you make an assist because it would necessitate a raise.

So, assume that south opens the bidding with one heart when your west hand holds the cards you see here:

♠A J 3 2
♥A 5
♦K Q 7
♣K 7 5 3

Double for a takeout to show your hand is as good as an opening one bid. Suppose your next opponent passes and your partner bids one spade. Now, leave six tricks, five of which your double showed.

You have adequate support for spades. Raise to two spades and tell your partner you have support for his suit and a sixth trick.

If partner bid three, he knows of nine tricks in your pair. If partner has four tricks he can go to game, counting, leave six ten tricks in your pair. Count your tricks and make them count

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Nov. 22 — (AP). Red Skelton, one of the few top comedians not yet in television, will take the leap next October. He is brimming over with plans.

"We'll film the programs here in Hollywood on color film once a month," he said. "We'll have our own theatre and use a revolutionary method which I can't talk about yet."

Skelton, an inveterate TV fan, has some interesting comments to make on the video debuts of his fellow comics.

"The trouble with most of them is that they are using techniques borrowed from vaudeville or radio," he said. "But television isn't either of those things. It is somewhere between vaudeville, radio and the movies.

Revolution

"The important thing to remember is that you are playing to the living room, not to the studio audience or anyone else."

The comic foresees a revolution in the entertainment industry. The movie workers don't have to worry, he said, but radio will be a shadow (or a whisper) of its former self. He even thinks daytime television will prevail.

"They say women can't watch it because of their housework," he observed. "But now the women have detergents, automatic laundry and dish washers and all kinds of conveniences. Pretty soon they'll be able to push a button and have their whole house vacuumed and dusted.

"I predict the next generation will produce a race of people broad-beamed and big-fingered from watching television and pushing buttons."

Project Typhoon Newest Aid For Defence Work

By MILTON LEVY

Princeton, N.J., Nov. 22 (AP). —The United States Navy yesterday announced a $1,400,000 electronic brain designed to help develop guided missiles such as a rocket-borne atom bomb.

Introduced as Project Typhoon, it was called the largest and most accurate electronic computer ever built to evaluate the performance of guided missiles and aid in the air protection of American cities.

Officials of the RCA laboratories here, who built the computer for the navy, said it was expected to save many millions of dollars in the design of guided missiles and also solve many riddles encountered in the air defence of U.S. cities.

Capt. John R. Ruhsenberger, commanding officer of the office of naval research's special devices center, said at today's demonstration that the new development may eventually cut valuable time for design and construction of an airplane from five years to six months.

"If that happens," he added, "we will have a great weapon."

4,000 Tubes

The new analogue calculator uses approximately 4,000 electron tubes, several miles of intricate wiring, and a new set of supersecurity components, exact to better than one part in 25,000, RCA officials said.

Explaining the functions of the new computer, RCA said:

"Very often the construction of an experimental guided missile may cost more than $100,000, and unless its characteristics are properly checked in advance by accurate computing techniques, actual launchings may be in vain, resulting in the loss of instruments and apparatus.

"With typhoon any missile problem with the characteristics varied each time until the desired results are obtained."

CRASH INTO TREE FATAL

Hawkesbury, Ont., Nov. 22.—(CP)—Donat Cayen, 25, of Hawkesbury, died in the hospital here last night from injuries suffered Saturday when his automobile crashed into a tree near Grenville, Que.

Cayen did not recover consciousness after suffering a fractured skull. Three other passengers who were in the car are still in hospital.

An inquest into the accident will be held in Grenville but no date has been set.

Hawkesbury is about 60 miles east of Ottawa.

Churchmen Ask Clean-Up of Liquor Outlets

Toronto, Nov. 22. (CP)—The United Church is hot after Toronto civic officials with a sharp demand that the city undertake an immediate clean-up of liquor outlets, but Mayor Hiram McCallum says it's mostly a matter for the provincial government.

The mayor last night stepped out from under demands heaped on him in a report adopted by the church's three Toronto Presbyteries asking chiefly for closer supervision of small bars and dining lounges by an augmented police force.

Specifically, the presbytery wanted to see the $250,000 the city gets annually from the province as a percentage of liquor licence fees go into a special fund for expanding police supervision of drinking places.

The series of church demands were aimed at Mayor McCallum in the midst of a campaign for re-election in the December Civic election. In a campaign address last night he said the licensing and conduct of liquor outlets in Toronto "is purely a matter for the provincial government." The municipality had only limited authority, although it had asked that no licences for further liquor outlets be granted.

Rev. J. R. Mutchmor, who bitterly denounced conditions in drinking spots of Canada's second city, was aroused by what he described as "moral debauchery" in Toronto.

The Mayor's reply was that such conditions are not general. "A few hotels we know are bad but we do our best to clean them up," he said.

The church report had several other recommendations for the proposed liquor clean-up.

One was the demand for a royal commission of three judges to probe gambling, liquor and vice in the city.

It also asked for:

Elimination of all manner of entertainment from places where liquor is served.

A 10:30 p.m. closing hour for liquor outlets, now open until 2 a.m. on week days.

AT THE CAPITOL — Mickey Rooney faces Pat O'Brien in a dramatic moment from "The Fireball," the story of the roaring roller skating speedway which arrives Thursday at the Capitol Theatre for its first city showing. The Thor production, released by 20th. Century-Fox is the first to attempt to tell on the screen the inside story of a champion of this fast-growing American sport. On the same program "Sweet and Low-Down," starring Benny Goodman and His Band with Linda Darnell, Lynn Bari and Jack Oakie.

AT THE BELLE — Jane Wyman and Kirk Douglas are starred with Gertrude Lawrence in Warner Bros. "The Glass Menagerie," the story of a young girl and a gentleman caller who suddenly found what she thought was love, and an ambitious mother.

STRICKEN IN WHEELHOUSE

Cornwall, Nov. 22. (CP)—Captain Oliver Davis, 52, veteran sailor and resident of Wolfe Island near Kingston, died Monday following a heart attack aboard the freighter John W. Price. The vessel was passing through Cornwall canal.

He was in the wheelhouse when stricken. The ship turned back to Cornwall. Capt. Davis died on his way to the hospital.

His death occurred almost a year after his brother, Capt. William Davis, died at his home in Kingston, also of a heart attack. Another brother, Capt. H. L. Davis, of Kingston, is also a sailor.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Thursday, November 23

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Be motivated by other than personal or monetary advancement. Don't stunt your standing socially or otherwise by needless foibles, tactlessness. Show your best self at home first.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—You clever, but at times over-fastidious folks can chalk up big gains with extra effort now. Smart and keen, to conditions, yet you often don't push to advance as you could.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Get on your thinking cap early; many fine possibilities. Personal as well as your work and regular affairs, business can make progress with proper effort. Don't rush or be brusque.

June 22 to July 22—(Cancer)—The margin between winning and losing will be widened by your wise action and thinking. You can achieve in routine work, business of the day. But generally be careful, watch for pitfalls.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Courage and the will to make the grade are qualities of Leo, but you miss out sometimes through lack of preparation Be sure you know what you do, don't throw the ball before you have it.

August 23 to September 23 — (Virgo)— Illusions may try to throw you off balance if you are not alert, aware of situations. Some propositions may be just what you have looked for, but study them, don't decide too quickly.

September 24 to October 23 — (Libra)—The old fashioned "stop and listen" signal is needed in this overly hasty rushing period. Constant angling, trying to outdo the other fellow can outdo the doer too. Pause, reflect.

October 24 to November 22 — (Scorpio)—See things as they are, not as you would like them to be. And "it's too difficult" is only in your mind. You can arrive at astute conclusions if you work at it.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Don't get too deep into things, you may overlook the really worth while possibilities. Contracts and deals of situations but also can be out of line.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)— Some extra rest added to common sense thinking can put over today nicely. News from unexpected sources should help you carry things to constructive success. Romance highly favored.

January 22 to February 20 — (Aquarius)—Because things may have sailed along in smooth style does not mean to slacken pace or ambition. Fortify your future by laying away a certain surplus for lanner periods we all get.

February 21 to March 20 — (Pisces)—May have some decisions to make so be carefully ready, steeled to hold an even disposition. Being calm is a necessary art. The scales tip more in your favor toward afternoon.

You born today: You natives of the Cusp, Scorpio-Sagittarius have all-round intelligence and a sincere disposition, plus a way of getting things done despite opposition. Generally optimistic, which leaves you calmer freer to weigh and judge situations well as they appear. Be thoughtful now, express yourself, especially in business or personal matters. At times you may assume a haughty attitude—overcome this, it doesn't pay. You are versatile, clever at solving the unusual, don't let this lead you to carry things too far.

Birthdate: Franklin Pierce, 14th U.S. pres.; Sir Gilbert Parker, novelist, statesman; Boris Karloff, actor.

I Hear Adventure Calling

By Emilie Loring

"I didn't see him that day before I left for the Theatre." It was getting increasingly difficult to keep faith with Henry Sargent and tell the truth.

"I turned the picture over to him five minutes after we left the cliff, it was the day of the terrific thunderstorm, remember?

She nodded. As if she ever would forget that storm and what followed.

"I can't get an answer out of the old man. I'm losing time. I've a lot of money backed up in it. I want to pass it on to someone else if he turns thumbs down."

Not until this minute had she realized that subconsciously she had felt that Blake Sinclair was in some way involved in the disappearance of the Constable.

"Why that funny little gasp? I'll bet you know where it is," he accused suspiciously.

His eyes turned with intensity. She couldn't tell him that "the funny little gasp" had been caused by relief, that she felt like a person who had come to the surface after being held under water.

"I do not know where it is. That 'gasp' was pure excitement, you were so dramatic. You had me going right along with you."

"I believe the old guy has lost it."

"Lost it? How could he lose it, Blake? He was so anxious to have it. I can tell you this. The afternoon of the preview of Eckhard's paintings, Mr. Sargent told me that you had picked up an 'item' he wanted very much, then swore me to secrecy. I was surprised, I didn't know you dealt in old masters."

"Don't as a rule. When I find something it's on the q.t. Remember that, and don't talk Fran."

"Good heavens, that warning was Humphrey Bogart at his most villainous. Why should I talk? I'm only what Pat Sargent calls a salesgirl. Relax, you're white under your tan. You are asking a lot of money for the painting, aren't you?"

"Not more than it's worth."

"I wouldn't know about that, but Henry Sargent didn't climb to the ownership of the Sargent galleries and a position of superior authority in the world of art without taking every precaution to be sure that what he buys and places is genuine."

"What the devil do you mean by that? Has he insinuated that the one I submitted isn't?"

"Sit down, Blake, please, you are attracting attention. That's better. Now smile as if I were irresistibly fascinating."

"You are dream girl. When I get this mix-up straightened out—"

"Remember your promise, that you would cut out sentiment if I consented to go out with you. To return to the chasing painting, why don't you ask Henry Sargent to speed up his decision?"

"Bad business to have him think I am anxious."

"In that case all you can do is wait and—"

"Blake I've been looking every where for you." Gene Sargent in a dark red cotton frock sank into a chair at the table. "Bring me coffee and plain toast," she said to the blue-liveried boy who had appeared with the speed of a rabbit from a magician's hat.

"Don't glower at me, Fran. Dad let me leave the gallery at five to come here, ten minutes after the man who is pinch-hitting for Si Pond appeared. Who won the tournament? Didn't stop to ask."

"Your little tin god, Jaffray."

"Why the venom, Mr. Sinclair? I told you he would."

"Any sales today?" Fran inquired eagerly to avert the storm gathering in Blake's eyes.

"Another Eckhard. That man's going places."

"Going places, Gene, he's there. He'll be famous. He wants to paint my portrait, and am I proud," Fran announced, then wished she had held her tongue before speaking.

"He does? Don't let him."

"Why are you so opposed to Miss Phillips, Blake?" Gene demanded.

"Why shouldn't I? We are practically —"

Fran rose.

"Thanks for the tea party, Blake. I must pick up Pat and take her home. Want a ride, Gene?"

"No, thank you. I'll stick to the runner-up. I can see he needs a little cheerful company. Stay while I drink my coffee, Blake, I have a plan for this evening that will soothe your battered ego."

Before Fran reached her parked sedan she saw Pat in a car with her grandmother.

"Granny wouldn't let me wait for you," she explained. "See you tomor—" Her voice diminished in the distance.

All right with me Fran thought Pat's nice, but she has been with me all day and so much of her company is like living exclusively in a child's world.

"Took you a whale of a long time to get here," Myles Jaffray commented from behind the wheel of her sedan. "Top in."

"When you hop out." Had he forgotten she had been furiously angry when she left him in Miss Tassie's garden?

"For the love of Pete, don't be difficult Fran. Get in, please, I'm giving good manners the go-by not getting out to open the door for you. But this parking place is filling and I'm side-stepping congratulations. I have something—"

"Rem?" she interrupted breathlessly, and was in the seat beside him in a flash. Had he had news from Ken to tell her, or had something happened at the tournament to set him on edge? He had changed from tennis clothes to smart tropical togs.

"Why did you kidnap me?" she asked.

"The first and outstanding reason I can't disclose yet—it's too personal." The windshield mirror gave back his smile and something in his eyes had made her glancing off to goe. •

"The fishing boat is coming in. .he flag is up. That means there is a luna aboard, doesn't it?"

"Right the first time. Th. your day off. Let's drive up the coast for dinner. Any evening commitments?"

"No-o-o," but —

"Then we're on. I have much to tell you that needs your undivided attention."

"Alack!"

"No, Franny." He laid his hand over hers in her lap and a quick-fly removed it. "No news from Ken. It's about that orchid I'm out to earn. I've been trying to get in touch with you for days— you're pretty smart at dodging, aren't you—since Miss Tassie's blowout to tell you—"

She stiffened. Was he about to confide his love for Gene? For a few minutes she had forgotten that.

"Relax Fran, it isn't what you think it is. We'll take up that matter later, not too much later, when I have time to go into it and all its ramifications. The sight of the party in honor of our visiting celebrity, Morrie told me —" He repeated Grove's story of Eckhard's presence outside the Digby's door the night of the storm.

"Why was Morrie at that same door?" she inquired.

"Trying to make a political call on Betsy and Dig."

"Did Eckhard see him?"

"If he did Morrie doesn't know it."

"Did he find out why our artist celebrity was huddling there in the rain?"

"No, he's stumped as to the reason. I want you to do that."

"Me? Why? What he does is nothing to me."

"I must be sure of that. If he was outside the door when I rescued the sheets of blotting paper from the wood box, he was the guy who unlocked them later, added to that, it is more than one chance in ten that the muddy tracks on the kitchen floor were his. Remember a key had been left in the door, an invitation to enter if ever there was one. He may know something about your gold amulet. That's why what he does may mean something to you."

"It gives me the creeps to think of it. Of course I'll try to find out. I won't be understanded about it, though. He wants to paint my portrait. We may become social friends that he will tell me."

"He told us at tea that he would try to persuade you to sit for him. He'd like to paint you in our garden."

"Why in yours?"

"Who can explain the artistic mind. Consider it, will you?"

"That can wait. I'd like to get Eckhard and the footprints and his motive for hanging around the Digby door straightened out. He must have had one."

"You've said it. I can't believe that it was the possession of an enamel box. It might have been the Console. In spite of the evidence piling up against him, I can't believe him to be the sort of person who would steal or hit Si Pond over the head—we've lost sight of that angle."

"Blake is on the verge of a nervous breakdown over the painting. It's a relief that you know about it Myles, I must talk it out sometimes."

"Does Sinclair know that the Constable has disappeared?"

"Not a suspicion that it has been stolen—if it has been. I still have hope that my boss will find it—but he has a lot of money tied up in it and thinks that Henry Sargent should take it or leave it and give him a chance to dispose of it somewhere else."

"Sounds reasonable. Whey did you hear all this?"

"At the club while we were having tea. I tried to calm him by suggesting that Henry Sargent hadn't risen to his present eminence in the art world by buying faked paintings that he wanted to make sure it was genuine."

"That's right. What did he say?

"Went into the air, he was so white I was frightened. 'What the devil do you mean by that?' he exploded. 'Has he insinuated that the picture I submitted is a fake?'

"Good heavens, I thought for a minute we were headed for the clutch, I could see glaring headlines 'Trustee and Charming Ward in Scandal—up Orange ward isn't the right word?" She hoped he hadn't noticed the quaver in the voice she had tried to make gay. For a moment she had been frightened.

"Ward will serve—for the present. Sorry, I frightened you. An idea burst in my head like a light bulb and—"

B E T W E E N:
THE CANADIAN SAN SYNDICATE Hereinafter called the "Syndicate" OF THE FIRST PART
— and —
THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE Hereinafter called the "Corporation"
OF THE SECOND PART

WHEREAS the Syndicate desires to produce, distribute and sell natural gas in the City of Belleville and elsewhere, after referred to as "Gas," in the City, Belleville, upon the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth:

AND WHEREAS By-Law duly passed by the Municipal Council of the Corporation, a copy of which has been duly assented to by the Electors of the Corporation, and which By-Law is known as By-Law Number ..... and dated ..... has been duly passed and directed to execute, seal and deliver this agreement on behalf of the Corporation;

AND WHEREAS THIS AGREEMENT WITNESSETH that for valuable consideration the parties hereto mutually covenant and agree as follows:

1. The consent, permission and authority of the Corporation as the City of Belleville are hereby granted and granted to the Syndicate to distribute gas in the City of Belleville and for this purpose to enter upon all highways, roads, allowances, highways, bridges or other public places in the City of Belleville and subject to the jurisdiction of the said City of Belleville, to construct, maintain, operate, renew, remove and replace such pipes as the Syndicate may require for the purpose of conveying and supplying gas in and through the said City for the purpose of heating, lighting and for other purpose for which gas may now or hereafter be used, and to exercise all the rights set out in this agreement.

2. The Syndicate shall well and sufficiently supply the City of Belleville with gas of good merchantable quality and good condition as they were in before the Engineer all streets, roads, sidewalks, public places, highways, bridges and other places, which it may exercise the rights granted by this agreement, and refer to the Syndicate, its successors and assigns.

3. The Syndicate shall not assign this agreement or any renewal thereof the Syndicate may forthwith have such pipes, plant and machinery as it may remove its mains, pipes, plant and machinery from the streets, roads, sidewalks, lanes, highways, bridges and other public places, and shall immediately lose all right thereto and shall not be entitled to any compensation from the Corporation.

4. If Canada Government or any Provincial Government or any Municipality or any Municipal Board or any Municipal Commission or any Municipal Authority shall hereafter fix or regulate the gas pipe system referred to in this agreement, then at any time after the termination of such regulation the Syndicate may remove the franchise and any renewal thereof shall be subject to such regulations as shall remain in full force and good standing.

5. The Syndicate shall not be bound by anything herein contained in this agreement not specifically covered by this agreement, and any matter to be settled by mutual agreement between the Corporation and the Syndicate, and the Syndicate, and by the event that the parties hereto may at any time hereafter agree on any such matter, the provisions of such agreement shall be binding upon the parties hereto as if it were incorporated in this agreement and shall be read as part hereof.

6. This agreement shall extend and be in force for a period of thirty-one (31) years from the date hereof.

7. Subject as aforesaid, the Syndicate shall use all times proper and practicable means to prevent the escape of any gas from its mains and pipes and the Syndicate shall make good all damage to any property caused by escape of gas.

8. Subject as aforesaid, the Syndicate shall at all times indemnify and save harmless the Corporation from and against all claims, demands, loss, costs, charges and actions that may be made or brought against or incurred by the Corporation by reason of the Syndicate for gas supplied by it or by reason of the Syndicate charging rates from time to time agreed on between the Syndicate and the Corporation.

9. The Syndicate shall not be liable for any breach of this agreement if such breach is caused by the Syndicate being prevented from carrying out its obligations under this By-law by reason of any cause beyond its control, including strikes, lockouts or other labour troubles, fire, explosion, flood, war, insurrection, riot, act of God or the Queen's enemies, or any act or omission of any Government or Municipal Authority, or any delay in obtaining any permit necessary for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this agreement.

10. (a) Notwithstanding the provisions of the preceding paragraphs (a) and (b) either party to this agreement may refer any matter to, or take into the County Court of the County of Hastings for the determination of such matter, both questions of matters over which the Ontario Municipal Board has jurisdiction and matters given jurisdiction under the Natural Gas Conservation Act and any of the amendments thereof, arising out of this agreement for determination provided, however, that the said County Court Judge shall have the right to refer such matter to the Board if the parties hereto shall have the right of appeal from the decision of the said Court or the Judge thereof.

(b) In the event of the Syndicate being prevented from carrying out its obligations under this By-law by reason of any cause beyond its control, including those mentioned in paragraph (a) hereof, then such obligations while such disability continues, and in the event of a dispute as to the existence of such disability, such dispute shall be determined as hereinabove provided.

Provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall relieve the Syndicate of its duty under Paragraph 2 hereof to repair, replace or restore forthwith to as good condition as they were before any such work or interference took place, and to indemnify and save harmless the Corporation from any damage to highways, bridges and other public places, nor shall anything herein relieve the Syndicate of its duty under Paragraph 7 hereof to indemnify and save harmless the said Corporation as therein provided from any claims, losses or damages arising out of any such work or interference or omission in the carrying out of the said work except in accordance with specifications filed as aforementioned and approved of and accepted by the said Engineer.

(c) The Syndicate shall use at all times proper and practicable means to prevent the escape of any gas from its mains and pipes and the Syndicate shall make good all damage to any property caused by escape of gas.

(d) Subject as aforesaid, the Syndicate shall at all times indemnify and save harmless the Corporation from and against all claims, demands, loss, costs, charges and actions that may be made or brought against or incurred by the Corporation by reason of the Syndicate for gas supplied by it or by reason of the Syndicate charging rates from time to time agreed on between the Syndicate and the Corporation.

11. (a) The franchise hereby granted shall be for the term of thirty years from and after the final passing of the By-law authorizing the same, the Syndicate may at any time, hereto or after the expiration of the first twenty years or any subsequent period of ten years apply to the Corporation for a renewal of the franchise for a further period of ten years upon such terms and conditions, or upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon.

(b) In the event that any renewal of the franchise for the supply of gas shall be granted by the City of Belleville to any other person, firm or corporation, the Syndicate shall have the right to remove its mains, pipes, plant and machinery from the streets, roads, sidewalks, lanes, highways, bridges and other public places as provided herein, such use and removal shall be exercised in the terms and conditions as those herein contained.

12. Nothing contained in this agreement shall be held to confer upon the Syndicate the right or power to install or maintain, for carrying, distributing or sell, nor shall anything herein contained confer any right to any individual, firm or corporation to install or maintain, for carrying or sell oxygen, acetylene, propane, butane, coal gas, manufactured gas or natural gas, within the limits of the City of Belleville, or to use the streets, highways or other public places in the City of Belleville.

13. Wherever the word "Syndicate" is used in this Agreement or in any By-law of the Corporation relating hereto it shall be construed as referring to the senior employee of the Corporation for the time being in charge of the highways of the Corporation of the City of Belleville, and wherever the word "Corporation" is used it shall be construed as referring to the Engineer of the Corporation of the City of Belleville.

14. Wherever the word "Syndicate" is used in this Agreement or in any By-law of the Corporation relating hereto it shall be construed as referring to the Syndicate, its successors and assigns.

15. The Syndicate shall not sell or transfer this franchise or any renewal thereof the Syndicate may forthwith have such pipes, plant and machinery as it may remove its mains, pipes, plant and machinery from the streets, roads, sidewalks, lanes, highways, bridges and other public places, and shall immediately lose all right thereto and shall not be entitled to any compensation from the Corporation.

16. If Canada Government or any Provincial Government or any Municipality or any Municipal Board or any Municipal Commission or any Municipal Authority shall hereafter fix or regulate the gas pipe system referred to in this agreement, then at any time after the termination of such regulation the Syndicate may remove the franchise and any renewal thereof shall be subject to such regulations as shall remain in full force and good standing.

17. The Syndicate shall not be bound by anything herein contained in this agreement not specifically covered by this agreement, and any matter to be settled by mutual agreement between the Corporation and the Syndicate, and the Syndicate, and by the event that the parties hereto may at any time hereafter agree on any such matter, the provisions of such agreement shall be binding upon the parties hereto as if it were incorporated in this agreement and shall be read as part hereof.

18. This agreement shall extend and be in force for a period of thirty-one (31) years from the date hereof.

19. Subject as aforesaid, the Syndicate shall use all times proper and practicable means to prevent the escape of any gas from its mains and pipes and the Syndicate shall make good all damage to any property caused by escape of gas.

20. Subject as aforesaid, the Syndicate shall at all times indemnify and save harmless the Corporation from and against all claims, demands, loss, costs, charges and actions that may be made or brought against or incurred by the Corporation by reason of the Syndicate for gas supplied by it or by reason of the Syndicate charging rates from time to time agreed on between the Syndicate and the Corporation.

21. This agreement shall extend and be in force for a period of thirty-one (31) years from the date hereof.

22. Subject as aforesaid, the Syndicate shall at all times indemnify and save harmless the Corporation from and against all claims, demands, loss, costs, charges and actions that may be made or brought against or incurred by the Corporation by reason of the Syndicate for gas supplied by it or by reason of the Syndicate charging rates from time to time agreed on between the Syndicate and the Corporation.

PICTON

Ronald Church Named President Of Conservatives

Picton—Lt.-Col. Ronald Church was elected president of Picton Progressive Conservative Association at the annual meeting Monday night. Mrs. Gwen Trebell was named vice-president; C. F. Evans, secretary-treasurer. Poll chairmen are C. F. Evans, Mrs. Walter Reid, Pierce Jones, Mrs. Harry Bowers, William Norton, Mrs. J. Hollingsworth, Walter Fraser, Mrs. H. W. Riddell, Elmo Duetta, Mrs. Edwin Allen, Brian Dodds, Mrs. Donald Ward, George Allen, Mrs. Barton Reid.

Short addresses were given by the officers and past president Lance Nethery. The need for a strong organization was stressed. Neighbors Hold Bee Proving themselves good neighbors in a practical manner, 25 men in Ameliasburgh township recently held a bee at the farm of Morley Dempsey. Fifteen tractors were in operation during the afternoon and thirty acres were plowed. A group of ten other men engaged in repairing roofing which had been damaged by high winds. Mr. Dempsey had been unable to keep up with his work due to the lengthy illness and passing of his wife.

Alexander Buys Home in Britain

Ottawa, Nov. 22 (CP)—Viscount Alexander has an eye on the future.

Canada's governor-general now is owner of "Highfingales," a comfortable yellow brick house 30 miles northwest of London, England.

The government house staff doesn't know much about the new house beyond the fact that it has "about eight bedrooms" and is set in about 11 acres of wooded land.

"All I've seen is a black-and-white photograph and it's difficult to tell much from that," said one member of the staff.

In any case, this probably will be the vice-regal family's new residence when the governor-general's term of office expires in the spring of 1952. It has been extended by a year.

At the moment the house is empty. The spokesman didn't think much will be done in the way of decoration until the Alexanders are about ready to move in. Viscount Alexander may go over to see it next summer during his vacation.

Viscountess Alexander returned to the capital a week ago after a 10-day visit to the United Kingdom. Here she completed arrangements for buying the house and at the time told reporters the final papers were signed a few days before she heard the governor-general's term of office had been extended.

Meanwhile, until some time in 1953 the huge grey stone building that is Rideau Hall will remain "home" to the vice-regal couple and their three children.

TO MAKE STUDY

Toronto, Nov. 22 (CP)—A Toronto doctor plans to make a study in city schools of the causes of obesity, excessive or dwarfish growth among the pupils. Dr. A. L. Chute has received permission from the Board of Education to carry out the study. If the Federal Health Department will finance him with a grant he will proceed.

76 KILLED AS COMMUTER TRAINS CRASH IN N. Y.

Head-On Collision Brings Death to 20 Persons

Survivors of the train crash, that claimed 20 dead or missing and 88 injured, mill about beside the piled-up coaches of the troop train that piled head-on into a transcontinental passenger train near Canoe River, B.C. In this wirephoto, some of the soldiers who were bound for Fort Lewis, Wash., for further training, can be seen carrying one of their buddies from the wreckage. — (CP Photo.)

WRECK DEATH TOLL LIKELY TO CLIMB ABOVE 20 MARK

Six in Hospital "Dangerously Ill"

Jasper, Alta., Nov. 23. (CP)— The death toll from Tuesday's Mountain train wreck threatened to climb above 20 today as the Canadian National Railways scheduled resumption of traffic.

The main line track just west of Canoe River, B.C., where a 17-car troop train plowed headlong into an oncoming, 10-car passenger train as they rounded a curve, was cleared of wreckage late last night. The wreckage had been piled 20 feet high.

The debris was swept by an explosion and fire late yesterday as wrecking crews cleared the track and sought the bodies of six of the victims. Three were later found. Three were still missing today.

First east and west Trans-Continental traffic was scheduled to resume through the remote, winter-gripped whistle stop this morning.

In hospital at Edmonton, 312 miles from the scene of one of the worst train wrecks in Canada's Canadian history, at least six soldiers fought for their lives. Authorities at the hospital said they were "dangerously ill".

Those critically injured, like comrades who died in collision, suffered serious burns when the giant mountain locomotives disintegrated and shot a scalding stream of water from burst boilers into the coaches.

47 Still in Hospital

Of 81 persons injured in the wreck, 83 miles west of here, 27 stretcher cases and 15 walking injured still are in hospital at Edmonton and another two are in hospital at Kamloops, B.C.

C.N.R. main-line traffic had been re-routed onto C.P.R. tracks though Kamloops, 191 miles west of the wreck scene, and Calgary.

Workers unscrambled the twisted, flame-scarred wreckage and identified the bodies of three missing persons — engineer J. J. Stimson and fireman Adam Oleschuk, both of Jasper, Alta., and fireman D. Prosinuk of Edmonton. Still missing are the bodies of engineer Harvey Scott of Jasper, Alta., and two soldiers.

Rescue trains reached Edmonton yesterday after a 15-hour trip aboard a hospital train.

Crowded With Thanksgiving Eve Passengers, One Train Crashes into Rear of Other

Most of Dead Wedged In Two Telescoped Cars

By JOHN CARROLL and ART EVERETT

New York, Nov. 23 — (AP) — Two crowded Long Island Railroad passenger trains crashed last night with a blinding flash during the Thanksgiving Eve rush hour, killing 76 passengers and injuring more than 150.

Many of the injured are in critical condition.

Seventy-three of the dead have been tentatively identified. Three bodies, two of them women and one a man, lay unidentified in the county morgue.

The death toll of 76 was confirmed by police and morgue attendants.

The 150 victims listed as injured included only those who were given medical aid or reported injuries.

It was the worst railroad accident in the history of New York State and the worst in the United States since 1943, when 79 died in the wreck of the Pennsylvania Railroad's Congressional Limited near Philadelphia.

Not until 3:30 a.m. EST today — nine hours after one train rammed into the rear of the other — were the last bodies removed from the wreck.

Most of the dead were wedged into two telescoped smoking cars, finally pried apart at 4:45 a.m. All night long ambulances carried bodies from the scene of the wreck in Kew Gardens to the Queens county morgue a mile away.

Second in Nine Months

The disaster was the second in nine months for the 116-year-old Long Island Railroad, Thirty-one persons died Feb. 17 in a head-on wreck at Rockville Centre.

The quiet residential area of Kew Gardens—in Queen's Borough 13 miles from Times Square—echoed to the scene of sickening horror an instant after the electric trains crashed with a blinding flash.

The motorman of one train died and was questioned by authorities. The other died.

The surviving motorman, William Murphy, 61, said he slowed his train for a signal and the next thing he knew he came unbalanced reason. The train ground to a stop.

The second train—only minutes behind on the main line—crashed into the rear of the standing one.

Acting Mayor Joseph Sharkey, Queens borough president, said:

"It's time we find out why these things happen so often on the Long Island line. It's a crime."

No Arrests Made

However, after questioning Murphy, District Attorney Charles P. Sullivan said:

"There will be no arrest until negligence is shown."

Sharkey said he is issuing today an order restricting the speed of Long Island trains within the city limits to 25 miles an hour. He estimated the second train in the crash was going 50 to 50 miles an hour.

Sullivan said Murphy told him the brakes were working normally when the first train pulled out of Pennsylvania station at 6:09 a.m. EST bound for Hempstead.

Top Legal Brains Of 11 Govts. Confer in Ottawa

Ottawa, Nov. 23—(CP)—A committee made up of some of the top legal brains in Canada's 11 governments will meet today to review study of possible solutions to this country's unique and complex constitutional problem.

The committee, composed of Justice Minister Garson and the attorneys-general of the 10 provincial governments, will meet in private about 10 a.m. EST in the railway committee room of the Commons.

But the committee will attempt anew to find a suitable formula for all amendments to the Canadian constitution in the future. It also is scheduled to study methods of drafting a Canadian constitution that would be domiciled in Canada and be a purely Canadian document.

A report will be prepared and submitted to the third plenary session of the federal-provincial constitutional conference, scheduled to be held immediately following the general federal-provincial conference on fiscal and other matters, which opens Dec. 4.

Last January, the federal and provincial governments met here and agreed that Canada should have authority to make constitutional amendments without recourse to the United Kingdom parliament. The committee of attorneys-general was established to work out the details of a formula for amendments in the future.

A second plenary session was held in Quebec last September when it was reported that some progress had been made.

U.N. Have No Aggressive Intentions Toward China States British Note

Govt. to Sell Butter Stocks Back to Trade

Ottawa, Nov. 22 — (CP)—The Federal Government will start into the selling end of the butter business Dec. 1. The price — to the retail trade only — will be about 67 cents a pound.

It's all done under the price support program. The government buys up butter to take it off the market in the big production months of early summer. Now, with production falling off seasonally, the government is selling the butter back to the trade.

The idea is to keep prices stable in summer, when supplies are heavy, and to prevent them from jumping unduly in the winter when butter is in short supply.

The price at which the government will sell will be 57 cents for first grade creamery butter delivered in carload lots in Ontario and Quebec, but it will vary in other zones according to transportation costs.

In the Maritimes it will be 57 cents, in British Columbia 56 and in Saskatchewan 53.

The government declined to say how much butter it has to sell, except that it was "fairly substantial." In 1949, the government's butter purchases totalled 48,000,000 pounds.

The Agricultural Prices Support Board says it expects the announced prices can be maintained, although the general picture will be reviewed later.

In general, the price the government is selling is about what the government paid for the butter last spring. It was bought in March and April at 56 cents a pound and the rent during the summer at 53. The government will probably lose a bit on the deal because it is covering storage, carrying and delivery costs.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Nov. 23 — (CP) — Synopsis: The Arctic air slowed its rate of advance somewhat, thereby allowing today's temperatures to rise slightly higher than Wednesday's which reached the low 30's in Southern Ontario and the low 20's in northern sections. However, the northwesterly winds will blast the western part of the province by this evening and all parts of the province by Friday morning.

In the cold air winds will be very strong with snowflurries quite general, particularly in the area adjoining Lake Huron and Georgian Bay.

Objectives in Korea Would Not Endanger Red Interests

London, Nov. 23 — (Reuters) — Britain has formally assured China that United Nations forces in Korea have no aggressive intentions toward China, the Foreign Office announced today.

A message to this effect from Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin was delivered at the Chinese foreign ministry in Peiping yesterday by J. C. Hutchison, the British charge d'affaires.

He handed it to the Chinese vice-minister for foreign affairs, Chang Han-Fu.

"The purpose of this message" was to reaffirm the objectives of the United Nations in Korea, as publicly stated in various resolutions of the U.N., with a view to reassuring the Chinese that the fulfilment of these objectives was no threat to the security of China and would in no way endanger legitimate Chinese interests in the area."

The foreign office spokesman said Bevin would make a statement on the Korean problem in the course of next week's foreign affairs debate in the Commons.

Commenting on the message to China, the spokesman said that the western powers are still discussing ways and means of dealing with the problem set up by China's intervention in the Korean conflict.

This was understood to refer to the possibility of creating a demilitarized "buffer" at the Korean-Manchurian border as a guarantee to China that her power installations on the Yalu River will not be touched.

The British initiative in Peiping is thought to have been intended as a means of establishing direct, high-level contact with the Chinese government before Chinese delegation, now on its way to Lake Success, opens its case before the U.N. against alleged United States "aggression" in Korea and Formosa.

Gutter is Full Of Yelping Dogs

Manchester, England, Nov. 23 (Reuters)—The first round of the anti-dog drive, sponsored by food stores around here, has gone to the dogs.

Three stores, trying to keep dogs from straying in and noising the counters, laid a trail of aniseed—irresistible to the canine —in the sidewalk gutter.

The plan misfired. Soon there was such a mass of yelping, snarling, fighting dogs in the gutter that the customers were scared to go near them to enter the stores. shift in its Hamilton Twine Mills.

Rebels Braced For Battle At Bhairawa

New Delhi, India, Nov. 23 — (AP)—Unconfirmed reports from Nepal's border today said rebel forces are bracing themselves for a battle with government forces at Bhairawa, western gateway to the kingdom.

The dispatch said other insurgent forces are mobilizing five miles east of their remaining stronghold at Parasi to meet advancing government troops. Parasi lies 95 miles west of the key town of Birgani, which fell to government forces Monday.

Nepalese King Tribhuvana fled to India recently after the prime minister, in a palace revolution, laced the monarch's three-year-old grandson on the throne.

Lull Hangs Over War Front Peace Rumors Wide Spread

Tokyo, Nov. 23 (AP) — Peace rumors appeared suddenly today amid quiet on the Korean battlefronts.

Talk of a negotiated settlement was touched off by:

1. Chinese communists suddenly released 27 wounded American prisoners. The freed men brought this message—"the Chinese do not want to fight the Americans." United Nations military authorities clamped a "top secret" lid on details of the release.

2. Chinese communists, with an estimated 100,000 men in northwest Korea, continued to withdraw without a fight.

3. U.N. troops did not move up to take over abandoned red fortifications.

"There is a reason" why U. N. troop have not advanced, a spokesman at Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said. He would not say what that reason was.

Col. M. P. Echols, headquarters information officer, denied reports that new peace negotiations were in progress "at this level."

In Washington, State Secretary Dean Acheson told his Wednesday press conference that creation of a demilitarized buffer zone between North Korea and communist China's Manchuria has been discussed.

But he said no agreement has been reached. He added that discussions were with friendly foreign governments.

Immediately after the unexplained release of the 27 prisoners, a trustworthy source in Tok-

Hayman Proposes New Set of Rules For Grey Cup

Montreal, Nov. 23 (CP) —Lew Hayman, general manager, and coach of Montreal Alouettes, thinks the Big Four and Western Leagues will henceforth handle the Grey Cup football championship show; that two games should be played; that the Big Four-ORFU playoff will drop out of the picture.

Hayman's views are set forth today in Elmer Ferguson's column in the Montreal Herald. The Alouettes coach says:

"So far as the gentlemen of the Canadian Rugby Union are concerned, they, and professional they do the best they can within their limitations. But professional football in Canada has come to be a big operation, and has outgrown that sort of supervision.

"I think you will find that next year, the Big Four and Western West—will take over the operation of their own business, run their leagues and the championship playoff themselves, on the same basis as their own business is conducted by the clubs concerned.

"And I believe the Grey Cup is too big to be decided by a single game. Half a million people want to see this game, only 27,000 get the chance. If two games, total score, were played, it would be more fair to the teams, would eliminate the chance of a fluke play or a fumble deciding the title."

Baltimore Youth and Girl Destroy Five of Six Marriage Licences

Baltimore, Nov. 23—AP—Marriage rules again at least a legal possibility today for Baltimore's most-licensed engaged couple.

Six times in the last 11 weeks Sylvan L. Carter, 22, and Violet J. Bull, 18, have obtained marriage licences. They have destroyed five of them.

"She'd get mad, then I'd get mad," Carter recounted.

Licence No. 6 proved harder to get than the others. They'd used up all the allowable duplicates, the clerk told Carter when he applied yesterday.

But Carter insisted that he and his young bride-to-be could not wait the necessary 48 hours for a second original licence.

He went to the mayor's office, was sent to the governor's office, the state attorney-general's office then back for a consultation with Frank. C. Robey, court clerk.

Robey said he told the youth "I'm going to issue the duplicate. But you should see the pastor of your church, and talk it over, so you and the girl can live together happily hereafter."

Violet's mother reported last night that Carter had picked up his fiancee and he had said they were going to get married.

"I didn't like much stock in it," Mrs. Bull said.

They have not been seen in their usual haunts since, however.

Commonwealth Prime Ministers Meet on Jan. 4

New Delhi, India, Nov. 22— (Reuters)—Prime Minister Nehru said today the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' meeting in London will open Jan. 4.

Prime Minister Attlee announced last night in London the meeting would be held "early in January" and would discuss "questions of common concern."

Nehru told parliament here he will make every effort to attend.

Meanwhile, Canberra, Australia, word that Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies plans to attend.

In Wellington, N.Z., prime minister Sidney Holland announced formal acceptance of Attlee's invitation to attend the meeting as did Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent in Ottawa yesterday.

ELECTED LEADER

Bloemfontein, South Africa, Nov. 23 — (Reuters) — Jacobus C. N. Strauss Wed., was elected leader of the United Party to succeed the late Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts. Strauss, 50, had been acting leader of the opposition party since Smuts' illness and accepted nominal leadership in September.

The second train, guided by motorman Benjamin J. Pokorny, 55, was the one that crash, left at 6:13 p.m.—four minutes later —on its way to Babylon.

The crash occurred at 6:32 p.m.

Phones in N.Y. Commuter Areas Bring News of Terrifying Wreck

(By JACK RYAN AND LOU DOLPHIN)

New York, Nov. 23. (AP)—The telephone rang in a small suburban home in Garden City. A 12-year-old boy picked up the receiver.

"Oh," he said, not wanting to believe. Then, slowly, "Father always took the 6:09."

The telephone rang again at Floral Park. A father answered. "Oh, my God!" Are you sure he is really dead?"

"Yes."

"Oh, my God. . . why, that's our last boy . . . the other was in a B-17."

The telephone rang again—a shrill, impatient death knell, making the rounds of the pretty commuter communities that dot long Island.

A woman answered at East Rockaway.

She screamed.

All night long the telephone rang, ringing in scores of homes that will not celebrate Thanksgiving today.

The calls brought the tragic news of a major disaster on the Long Island railroad—the worst train wreck in the history of New York State—and one of the worst in the history of the United States.

A warm and happy crowd had pushed and jostled its way through the Pennsylvania at Manhattan's Pennsylvania Station to board the commuter trains. The day was over, tomorrow was Thanksgiving, and the big city's commuters were hurrying home to wives and families.

About 1,200 of them boarded No. 780 on the bankrupt Long Island railroad. It was the 6:09, bound for pleasant Hempstead.

Another 1,000 crowded onto No. 174. It was the 6:13, headed down

ALLOWS COWS TO RUN AT LARGE

Pleading guilty to a charge of allowing cows to run at large, Elmer Brant, Desoronto farmer, was assessed $15 fine and costs by county magistrate's court. Mr. Brant's cows were found on the highway by provincial police with result that the charge was laid. The case was settled out of court.

Traffic was highly predominant in the weekly court before Magistrate T. Y. Wills with 31 cases being listed. Sixteen of the cases were settled out of court.

720 CHEESE BRINGS 20 CENTS lb. ON BOARD

A total of 720 cheese were sold Tuesday evening on the Belleville Cheese Board at 20 cents per pound. At Napanee on Tuesday afternoon 190 colored cheese were sold these bringing 19 3-16 cents per pound.

ALARM SENT IN AS A PRECAUTION

A frying pan containing grease which was left a trifle too long on the stove got firemen to 149 Station Street in a hurry Wednesday afternoon. On their arrival they found there was no need for the fire reels with no fire being in evidence. The burning grease had filled the room with smoke and the alarm was sent in by the fire hall as a precautionary measure.

EXCAVATION STARTED FOR COCA COLA PLANT

Bulldozers have started work on the excavation for the new Coca Cola plant on the southwest corner of Sidney township at Marshall Road. It is believed that the plant will serve as the Eastern Ontario distributing centre for the company. All details of the job and the work connected with it are being handled through the company's architectural and engineering departments in Toronto.

ARCHDEACON SMITH INDUCTS RECTOR

The Ven. Arthur Smith, Archdeacon of Ontario, and Rector of St. Thomas' Church, acting for His Grace Archbishop John Lyons, inducted the Rev. Frederick Payne as Rector of St. John's Church in Prescott, Wednesday evening. Many clergy from that part of the Diocese of Ontario were present at the service, including the Rev. J. B. Creeggan, the former Rector of the Prescott parish and now Rector of Christ Church in this city.

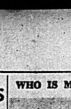
Eric Naylor Named Inspector At Local Office

Formerly claims supervisor with the unemployment insurance commission here, Mr. Eric Naylor has been promoted to district inspector with the legal division of the employment service with headquarters at Belleville. He assumed his new duties as of November 20th.

Mr. Naylor started with the National Selective Service back in 1942 and for three years was engaged in employment interviewing. He acted for nine months as temporary veterans' officer and since last time has been claims supervisor at the local office.

Under his new duties Mr. Naylor will be dealing with the enforcement and interpretation of the employment act. With headquarters in Belleville he will be covering an area consisting of Picton, Trenton, Cobourg, Peterborough, Lindsay and Peterborough. Mr. Naylor is the first such inspector to be named on the new Belleville headquarters.

180 Ex-Sea Cadets Now Serving In Canadian Navy



One hundred and eighty ex-Sea Cadets are among the 823 men serving in the Canadian Navy in Korean waters, the Navy League of Canada announces. The Commanding Officer of H.M.C.S. "Cayuga" and senior officer of the destroyer division, Captain Jeffrey Brock, D.S.O., is himself an ex-Sea Cadet.

Officials of the Navy recently sent congratulations to Captain Brock and all the men under him in the U.N. forces in the Korean area, and wished them well. In addition, the League is providing ditty bags for all the officers and men of the Canadian destroyers, to be distributed as Christmas gifts.

Obituary

PERCY O. DAVIS

Former resident of this city Mr. Percy O. Davis, 773 Oshington Ave., died at his home on Tuesday, November 21st. Mr. Davis had lived in Belleville for a greater part of his life until he moved to Toronto.

He is survived by his brother, Albert E. Davis, and a niece and nephew in Belleville. The funeral was held in Toronto this afternoon.

LATE HARVEY G. ANDERSON

The funeral of the late Harvey G. Anderson was held on Wednesday afternoon from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, where service in the chapel was conducted by Rev. J. G. Hornsby, who also took the committal service at the Belleville Cemetery.

The bearers were Harry Robinson, Jack Young, James Foster, Whitney Singerland, Russell Babcock and Gerald Clemens.

DR. W. J. JOHNSTON (Deceased)

Dr. W. J. Johnston, 29 Marmora Street, Trenton, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday. He was 68 years of age and was a patient in the hospital since Nov. 9th.

Everybody Gets Letter

Anybody telling fortunes in Belleville may safely forecast "There's a letter coming to you," says D. L. Storey, whose committee of volunteers have been working for weeks to see that no family in the district is left out when the Christmas Seal letters are mailed.

"Anxious as we are that everyone will try to support this Christmas Seal Sale we are more anxious that everyone will take advantage of the tuberculosis prevention services for which the Christmas Seals pay. When, for example, there is a mass survey we hope every person in Belleville will stand," said Mr. Storey. "What we want is for everyone to give their Christmas Seal money and then see to it that they get their money's worth. That is the way to get a program that really prevents tuberculosis.

Improved Conditions for the Less Fortunate Should be Aim of All Enjoying Free Enterprise Club Told

You may walk up and down the aisle of the church, or you may take your place in the local Chamber of Commerce . . . but unless you take up the fight against racists in the field of human activities in this community, as well as in the nation, then you are not practising the principles of Christianity or free enterprise for which you would seem to stand," was elaborated upon by Malcolm Robb in an address to members of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Men's Club. Mr. Robb spoke at the Monday dinner meeting on Wednesday evening.

Mr. Robb, senior member in the law firm of Robb, Ross and Cass, lashed out at those who purpose to have the interests of the less fortunate at heart, as well as those who appear to be upholding a high waste standard in some major industries. He explained how many such programs are being added to the obliteration of free enterprise to the glory of those whose life work is dedicated to destroying principles.

The speaker pointed out that most of those present would only have to walk a block or so from their respective residences to find first-hand, conditions in this city which are a long way from the ideals of those latter principles. He explained how, when people are in need of better conditions, they will naturally turn to those who represent themselves as supporters of improved conditions. It is up to those of free enterprise and Christian principles to fight for those improvements.

Mr. Robb pointed out that some of the greatest reforms and liberations on the American continent were not the sole work of those to whom the glory was ascribed by history, but rather found their beginnings in the quiet understanding of those of lowly station who gave their all rolling until the "fifty-one" per cent brought pressure to bear on governments to enact legislation. He finally had to uphold the impression that it would be well to the support of the majority.

"A letter to your M.P. or the formation of a committee of one could form the beginning of public discussion about present conditions," the speaker emphasized.

Mr. Robb was introduced to the gathering by B. Gordon Robertson, who briefly outlined the speaker's background, war record and his position in the legal profession. The thanks of the club, following the address, were expressed by C. A. Freeman.

The business part of the evening was a group of tenor vocal solos rendered by J. Oran Benson, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Marshall.

The dinner was provided and served by the members of Mrs. Tounsley's group of the Women's Auxiliary, directed by Mrs. Tounsley. Kenneth S. Hill was briefly outlined on the club to Mrs. Tounsley and her group for their important past in the program of the evening.

The president of the club, W. D. Richardson was chairman of the meeting. Head-table guests included Mrs. Marshall, J. O. Benson, S. Gordon Robertson and Gordon Robb, Mr. Hornsby and G. A. Freeman.

Executive Must Be able to Handle Men

A knowledge of the broader phases of business, imagination and foresight are only a few of the qualities necessary in a man in an executive position, R. Metcalfe, vice-president of general administrator of the Massey Harris Company, said Tuesday night. Mr. Metcalfe was speaking to the monthly meeting of the Bay of Quinte chapter of the Society of Industrial and Cost Accountants.

An executive is one who refers out the work of both employers and employees, and must be able to handle men. He must also have a sense of loyalty to the business and his superiors, and a desire to do a good job.

"An executive's responsibility is first of all to the owners of the business," Mr. Metcalfe said. "He must possess a knowledge of and the ability to carry out, the intentions of the firm."

Arthur Lockley introduced the speaker, and Carl Casey voiced the chapter's thanks. Guests at the dinner meeting came from Toronto, Kingston and Batawa.

Paul Robeson Given Prize Says Moscow

London, Nov. 23 — (AP) Moscow radio announced last night international peace prize has been awarded in the fields of literature and art by "the defenders of peace" at the session of the inspired Peace Congress in Warsaw, Poland. Paul Robeson, the American Negro singer, was awarded a prize for his composition, "Song of Africa." Pablo Picasso, Spanish - born painter, was given an award for his drawing "The Dove of Peace."

U.S. Troop Supplies Arrive at Bordeaux

Bordeaux, France, Nov. 23 — (AP)—Regular dockworkers yesterday began unloading the first contingent of supplies for United States troops in Germany to arrive since creation of the Atlantic can transit base here. Despite communist agitation for demonstrations, about 100 stevedores were hired without incident and set to work at once.

WENT THRU WINDOW

Toronto, Nov. 23 — (CP) Harold White, 16, has some stitches in his shoulder and leg to show for his eagerness to get a newspaper. He ran across the street, heeding the cries of delivery of a newsboy last night, but couldn't stop when he reached the other side. He went through a plate glass window and had to be taken to hospital for treatment. "I expect I'll have to pay for the window, too," he said sadly.

Oversight Cause Jury Declares

Toronto, Nov. 23 (CP)—An oversight on the part of a fruit dealer might caused the collision with a yard engine in which Mary Ogilvie, 24, was killed Sept. 11, a coroner's jury ruled last night.

A. R. Cooke, fireman, said, he saw a yellow signal light as they neared a switch and warned the engineer about it three times. He said he saw an open switch but before he could warn Ogilvie, a train had run through it and crashed into the yard engine.

BLAMES ADOLESCENT ACT

Kitchener, Nov. 23 — (CP) — Magistrate H. R. Polson yesterday criticized the Adolescent School Act as the cause of a large proportion of juvenile delinquency in Ontario.

He said the Act forced a boy or girl to go to school until they are 16 and, as a result, they lose their apprenticeship period. He said that only seven of 200 children ever go to University.

BIG APPETITES

Calgary — (CP) — A report to the School Board showed that in its first six months of operation the Western Canada High School cafeteria here had an operating deficit of $1,383. Deficits continued in September and October.

Steep Rock Using Sea-Going Dredge to Uncover Iron Ore

Atlkokan, Ont. — (CP) — Engineers have hauled a 900-ton sea-going dredge 1,000 miles overland and two miles up-water to uncover a vast body of iron ore at the bottom of Steep Rock Lake.

The project is unique in Canadian mining.

The dredge Nebraska was moved in sections from Boston, Mass., to Steep Rock mine near this Northwestern Ontario town. It was rewelded in a drydock improvised on a rock-shelf near the bottom of a low spot in nearby Steep Rock Lake. The dredge was floated recently by allowing this part of the lake to refill.

And now the Nebraska has started the three-year job of stripping 55,000,000 cubic yards of lake and river silt which covers the valuable Hogarth iron-ore deposit.

That ore is known to stretch 3,000 yards, 1½ miles wide and 900 feet or more deep.

Briefly, the dredge will lift 80 feet of silt from an area of one square mile; lift it 160 to 400 feet; and push it 10,000 feet so that it can travel harmlessly over bottom masked country.

Mergs Operations

Each minute between now and April, 1954, the dredge will move 2,000 cubic yards — 1,300,000 cubic yards a month. And engineers at Steep Rock say that is more than could be handled by 300 20-ton dump trucks (if they could be used) or by 30 rail cars.

The dredging operation was supervised by M. R. Fotheringham, engineer in charge of Steep Rock mine from its inception and by the mine's general manager.

Despite the cost of dredging the lake bottom, the project is feasible because of the tonnage of ore that will be made available. The target is for 25 cents a mine to ship some 11,000,000 tons of ore a year to Port Arthur on the Lakehead, and thence to Canadian and United States smelters.

Present production rate is about 1,200,000 tons a year. The objective four years from now is 4,000,000 tons, and seven years from now 10,000,000 tons.

The present price, that 10,000,000 tons of Canadian ore will sell for $90,000,000 annually.

Steep Rock engineers claim that known and probably ore reserves of 120,000,000 tons ultimately will increase to hundreds of millions of tons of high-grade ore as exploration is completed.

Zero Weather Hits Prairies

Winnipeg, Nov. 23, (CP)—Bitterly cold weather swept across Western Canada today.

Twenty-below-zero cold was reported from many points. Strong northwest winds whirled snow into drifts and sharpened the cold's bite.

The cold wave, most intense in Alberta, is moving east and reaches the Lakehead today.

Vermilion, 100 miles east of Edmonton, reported 30 below. Saskatoon and Prince Albert each had 20 below. It was seven below in Winnipeg.

Canadian Pacific Railway in Winnipeg issued instructions to intercontinental trains from the west running up to two hours late. Some Canadian National Railways trains were 20 to 45 minutes behind schedule.

Winter Sweeps Into Ontario

Toronto, Nov. 23—(CP)—Winter swept into Ontario during the night, with temperatures dropping to six above zero at North Bay and in Muskoka. It was 10 above at Ottawa and Kingston, 15 above Ontario with 25 at Toronto, and 30 at Windsor.

Snow flurries left highways slippery in many parts of the province. The highways department said district highways affected were those east of Georgian Bay to the Ottawa River and north of Huntsville and south of North Bay. Other roads were generally bare and dry.

Ford Passenger Car for 1951 Ready for Display

Windsor, Nov. 23. — (CP) — Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., will build a $1,000,000 parts and accessories distribution depot in Montreal, Rhys M. Sale, president, announced today.

It will occupy a 10-acre site on Cote de Liesse Road., will employ about 75 people, and will serve most of Quebec and parts of Eastern Ontario.

It is part of a program under which a new parts and accessories division of the company has been set up at Windsor, where a $4,000,000 parts depot is planned, and under which a Winnipeg depot is being built at Winnipeg.

ACQUITTED OF CHARGE

Windsor, Nov. 23—(CP)—William J. Hale was acquitted yesterday by a county court jury on a charge of attempting to procure the abortion of his 14-year-old daughter.

The girl said that a woman she had never seen before came to her home April 7 and performed the operation, after she had told her parents of her condition.

Testifying in his own defence, Hale denied all knowledge of the operation.

BLAME REDS FOR STRIKE

Canberra, Nov.23 (Reuters) — Australia's Labor Minister, Harold Holt, told the House of Representatives today he has "little doubt" the Sydney waterfront strike, now tying up 75 ships and 15,000 men, was the work of communist-inspired.

Holt charges government, concerned at the serious developments of the strikes in Sydney and Melbourne, refuses to announce plans for dealing with disputes.

SHEEP TO NEWFOUNDLAND

St. John's, Nfld., (CP)—A flock of 50 sheep from the Scottish Highlands have arrived in Newfoundland after being held in quarantine at Quebec. The Department of Natural Resources will use the Cheviot, Blackface and Shetland sheep to improve the native stock.

Bilateral Gram Talks Are Ended

Geneva, Switzerland, Nov. 23—(Reuters) — Bilateral grain talks between Russia and five western countries have ended here and will be resumed in Moscow and other capitals, the economic commission for Europe announced here today.

The talks were "satisfactory" the announcement said.

The Soviet Union was reported to have asked for grain from five western importers—Denmark, France, The Netherlands, Norway and Switzerland—but cannot meet in full their request for 50,000 tons of bread grains and about 900,000 tons of coarse grains, but would meet a revised figure, understood to be slightly lower than the original requests.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 23 — (CP) — Prices advanced in brief high ground as the session progressed on the Toronto stock exchange today.

Industrials climbed strongly for the second straight day with gains ranging to more than two points. Steels and papers led the board with a solid list of gains.

Base metals were ahead although several key issues declined. Gains ranged to 75 cents and Hudson Bay, International Nickel, Noranda, East Sullivan, Quemont and Waite Amulet were leaders that were higher.

Golden Manitou and Consolidated Smelters and United Keno Hill traded against the trend with losses.

Senior golds firmed with fractional gains while junior producers drifted downwards in quiet dealings. Losses were limited to pennies.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 23 — (CP) — Sales were steady at the Ontario stockyards today. Receipts: Cattle, 70; calves, 30; hogs, 280; sheep and lamb, 50; left from yesterday, 900 cattle, mostly stockers and plain killers.

Medium quality steers sold for $25-$26.50; common to medium light steers and heifers $17-$25; medium quality cows $18-$19.50; plain stockers $20-$24.

Calves were steady at $30-$33 for choice vealers, common to medium $24-$29.

Hogs were steady at $29.50 for Grade A, some $24 dressed.

Lambs were steady at $28.50 for good ewes and wethers, good light sheep $14-$15.

Influx of Cheap Oils Threatens Cream Industry

—Turnbull

Halifax, Nov. 23. (CP)—The influx of cheap, foreign vegetable oils in Canada is threatening not only the butter, but the cream industry and every other category dairying in Canada, J. S. Turnbull, president of the National Dairy Council, said today.

"A vegetable oil product has already displaced thousands of gallons of fresh cream," Mr. Turnbull said in a speech prepared for delivery before the Nova Scotia Dairymen's Association.

"It is being used commercially in bakeries for a number of products, including 'cream puffs' and 'cream fillings' and toppings of all sorts.

"Because it is not necessary to label this type of bakery goods, consumers are buying them under the false impression that they contain fresh cream."

In other words, said Mr. Turnbull, "these cheap foreign vegetable oils which now can be brought into this country from the principal oil producing countries of the world without payment of tariffs of any kind are threatening not only the butter industry in the form of margarine but threatening also the operations of every dairyman in the form of imitations and substitutes for every dairy product produced."

Canadian dairymen, therefore, were becoming "more and more apprehensive as to the adverse effects vegetable oil substitutes could have on the ice cream, evaporated milk, fluid milk and cream and cheese branches of the industry."

BUY A SEAL, MISTER?

Viscount Alexander opens Canada's 1950 Christmas Seals campaign with purchase of sheet of seals from three little girls who symbolize the international character of the fight against tuberculosis. Miss Helen Paes, daughter of the Brazilian ambassador, representing South America, holds the 1950 seal poster, while France Basdevant, daughter of the French counsellor, representing Europe, makes the first sale. Mary Ann Martin, daughter of Health Minister Martin, representing Canada, stands ready with a fresh batch of seals. The Governor-General made his purchase in advance of the campaign's official opening. — (CP Photo.) yo denied that any peace negotiations were going on anywhere.

Speculation arose that the peace question might be taken up at Lake Success by a Chinese communist delegation en route to the U. N.

Echols also denied reports that efforts were being made to work out a mass surrender or withdrawal of Chinese forces, whose sudden appearance in Korea in late October prolonged the war.

Nevertheless the Chinese were withdrawing everywhere. Chinese Nationalists in Taipei said the Chinese reds had been ordered to fall back because of heavy casualties, intensive bombings and surprise U. N. fighting power.

Actually, there was no more explanation of the withdrawals than of the unprecedented release of the 27 prisoners.

The American POWs were driven in trucks 60 miles southward from a prison camp at Pyaktong on the Manchurian border. They were hidden by night to avoid U. N. planes, and were released about a mile in front of the U. S. 1st Cavalry Division lines.

The prisoners — all other ranks — said they were well fed, well treated, and cared for by two captured American doctors. They were not questioned about U. N. military dispositions.

Whatever the Chinese reason for releasing the Americans, it was a Thanksgiving Day gift for the freed men. Most American soldiers in Korea celebrated the U. S. Thanksgiving by eating turkey.

Tribute is Paid Late Primate

Toronto, Nov. 23 — (CP) The funeral of Most Rev. George F. Kingston, Primate of the Church of England in Canada and Archbishop of Nova Scotia, was held today in stately old St. James' Cathedral, attended by a host of church dignitaries from across Canada.

Most Rev. W. H. Adams, Metropolitan of British Columbia and Primate, celebrated Holy Communion. He was assisted by Most Rev. Phil Carrington, Archbishop of Quebec, who read the Epistle, and Most Rev. Ralph Sherman, Archbishop of Rupert's Land, who read the Gospel.

The solemn office for the burial of the dead was sung by the Cathedral choir led by Choirmaster W. Wells Hewitt.

Twenty-five members of the Canadian House of Bishops sat in the chancel. In the nave of the church were fellow clergy, Sisters of religious orders and representatives of other communions.

The Governor - General, Viscount Alexander, was represented by an aide. Hon. Ray Lawson, Lieutenant - Governor of Ontario, represented the provinces.

The sun broke through the clouds in time for the committal at the Chapel of St. James the Less in St. James' Cemetery.

The body was cremated and the ashes will be buried beneath the high altar of the new Trinity College Chapel when it is completed late next year.

STILL THE SAME

It must be that somewhere in the long history of the party telephone, on which whole communities could listen in, something like this happened, says Christian Science Monitor:

Two people who had never seen each other — a boy and a girl, of course — were caught in a conversation via crossed-up numbers, and though the whole town might be perhaps dimly pursued their chitchat to the not bitter end which matrimony can be.

We say it must have happened, because things can't be so different — not things like that, anyway — even in this age of advanced electronics. And the other day this happened:

A North Carolina couple were married after some months of "party wireless" conversations via radio. They were radio "hams," amateurs, who got their frequencies mixed, according to the Associated Press, last December. While not just the home town but the whole world of radio hams could hear them they talked themselves into it.

Sometimes this world seems almost too different from that it used to be. Even the sun-dial burner has given way to a radiant floor that heats the house. Aunt Hepzibah's firescope is now Nephew Jack's television outfit.

So it's assuring to note that though means change as to investments and "the price of gold for," minds remain recognisable in human affairs. And that if a girl and a boy on their new-fangled frequencies crossed, the result is as old-fashioned as the dimly remembered wall phone in grandpa's general store.

CLEARING ROUGH GROUND

For clearing rough and unproductive ground, it is said there is nothing better than a few pigs. The Finnish bulldozers to which James Thurburn and Eric Slade referred to in a BBC program completely cleared a stretch of waste land, they said. Slade lives in Devon and after his pigs had finished with bracken, heather, brambles and young saplings. Beneath all this encroachment of vegetation lay the remains of old hedges, ditches and a few rotting gateposts, but no one remembers the land producing anything but bracken and saplings. Slade decided he would clear some of it and bring it back into cultivation and he rented fifty acres of the wilderness and put in a few pigs to an acre. They made straight for the bracken, took off the green tops and ate the roots. Then they started digging and came to the heather tips. Whilst they dealt with these the continual pounding of their trotters left the heather as stubble and when they had finished with that they turned their attention to the saplings. When they had disposed of all the green leaves they attacked the saplings and got about half of them out; they then started on the digging and went back over the land and re-rooted and getting out everything they left in before.

Slade found that the pigs had gone down as much as a foot to get what they wanted. The fifty pigs spent eight months on the job and all that Slade has to do now is to pick out odd bits of rubbish and any tree stumps which were too large and a diver was brought in to clear the water. He then sowed the land and sow his pigs, says Slade, have done it. Only, to use a hideous modern term, "rehabilitated" the land, they have also gained a great deal from it, for while they were bulldozing they did not feed nearly as much artificial food as usual and they gained in weight.

JUSTICE

It is natural, whenever we feel that we are not receiving our fair deserts, or suffer from the wrong-doing of others, to say, "There is no justice." But there is, and to think otherwise is a delusion. It is true that "the mills of the gods grind slowly." Justice often does not overtake the offender, and the reward of virtue is sometimes delayed. But righteousness wins out in the end. Sometime never pays; it is only the foolish who imagine that crime pays. Right is always the best policy, but this cannot be viewed on a higher plane. Virtue is its own reward. Wendell Phillips says that "when Infinite Wisdom established the rule of right and honesty, He saw that justice would be always the highest expediency." So that, even regarded from the purely selfish point of view, it is the best "policy." There is a principle of righteousness at work in the world, which, like truth, is bound to prevail, triumphing over all opposition. Even the heathen poets of pre-Christian times recognized the unconquerable might of integrity. The man of upright character could go through every conceivable ordeal and come to no harm; while the existence of the evil-doer was invariably portrayed as wretched and miserable.

We cannot always prevent others from being unfriendly, but it is better, as a rule, to ignore such incidents. Strife grows stronger through trial. Philosophers speak of the "working of antagonism," and of "equilibrium always gets as he gives." It is a law which is essential for the orderly working of the universe; the Book of Truth terms us that all who sow the wind shall reap the whirlwind, and Justice cannot be denied. — Hamilton Spectator.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

GUEST OF HONOR

He looked about the table
With a twinkle none could miss,
Then said: "I want to tell you
I have always hoped for this.
Down the years I've often wondered if the day would ever be
When those I've known and worked with would a party give for me.

Men work for fame and fortune
To be desired,
But a man may long for friendship
When his fortune is acquired.

When his comrades meet to praise him, it is music to his ears,
And no reward is greater for the labor of his years.

"It is this time that I have hoped for. It is this I've tried to win.
The faith of all my fellows when the resting days begin.

Just a party such as this one; friends who still believe in me.
This I say is true achievement;
this is man's best victory."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

50 YEARS AGO

Nov. 22, 1900

The boat which has been loading products from a local plant at the government dock for the past few days has pulled out, bound for the lakes of St. Pierre and Miquelon. About 40 men were given employment loading the ship.

Mr. F. E. MacLaurin will be guest speaker at the first meeting of the newly-formed men's group of Elgin Street United Church, Trenton. Mr. A. F. Stillman will be guest singer.

There was an excellent attendance at the public schools in the city during the past month, the school nurse, Miss Ross, reports. Illness suffered by the pupils in various schools included colds, influenza, laundice and typhoid fever.

25 YEARS AGO

Nov. 23, 1925

Mrs. Bonter, who has been transferred from Rawdon's Christian Temperance Union in Belleville to some time, disshortly leave here. At a recent meeting of the union she was made a life member of the County of Hastings W. T. U. and presented with a beautiful beaded hand bag. The address was signed by M. M. Sinclair and L. M. Jones. Miss O'Flynn presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. Gibson.

Anchor ice clogged the intake pipe at the water works pump house and a diver was brought from Kingston to clear the pipe. At one time on the well at the pump house was nearly empty.

In appreciation of the services of the ushers, the Belleville Theatre fire, Mayor W.B. Riggs, owner of the building has sent a substantial cheque to the members of the fire department.

Mr. George E. Fox will sing at a concert in Campbellford this evening.

40 YEARS AGO

Nov. 23, 1910

Messrs. Charles Dolan and William Wims of this city won the debate in Peterborough when they competed with two members of the Total Abstinence Society of that city.

Mr. Dan Cameron has secured the best talent in Belleville for the concert in John Street Church tomorrow evening.

The Rev. J. P. Wilson of Lindsay, formerly of Belleville, has been invited to become pastor of the Western Methodist Church, Napanee.

Mr. J. H. Learmouth of this city was in Peterborough yesterday.

Mrs. C. H. Denyes, Dunbar Street, has left for Toronto, where she will reside. Mr. Denyes has been located there for some time.

50 YEARS AGO

Nov. 23, 1900

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Ross of the fourth concession of Thurlow will shortly leave their neighborhood, where they have resided for 34 years, acting as useful members of the community and church. To say farewell a large number of friends gathered at their home recently and spent a pleasant evening, and presented them with a handsome china porridge set. Among those present were the Rev. M. Sexsmith of Tweed and the Rev. Sexsmith of Melrose.

How about the electric fire alarm system for this city? This is a matter which deserves immediate attention.

Many citizens would like to see the Philharmonic Society reorganize and favor us with more excellent concerts.

Mr. George E. Fox will sing at a concert in Campbellford this evening.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Among the numerous tributes lately paid to George Bernard Shaw was one that referred to Shaw's scorn of half-baked ideas.

It might be time the suffering world to turn a little scorn on the fully-baked ideas which, for some little reason, have more or less ruled the world. We have been living through an era in which ideas have been baked to a crisp. The fire of war has burned to ashes half-baked ideas on the market.

The only ideas which have escaped scorn are those baked solid like bricks. The Communists and other Socialists produce bricks that bear a decided likeness to those found in Babylon, with inscriptions baked into them. The anti-socialists produce second-hand bricks salvaged from fine old edifices lately demolished. Second-hand; but very well baked.

It has never occurred to us that ideas should not be baked at all. In which case, half-baked ideas are better than baked ones. The great mass of mankind confine their ideas—which the dictionary says are any conceptions existing in the mind as the result of mental apprehension or activity—to very unessential and changeable things. If you are a woman, you do not hold the same ideas about your living room curtains that you held two years ago. If you are a man, your ideas with regard to money, for example, are not the same today, when you have seen as they were a year ago, when you had $500 to spare.

It would be tragic for the curtain manufacturers and the merchants if ideas about curtains did not change. It will be a queer world indeed when the day comes that nobody will have to think about $500, one way or the other.

This can be said for half-baked ideas: at least the oven hasn't been turned off.

Strength for the Day

THANKSGIVING

This is a year, certainly, when we have much to be thankful for. The earth has brought forth plentifully. Unemployment has maintained itself at a high level. The health of the nation certainly has not been any worse than in recent years. We had our liberty challenged by the invasion of Korea, and that provocative situation has been handled by the United Nations—and chiefly by our own country—with a firm hand.

And yet all these things constitute but an outer shell. What about the inner life of our people? Are we better than we were a year ago? Is the spiritual life of the country richer and more responsive to the leading of the divine hand?

Full living and humming industries are fine, but no country is ever prosperous until its people are contented, well behaved, and purposeful.

What applies to the nation applies to the individual. And of this we can be sure—our condition of mind and heart is something over which we can exercise

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

HOW GOES IT?

The story I really want to write when we get home and how business again is getting by on how people are getting by on their income.

The newspapers and the magazines have gone deep into the subject of the staggering cost of living and the whole record of inflation. But I'd like to read one writing the intimate, personal story of what this means in terms of denial, of sacrifice in real families. I have a hunch that's the biggest human interest yarn of this decade.

One weekend I'd like the paper to give me the whole magazine section, as they did a couple of years ago for an aftermath story on the Fraser River flood. I'd like to get five or six couples with families and with incomes ranging from $40 to $100 a week, gather around a dinner table with a wire recorder, compare notes and print the yarn.

I'd like to find out what it costs them for food, that each month paying for the future, how deeply they're in debt or how they're staying out of debt, what standard of living has done to their standard of living, what they think about taxes, and so on.

If you could get some volunteers who wouldn't mind this intrusion into their private lives I think it would be a story that would have meaning for every reader.

One of the most typical domestic problems is the family periodic clambake when Mr. and Mrs. sit down to have a long, hard look at their budget. The way it usually is the case in my family and with most of my friends is that it's a standoff. Most people I know say they can't live decently on their present salaries, but somehow they're getting deeper in the red.

I want to find out if this is true generally, and if so, what we have to stop the drift into serious debt and what effect this is having on the real lives. That is a whole lot of a story.

Some Figures

I'm particularly interested in the respectable, middle class family with appearances to keep up and who, it seems to me, have lost the most ground in the uneven race between salaries and the cost of living index.

Take a couple, for example, who have three kids and who have a monthly income, say of around $300. Now that's the chief of the Canadian average which, when I last looked was around $150 a week. I know a lot of guys in my own business who are making that kind of money and who have families, and I'm darned if I know how they get along.

Let's take a fairly penetrating eye on her budget, figure that a family with three kids will run to around $100 more than $150 a month for groceries, meats, drugs, fruit, greens and milk. We'll say that the average monthly rent is $40, transportation is $10, fuel is $30, telephone and light bills run to about $12, clothes would be at least $25, and, just for the sake of argument, we'll put board hold expenses at $20.

That would leave the $300-a-month family with just exactly $33 a month for laundry and cleaning, magazines and newspapers, insurance, dentist and doctor bills, furniture, entertainment, taxes and savings. It just doesn't add up.

The way I figure it, a man earning a high wage is wise and is trying to keep up a decent home by 1939 standards and perhaps run a car can't make ends meet and certainly can't be putting anything away for the future.

Some of my friends, I know, are making compromises. A friend of mine who makes $75 a week takes his lunch to work in a brown paper bag. Some neighbors of ours in that same income group are living on a diet as austere as any Englishman's, rolling their own cigarettes, avoiding any luxuries. The husband sits home as baby-sitter with the kids so his wife can go to a show.

These are people who make in the neighborhood of twice the national average. How in the world does the "average" or subaverage family get by? I'd certainly like to know.

An Invitation

As a starter on this, I'd like to hear from some of you who have given the matter thought. If you wish to do this anonymously, just mention that in your letter. And if any of you would like to be interviewed on a panel of the type I mentioned above, I'd like to hear from you.

What I want to know is how much money you make and what you get for it, and how the hell you manage to live within your income on what you consider a decent standard of living and, if you have the time, a sample budget. In short, what has inflation done to your personal life?

Our own experience may or may not help, but we find we can't save money without cutting into what we consider necessary and legitimate items on our budget and any sizeable outlay — for instance, a new refrigerator — is a scramble like on. We live in a fool's paradise with a nice-looking home, a decent car and we seem to quite grasp the idea that the dollar is worth about 60 cents of what it was in 1939, if it's worth that.

I think it's high time we began making a lot of noise about this or at any rate getting a little sharper focus on what's happening to us "prosperous" Canadians, and I'd very much like to hear and pass on—your views.

Fishing Chief Job Of Labrador Coast

St. John's, Nfld., (CP)—People on the coast of Labrador still depend mainly for their livelihood on the inshore cod fisheries, although there is some exploitation of forest resources and a hydro-electric power station established at Hawke's Harbor.

The Newfoundland Department of Fisheries has just released a report on the economic trends and living conditions on the coast of Labrador.

The people are generally be divided into three groups. First are the fishermen-trappers on the coast whose winter homes are situated inland. Often they spend the summer fishing on the coast or on outlying islands. During the winter months they get their income by trapping.

The second group is made up of the "stationers," migratory teams of men and women from Newfoundland who, each month in the summer and settle on an island or in some sheltered cove from which they carry on inshore fishing.

Third are the floaters, schooner crews which do not operate from any permanent settlement and make their vessels all the time they are away from their homes in Newfoundland. The floaters, more mobile than the other groups, move wherever the fishing is good.

Summer fishing and winter trapping provide the main income of the residents of the Labrador coast. Here and there a little food grows in varied wild game, and there is limited exploitation of the forests.

SENTENCES CHANGED

Toronto, Nov. 23 — (CP) — The Ontario Appeal Court yesterday increased the sentence of John Sandilak and changed the sentence of his brother. The two were convicted in Peterborough, Ont., of assaulting James Hogen. They appealed.

John Zabodnik now must serve one month plus $100 fine instead of having the choice of fine or sentence. James now must pay a $200 fine and serve one month in jail, instead of choosing between the fine and a three-month sentence.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

A RICH NATURE

What a thing it is to be fortunate enough to have a few friends with a rich nature! To be within the area of one is like standing upon a rich deposit of gold, or gold mine underneath, but with more gold upon the surface in easily accessible ore cut their fragrance, unsolicited and free to anyone with love and an appreciative heart.

"To be wealthy," said Stevenson, "a rich nature is the first requisite and money the second." In the presence of a rich nature all thought of monetary wealth are dismissed. You think only of the richness of the mind and heart, of the many voluntary kindnesses, of the continual cheer dispensed, and of the tolerance of such a life.

The rich nature doesn't complain. It bears and forbears. It lives a day at a time, yes, a minute at a time! It envies no one. It sees in nature all the elements that go to make up the living God. Its effect is to spread pleasantness on every contact. It looks upon both the good and the bad, but advertises only the good.

The rich nature in a person is the very core of health, healing itself, and giving itself away. Its very garment is one of consideration and consideration for the feelings of others. Old Walt Whitman must have had such a person with such a nature. I recently read of a family that called upon him in his modest home in Camden, New Jersey, while he lived there. Many looked upon him at that time as a rather strange and uncouth, but he fascinated these people. He was kind, thoughtful and lived months at their home, and they were happy to have him. People with a rich nature are always loveable, and you want them around and near you. Their very presence is an inspiration. When such a one dies you partly die, too. But the comforting thing is that a trait of light lives on, as a guide to us, when it gets dark and the road ahead become difficult travelling.

IMMEDIATE OPERATION FOR LUMP IN BREAST

No one knows the day or hour when cancer cells break away from the site of the original tumor to establish a secondary growth in other parts of the tissues or organs.

It is known, however, that when operation for cancer of the breast the primary cancer is too long delayed, secondary or metastatic cancer may develop in other areas after a lapse of several years during which time the patient may appear perfectly well.

It has long been pointed out that cancer is curable—if it is treated early. There can be no minimizing the importance of this point. The need for early attention to any suspicious process has been widely publicized and emphasized for many years by those who understand the facts.

A lump in the breast is a suspicious process under any circumstances. It does not matter there. Regardless of what the lump may prove to be, the patient is better off with the lump removed.

A lump in the breast is not a sure sign of cancer. There are many types of benign lumps which may develop in the breast which are not cancer and will not "turn into" cancer. But no one—no doctor or other person—can look at or examine a lump in the breast and diagnose it offhand as being either benign or malignant.

The thing—and the only thing—which tells the story is a microscopic examination of tissue removed from the lump. This, as has been previously explained, constitutes a "biopsy"—examination of tissue removed from a living body.

A biopsy of the breast entails a very simple operation. Through a small incision, the tumor is removed and the tissue is examined microscopically by a pathologist—a matter requiring but a few minutes. If the tissue is found to be benign—not cancerous—the operation is concluded at that point. Nothing but a tiny scar remains as evidence of the procedure and the patient's mind is entirely relieved.

If malignancy — cancer — is found, a more extensive operation aimed at total removal of all possibly involved tissue follows.

Nothing short of a biopsy can determine the point.

In my opinion, the discovery of a lump in the breast calls for an immediate biopsy. This need is so urgent as to be considered nothing less than an emergency. It is a thing to be done today—tomorrow at the latest—and not a thing to be done "when there is time for it."

The foggy advice involved in delaying biopsy and "watching" the lump over an indefinite period of time, is not only unscientific, it is deadly. It is essential to know whether the lump is malignant. If it is—immediate operation is life-saving. If it isn't, no harm is done and all doubt about the matter is settled.

It is entirely possible that a small cancer of the breast removed today would result in a complete and total cure. A delay of a short time—say, a week or a month—might "lock the barn after the horse is stolen." Removal of a cancer after it has primary site after cancer cells from it have invaded other regions, is too late. Early attention offers the alternate to eventual death.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Polydipsia

I have developed in the last six months what a doctor called polydipsia. (S. A. H.)

Answer—Your letter does not mention whether the doctor made a sugar test. If not, have the test made. Excessive thirst is sometimes due to diabetes.

Syphilophobia

I have a constant fear of getting syphilis, not from venereal infection but through everyday contact with persons and things. (L. H.)

Answer—Ordinary soap and water cleanliness is ample protection against the spread of syphilis or other infectious disease through such contacts.

Diathermy

Thank you for referring me to your previous newspaper ten finely unpigmented moles from my face and neck under local anesth, by diathermy and they are all gone. The result is high satisfactory. (Mrs. A. M.)

Answer — And thank you, Mrs. A., for writing me a little note when you didn't want anything more.

Liberal Leader Predicts Election During June

Sydenham, Nov. 23 — (CP)— Walter C. Thomson, newly-elected Ontario Liberal party leader, precicted in a speech at Sydenham last night that there will be a provincial election next June.

Addressing the Frontenac Addington Liberal Association, Mr. Thomson predicted Liberals will form the next Ontario government, and said "there is evidence everywhere of a growing upsurge toward the cause of Liberalism in Ontario."

He said Premier Frost's Progressive Conservative administration could best be described as the "three R's government." He said Progressive Conservatives "were bewitched by the 23-point program inherited from George Drew, now the party's national leader; bothered by its existence and bewildered as to what to do in the future."

While the present government's acts of omission are numerous, their acts of commission are even worse," he said, pointing to "such things as increasing the size of the provincial civil service by three times what it was under the Hepburn administration; the town planning commission, the 24-man agriculture commission which cost $40,000 and accomplished nothing, the taking over of the Toronto stockyards, with no resultant benefit to breeders and farmers and the hope commission on education which has turned out to be hopeless."

Four Men Held, Also Two Women After Robbery

Toronto, Nov. 23 (CP) —Four men and two women were arrested last night following the armed robbery of a downtown cigar store operated by Michael Mandell.

Mandell told police two men entered the premises, hit him over the head when he refused to give up his money, and made off with $170. One of the men was armed.

Later police raided a rooming house and arrested Gerald Leonard, 21, of Sudbury, John Fox, 21, Kenneth Coughlin, 23, and Douglas Thibeault, 21. The two women were arrested when found in the same place.

Fox was charged with escaping from Guelph reformatory last August, armed robbery, wounding with intent to maim, and having an offensive weapon. Leonard was charged with armed robbery, wounding and having an offensive weapon.

The four others were charged with having offensive weapons.

Turkeys in U.S. Take Curtain For Thanksgiving

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP) — The turkey took his annual curtain call today in the United States in spite of war, taxes and death.

Throughout the U.S. and around the world, even in cold, battle-worn Korea, Americans prepared to offer thanks for the good things they have.

President Truman asked his countrymen to pray for peace wherever they are, in church or at home or in the "busy walks of life, every day, everywhere."

Many of them had crowded last night onto trains, buses and planes to get back to their own hearths for the prayers and the feasting. Many more today jammed the highways heading to football fields and golf courses.

The weatherman studied his charts and said it would be cold in a lot of places and generally fair. A cold wave was moving in on the mountain and plains states. Another still lingered along the Atlantic seaboard.

Sunflower Plant Is Found Growing In Child's Lung

Kansas City, Nov. 23 (AP) —A sunflower plant was found growing in the lung of a two-year-old Kansas City girl yesterday. Trivit it had only a half-inch-long sprout and roots, but the flower seed had germinated and was making lusty growth in the lower lung of the child's right side. Doctors removed the plant and Patricia was reported in good condition.

Rail Connections Repaired on Border

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 23— (AP) — American Ambassador George Allen said last night that rail connections between Yugoslavia and Greece have been repaired and can be reopened "within a half hour." The two countries were bitter foes until a year ago. Allen said Greece is reported ready to permit Yugoslavia to use the port of Salonika ko was convicted of murdering Patricia Swarts, 16, on her own back steps May 20 after she refused to give him carfare to go to work.

CAMPBELLFORD

Quick Action By Firemen Saves Garage

Quick action on the part of firemen resulted in no damage being caused, when a chimney fire broke out in the building occupied by Sullivan's Sales and Service on Rear Street about 6.35 on Tuesday evening.

Persons occupying apartments above the garage were able to remain in their rooms, while firemen quelled the flames.

Pump Torn Out

A car driven by Joseph Golden and owned by Mrs. Ruth Plane both of Camnifton, Ontario, caused considerable damage at the service station operated by Mr. T. E. Hall on Tuesday evening, when, after paying for the gasoline he had just purchased, Mr. Golden started to drive away from the pumps. The rear bumper of the car caught in the hose of the gasoline pump, and literally tore it out by the roots from the cement island it had been on.

The pump was dragged a few feet from the island by the car before it was noticed, and will not be working for a few days.

Police said the damage is covered by insurance.

Forced Off Road

About $75..damage resulted to a car driven by Clarence Bannum on Tuesday night, when it was forced off the road about four miles from Campbellford on the Hastings road.

A car travelling up a hill in the opposite direction crowded the Barnum car, and the driver lost control on the soft shoulder. The car turned over in the ditch, damaging the right side, and breaking several windows. The other driver did not stop, apparently unaware of the accident he had caused.

Mr. Barnum was not injured. Provincial Constable Donald W. Erskine of Campbellford investigated.

Choirmaster Dies At North Bay

North Bay, Nov. 23 (CP)—Arthur Morley Fellman, 66, pianist, organist and choirmaster, died yesterday. He was the father of C. Mortimer Fellman, managing editor of the North Bay Daily Nugget.

For several years, Mr. Fellman, who came here from Toronto in 1922, was organist and choirmaster at Trinity United hurch. Later he held the same position at First Presbyterian Church.

Other survivors are his widow; a daughter, Mrs. A. C. R. M'Conigle of Toronto; and a sister, Mrs. C. A. Snell of Toronto.

The funeral will be held here Saturday at the Church of St. John the Divine.

CROWDED

More than 2,100 rush-hour passengers—many homeward bound for a gay holiday—were jammed into the 12 electric cars on each train. Some were standing in the aisles.

Flying glass and jagged, deadly steel knifed through the cars. Died Where They Sat

In the cars where the impact occurred many passengers died where they sat, strangled as though between two giant flatirons. It took hours to pry the cars apart, using power saws, jacks and acetylene torches, and some injured still moaned in the death trap after midnight— six hours after the crash.

There was no explanation for the apparent failure of a block system to halt the second train after the first one stopped.

The great city of New York turned itself inside out to aid the victims. Rescue workers by the score and some 200 police went to the scene.

Doctors came from throughout the city, bringing blood and medical supplies. They set up an emergency operating room in a nearby private home for amputation cases.

Internes Assist in Rescue

Despite the terrible scene, raucous 'teen-agers pushed noisily against police lines that held back 5,000 onlookers. Police finally had to plead over a loud speaker for them to "please keep quiet."

Two young internes, Paul E. Soffer and Arnold R. Sanders, worked with quiet heroism beneath the ghastly man-made daylight of searchlights. They squeezed their way between the telescoped cars. For 4½ hours they lay there ministering to trapped passengers.

When they crawled out and collapsed—unedited by superiors with saving the lives of two-thirds of the surviving injured.

A scene of heartbreaking sadness was being enacted meanwhile at the nearest police station, the clearing house for news of the dead and injured. Weeping women sought news there of relatives aboard the train.

Carry 300,000 a Day

The Long Island carries an estimated 300,000 passengers a day, commuters from the business beehive of Manhattan to the quiet cottages and estates of Long Island.

The wreck scene is about 10 miles from Rockville Centre, where last February a wreck occurred, in that crash one train ran through a stop signal and collided head on with another. Besides the 31 dead, over 100 were injured.

Many safety measures were recommended after a long state investigation into that wreck.

Damage, suits piled up against the bankrupt Long Island and still are being settled.

The motorman of one train in the earlier wreck was tried for manslaughter. But he was found innocent after he said he blacked out and never saw the stop signal.

PHONES

the same track for Babylon through Rockville Centre.

It was dark early, and a cold, chill moon, almost full, gleamed on the bleak ahead. Inside the cars, hot and stuffy, the extra crowds stood in the aisles, swaying as the 12-car train plunged eastward.

It had been nine months since the disastrous head-on collision at Rockville Centre killed 31. Probably nobody was thinking of that wreck when the 6:09 made an unscheduled stop.

This was at Kew Gardens, where the tracks run behind little bungalows in residential Queensborough, still inside the city.

But the brakes had locked, and nothing happened.

Then with a flash and a roar the 6:13 was on top of them from behind.

"I heard her coming," Brakeman Bertrand Biggan said hours later at Jamaica hospital, "but I thought she was on another track!"

"I looked back . . . and she was coming like the devil . . . I thought 'My God! She's on the same track!'"

Then the onrushing car crashed in front of Biggan's face. It hurled him the full length of the rear coach, and let him escape, injured but alive.

Behind him, motorman Benjamin Pokorny rode the 6:13 to his death in a telescoping slaughterhouse of passengers.

His lead car went through and over the rear coach, splitting it, shearing bodies, rolling up glass, green mohair and flesh into a tangled mass.

Those who lived all had their story to tell. . . . the screams, the flying glass, the cold dusty smell of steel and wreckage, the flash and power failure as the third rail short-circuited, the cries, the moans, and the wet, warm blood on hands and face.

This was New York City, and help was fast. But for hours only the cry of earth could help the injured and the dying pinned in the narrow gap between Pokorny's car above, and the 6:09's rear coach below.

Casualties were compiled at the Richmond Hill precinct station. There lists were typed and posted.

As radio and newspaper headlines carried the news through the city—and the suburbs—nearly 200 women gathered there.

But others stood wondering why their husbands dallied while dinner spoiled. The trains are sometimes late. . . but hardly that late.

Then the telephones began ringing.

In Garden City it rang in the home of Harry Eidt, a 50-year-old architect.

Two wondered what had happened," said the voice at the end of the line, speaking calm and evenly.

Then it broke into a sob.

"We were waiting supper for him."

Says Jos. Stalin Is Semi-Invalid

London, Nov. 23 (Reuters) — The Evening Star said last night Prime Minister Joseph Stalin is "a semi-invalid, according to some western observers."

The paper says Stalin's health is "a current talking point in London embassies.

According to reports in embassy circles, the paper says, Stalin has been spending most of his time under treatment for an unknown complaint at a Black Sea resort.

Diplomats in Moscow, the paper says, believe that Stalin is still guiding the politburo, though less directly, and keeps in touch with Soviet affairs by calling Soviet leaders to "his secret seaside home" for short visits.

ACTOR OPERATED ON

San Francisco, Nov. 23 (AP) — Robert Taylor, Hollywood movie picture star, underwent a two-hour abdominal operation yesterday. His wife, Barbara Stanwyck, described his condition as "very satisfactory."

WEDDINGS

FERGUSSON—REID

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized in the parsonage of Centre Street United Church, Belleville, on Saturday, Nov. 18, the Reverend E. O. Wagar, when Dorothy Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Reid, of Ashfield, Ont., became the bride of Robert Bruce Fergusson, of Belleville, only son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Fergusson.

The bride was becomingly attired in a rose taffeta street-length dress, fashioned with moulded bodice short sleeves and full skirt, with matching grey gloves and hat, grey topcoat and corsage of white and bronze mums. She was attended by Mrs. George Stollicker, sister of the bridegroom, of Belleville, also attired in grey with black accessories, and corsage of gold and bronze mums, while Mr. Stollicker attended the bridegroom.

The young couple will reside at R.R. 8, Belleville.

3RD HILLIER

Christ Church Guild Holds Delightful Tea, Bazaar

3rd Hillier — Last Friday the ladies of Christ Church Guild, Hillier, held their annual bazaar and tea in the town hall, which proved a delightful event. The guests were welcomed by the president, Mrs. Warner McFaul. The treasurer for the afternoon was Mrs. Fred Morton.

Mrs. Hermon Weese poured tea, while dainty refreshments were served at small tables arranged around the room, each decorated with a miniature fall flowers, by Mrs. H. Weese, Mrs. D. Boyle, Miss Sheila Curry and Mrs. W. Wright, assisted by Mrs. Fred Morton.

The homecooking table was convened by Mrs. L. Leavens and Mrs. A. Wolfe, and was well patronized. The fancy work table had a lot of lovely articles, and was convened by Mrs. L. Jones and Mrs. C. Gamble, while the Youth and Cake, in charge of Mrs. C. Benway, was well taken care of. Mrs. Ross Curry was an admirable and amusing fortune teller for the children.

The aprons of many kinds and pretty designs were sold by Mrs. S. Weir, and Mrs. W. Dalland had charge of the candies, while the country store, in charge of Mrs. C. Pardoe and Mrs. M. McFaul was well patronized.

Both the Reverend and Mrs. Heaven were present.

Proceeds for the afternoon amounted to around $160.

The ladies of the Guild would like to thank all who attended making the bazaar one of success.

Fashion Flashes

UNEVEN hems appear in many evening dresses. Star-sapphire blue silk taffeta for a delicious dress, down to the floor in back, scurved up above the ankle in front. The strapless bodice is entirely covered with multi-colored sequins.

LITTLE, but, oh my! Brown angora wool for a breath of a hat, a wee, tiny head-hugging job that just drips with knobs and tassels of brown suede-leather braid and clumps of gold sequins. Spectacular!

GOING UP in interest, from the hemline to the neckline, one finds all sorts of interesting collars. Parchment silk taffeta for a fulle skirted dress with a criss-cross halter drapery that ended with an enormous winged collar.

FOR YOUR consideration there are some mighty interesting furs in the budget brackets. For instance, we noted a handsome coat of what looked liked mink but that turned out to be marmot—the skins let out, as is done with fine fur. Cut on mink coat lines with tiny collar and tapering revers, it's a buy at the three-hundred mark.

PRIDE of the season is the theatre suit. One of the brightest suits we have seen is fine rayon brocade in a rich, slightly textured design. The dress has a low-cut, cuffed neckline and a slim skirt, and the jacket has notched, peaked revers, nipped waist and slightly rounded hips.

COVER-UP agents are many this season, with all sorts of pretty conceits to aid in keeping warm and looking charming at one and the same time. One clever notion is a giant triangle scarf, velvet on one side and on the other, white cottoman. Reversible, of course!

Christmas Loveliness Features W.A. Tea, Bazaar Of Bridge St. United Church

"Great occasions must have a beginning," stated the Reverend E. F. Church yesterday afternoon, as he officially opened the annual Christmas tea and bazaar held under the auspices of the Women's Association in the Sunday School room of Bridge Street United Church, adding that he was happy for such an auspicious day, cloudless skies and sunshine, augurers of success, and extended his congratulation to the W.A. for their splendid display. He hoped also that each and all would carry away with them something of the warmth, and fellowship they had enjoyed together during the afternoon.

Viola of Loveliness

Leaving the clear, crisp atmosphere outside, one was met, on entering, by the inviting fragrance of a tall and stately evergreen tree, glowing with colored lights and glistening ropes of silver, harbinger of what lay beyond the hall-closed inner doors: here the gracious receptionists, Mrs. F. Church and Mrs. J. E. Marsh, presided. Of the W.A. invited to the vista of loveliness rivalling even the night before Christmas; glowing candles, glistening metallic, red poinsettias backgrounded by iridescent green leaves and silver spheres; a garden of white-topped tables enclosed by a picturesque red fence sheathed in evergreen boughs with wide-open white gates through which the guests would shortly wend their way to partake of the 'cup that cheers but not inebriates.'

Charming Tea Table

Here, too, was the charming tea table with its snow-white damask cloth, centred by a simulated tiny Christmas tree of shining spheres of rose, silver, green and white, tall taper, and the ornate silver services; the whole backgrounded by red curtains over which two maidens in scintillating green and rose gowns were gaily tripping, and snow white deer, while interminglings with the hum of happy voices, could be heard the strains of "Holy Night, Silent Night," and other appropriate selections, so pleasingly rendered by the pianists, Mrs. Ken Bird, and Mrs. Fred Houston.

The gracious hostesses were Mrs. P. C. McGuire, Mrs. H. Wray, Mrs. R. Grant and Mrs. H. Seldon.

Those Who Served . . .

Those who presided included: Mrs. R. A. Morden; Mrs. G. S. Cronk; Mrs. W. J. McMillan; Mrs. F. Houston; Mrs. A. H. Maguire; Mrs. H. Montgomery; Mrs. Ackerman; Mrs. J. D. O'Flynn; Mrs. C. B. Morgan; Mrs. F. Foley; Mrs Countryman, Sr; Those serving: Mrs. C. E. Meyers; Mrs. T. Lewis; Mrs S. Scriver; Mrs. R. Wilbur; Mrs. V. White; Mrs. B. Latimer; Mrs. W. Countryman; Mrs. Parrott, Jr.; Mrs. C. Scott; Mrs. F. Burrows; Mrs. W. Riley; Mrs. A. C. Wilkin; Mrs. D. Stanton; Mrs. F. Johnson; Mrs. H. Parker; Mrs. W. Anderson; Mrs. C. MacDonald; Mrs. R. Miller; Mrs. W. Fox; Mrs. T. Colden; Mrs. B. Leslie; Mrs Clare Clarke; Mrs. D. Williams; Mrs. I. Reid; Mrs. C. McMullen; Mrs. E. Hodgins; Mrs. Ridel; Mrs. C. Dyngsle; Mrs. T. Franklin and Mrs. E. K. Urch. While those who replenished were Mrs. J. Mitchell; Mrs. C. Clarke; Mrs. H. Lee; Mrs. LaFrance; Mrs. E. Denyes; Mrs. A. J. Davis; Mrs. H. K. Clifton; Mrs. S. Eaton and Mrs P. Campbell.

Delectable Cakes

Directly off the festive tea room in the room of 'beautiful windows' was the table of homecooking convened by Mrs. J. E. Buchanan and her co-conveners, Mrs. L. Wilson, with the treasurer, Mrs. W. S. Northcott, and their committee. Here a most pleasant and gorgeous array of delectable home-made cakes, pies, jellies, hams, and cookies could be seen. There were angel cakes with pastel-tinted frostings; chocolate layer cakes hoary with shredded cocoanut (but not with age); white cakes with dots of chocolate, taffy tarts filled with nuts; oatmeal cookies; loaf cakes, chocolate topped; lemon and raspberry tarts; jam-filled buns; date squares; macaroons; Parkerhouse rolls; grape jelly just the thing to add a tart to the delicious looking jellied tongues; lemon tarts with top-hats of golden meringue; little cups of fruit jelly; gum cakes, nut-topped and almost anything in the confectioners line, dainty to see, and just grand to eat.

Doll Emporium

In the same room was the dolls' emporium convened by Mrs. H. Mott with her co-convener, Mrs. C. Ryan and their committee. The first article to catch the eye here was a lovely, little blue basinette. Next came the powder dolls concealing in their interiors perfumed powder for milady's toilet; then a little Spanish lady complete in her red satin dress and black lace mantilla; there were dresses in blue, brown, pink silk; knit dresses; doll beds in natural wood, complete in detail; pink doll highchairs; coats, bonnets, bootees, tams in pink, white and green and mauve, and many plaid dresses, coats in blue corduroy with matching hoods. A complete layette.

Place of Sweetness

Between this room and the next was situated the candy bazaar, with its crushed crescents of red and white and swaying rosettes in red. The little baskets with their white, lacey ruffs were a veritable garden of tulips, filled to overflowing with delicious Turkish delight; mouth-watering creams, rich chocolate fondants; icing, cripples in sugared square; stuffed dates, and chocolate creams; all most tempting and delectable, convening this place of sweetness were Mrs. H. Rollins, assisted by her co-convener, Mrs. F. Countryman and their committee.

Enticing Array

Around the corner was the enticing white elephant table of oddments, with its red canopy along the border of which sauntered a herd of little, white elephants, while in the centre beneath sat the big, white, mammie elephant busily watching the bargain hunters who thronged about and jostled each other in quest of the multitudinous things displayed. Like the shops of the three bails, nothing was missing, all was here from overshoes to the world's finest detective stories, from whose titles Shakespeare had apparently turned away in disgust and sat down at the end with a sort of 'Mona Lisa' smile on his countenance.

Besides books there were thermometers; drinking glasses; wicker jardiniers; baskets; lamp shades; white shoes; vases in colors and plain; oilcloth bathroom slippers; perfume of all kinds and bottles of colognes; bookends; a fine walnut mantel clock; smoker stands; dress clips; cups and saucers in black with yellow roses; linen towels; hot water purses and plants and games. In charge of this emporium of bargains were convener, Miss Helen Sulman and co-convener, Mrs. William Cochrane, assisted by their committee.

Beautiful Handkerchiefs

The miscellaneous table was replete with many articles for nearly every member of the household, and for household decoration, all new and spotless, including wall plant hangers in painted metal scrolls; oven mitts; towels, beautiful handkerchiefs with crocheted edges of pink, green of white; crocheted candy dish; little knit dresses; hoods; bootees, and many more articles over which were the convener, Mrs. L. Minaf, and co-convener, Mrs. A. Gilroy assisted by their committee.

Pretty Apron Assortment

A great assortment of pretty aprons caught the eyes of many, and were soon picked up. There were black sateen aprons with cretonne ties and flounce; pink sateen aprons with simulated appliqué; lovely organdy aprons in white trimmed with blue; yellow flowered aprons; tiny tea aprons, and large overall ones for heavy duty in the laundry, and nice unbleached factory cotton ones with pretty pockets just so nice for baking. Mrs. R. Howard was the convener for this exceptionally busy booth with her co-convener, Mrs. St. Clare Hurlbut, and their committee.

Appreciative thanks is extended to the tea room conveners, Mrs. H. McCabe and Mrs. C. Clapp, and their co-conveners, Mrs. P. Denyes and Mrs. G. Heron for a delightful tea and to those who planned and executed the exceptionally fine bazaar and to those who assisted in any way in making the occasion such an outstanding success.

The treasurers were Mrs. H. B. Fetterley and Mrs. W. D. Gilbert.

Women's Institute

MADOC W.I.

Madoc — The November meeting of Madoc Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Will Parks on Friday afternoon with 18 members and two visitors in attendance. Mrs. Nicol, the president, opened the meeting.

The president announced that Mrs. George Hill had been appointed representative of the W.I. to the new Community Centre executive. Mrs. Charles Whytock gave a short talk on the visit to Wallace's Corners branch on their 45th anniversary. Mrs. Lorne Aylesworth gave a fine talk on current events of the month reminding the members of important events taking place as well as some tragic accidents. The report of the Area convention held at Belleville was very ably handled by Mrs. Jack Henderson and Mrs. S. R. Beatty. Mrs. Henderson dealt chiefly with the business part of the convention while Mrs. Beatty gave the highlights of Mrs. Futcher, Provincial President of the Federated W.I. on her recent trip abroad.

The convener of "Citizenship" Mrs. A. Johnston gave a paper on the subject which concluded a fine meeting.

A vote of thanks was extended to the hostess and all who assisted in the program.

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Tanner, Mrs. Bert Bailey and Mrs. N. Brennan.

Women's Hospital Aux. Guests Of Bd. of Governors at Luncheon

On Tuesday last, 70 members of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary were guests of the Board of Governors of the Belleville General Hospital at a luncheon served in the nurses' dining room.

The ladies were greeted by Mayor Allin, Mr. Wakefield, administrator of the hospital; Dr. F. G. Ferguson, chief of the medical staff and Mr. P. C. McGuire, president of the Board of Governors.

Mayor Allin thanked the Auxiliary for the essential part they play in public relations. He added that the problem of differential rates for the county patients was being solved and a satisfactory agreement had already been reached with the County of Hastings. Despite added costs, many improvements have been made in the hospital and more are planned, he said.

Mr. McGuire expressed appreciation of the ladies' contribution to the work of the hospital and said it was hoped to set up an endowment fund for the hospital. Gifts and legacies from public spirited citizens to a growing endowment fund would be an eventual aid in meeting expenses which currently amount to $650,000 annually. These are paid for by revenue from patients and $25,000 annual grant from the city of Belleville and the Ontario government respectively.

Mr. Wakefield thanked the Auxiliary for their co-operation and added that the hospital is operating at capacity with 195 patients. The Ontario standard is 5.5 hospital beds per thousand population whereas Belleville has 2.2 beds per thousand. In 1942 there were 5,200 admissions with an average stay of 10.6 days and in 1949 there were 8,900 admissions with an average stay of 6.1 days per patient. He introduced the various hospital department heads and announced a new department of occupational therapy to be started in the near future.

Miss Ivy Dickens, president of the Auxiliary, thanked the hospital for the delightful luncheon and Mrs. Mikel proposed a vote of thanks to the Board of Governors for their gracious gesture in entertaining the ladies and providing them with the opportunity of being better informed on the problems of running a hospital.

Following the luncheon Mr. Wakefield and his staff took the ladies on a tour of all departments of the hospital. On the ground floor were shown the new $11,000 X-ray equipment, the new laundry, the renovated emergency operating room, the modernized pharmacy and the new physiotherapy department which answers 200 calls a month.

On the second floor the children's ward was visited and the completely renovated utility room was inspected. There the question of utility rooms on each floor was discussed and generally needed, the public wards patients receive the same nursing care as private patients. The operating rooms were on display and a typical private room was visited.

Following the tour the regular monthly business meeting of the Auxiliary was held in Ritchie Memorial Hall with Miss Dickens presiding. It was voted to give the customary Christmas gifts to ward patients and to bring forward the December meeting by one week.

A library service for patients is to be instituted one afternoon and one evening a week by the Junior Auxiliary. Gifts of a chest for the amusement of patients would be greatly appreciated.

Plans for the annual Charity Ball to be held during the Christmas season are now under consideration. It is to be held at the Club Commodore and highlights of the evening will be dancing to the Commodore orchestra, spot dances, a floor show and a draw on a Manly Macdonald painting.

Mrs. A. E. Ketcheson reported on the annual meeting of the Ontario Women's Hospital Auxiliaries Association held at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, in October. Some of the highlights included reasons for the increased cost of hospitalization. Hospital pay rolls have trebled in the last ten years, due to shorter hours and better pay for the personnel. Food costs had doubled and drugs and dressings are now three times that of 1940 prices. The ratio of personnel to patient is now two to a patient, four times what it used to be. But at that, the cost of sickness is generally not more now than it was ten years ago, because patients remain for a shorter period in hospital.

The purpose of the convention was to share ideas on how best to serve the hospital and through the experience of others to learn how to problems and find new ways and means of raising money.

The Hospital Aids Association membership now has 93 affiliations representing large hospitals with training schools, small hospitals without training schools, and hospitals for chronically ill patients. The volunteer service in the three groups is very different.

It was stressed that Hospital Auxiliaries are one of the best public relations agencies because they can dispel the biased and unfounded judgments often formed in communities regarding hospitals, because people are not informed.

Women Backing Charlotte Whitton For Control Board

Ottawa, Nov. 23 — CP — All those women around the capital these days with threaded needles dangling their coats aren't pinsel-minded seamstresses.

They're members of the needle-and-thread brigade backing Charlotte Whitton, a five-foot-two bundle of bounce and brilliance who's running for Ottawa's current civic election campaign more life than it's had in many a year.

The symbolism of the threaded needle is a bit on the obscure side, but it seems to mean that 54-year-old Charlotte is going to mend affairs at city hall, and maybe needle things up generally in the process.

Miss Whitton, a national figure for many years, is running for the four-man board of control against seven men in the Dec. 4 election. She's the first Ottawa woman ever to try for that job.

If she makes the grade in her first try at public office, she will bring to civic affairs—besides an ability to keep things stirred up—a record of achievement paralleled by few Canadian women. As a welfare worker, she has taken on jobs all over Canada, and she carries a string of honorary degrees and decorations from the king in testimony.

Now, she champions various causes that takes her eye and wields a prolific pen for various publications.

Though she's never been in politics before, one writer has called her "a woman with a real flair for high old political shellacking."

Somewhat overshadowed by Charlotte's campaign are the remainder of the annual contests.

No. 2 feature is a replay of last year's mayoralty contest, with mayor E. A. Bourque, French-Canadian fuel dealer, running against Dr. G. M. Geldert, a retired physician, and Grenville W. Goodman, an optician. Twenty-eight aldermanic seats are at stake.

THREAT FOR FUTURE

Brandon, Man. — (CP) — Now that the mosquito season is past, Dominion Entomologist R.D. Bird thought it safe to announce that at least 12 varieties of mosquitoes are found in the Brandon area. He supervises Brandon's annual anti-mosquito campaign.

Mrs. A. M. Ruttan Reports On W.C.T.U. Convention

The November meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held in the YMCA with a good number in attendance.

A helpful devotional service was conducted by Mrs. E. F. Church, who read Matthew 16, basing her thoughts on the topic "to deny oneself is the only sure way of security." "Manhood at its best is not seeking external security," said the speaker, "but eternal security." Mrs. Church closed her talk with the hymn "Take Up Thy Cross," and with prayer.

Following the talk, Mrs. D. Wellbanks favored with a fitting solo, "I Love Him More Than Tongue Can Tell," after which, the guest speaker, Mrs. A. M. Ruttan, of Picton, delegate to the World's WCTU convention held in Hastings, England in June of last year, gave a word-picture of the meeting, stating that over 40 countries were represented with 1,000 women registering, while 31 speakers, representing as many countries, each gave a ten minute talk on the work in the homelands.

Mrs. Ruttan also brought messages of goodwill from the Archbishop of Canterbury, and from the Mothers' Union of the Church of England of which Queen Elizabeth is a member.

"It was an impressive moment" said Mrs. Ruttan, "when these representatives from the United States, Canada, England, Pakistan, Burma, Korea, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and a dozen other countries stood together as one, representing the slogan "All one in Christ, all one for peace, all one against strong drink." Continuing, the speaker outlined the birth of the WCTU movement, its aims, and the means employed to fight the twin evils of intemperance and of war, stating that the drink evil is buttressed by great vested interests and a strong social custom.

"The liquor traffic spreads its new way to entice the youth of the land, not a negative but a positive approach is needed in the shape of attractive fruit drinks which can take the place of hard liquors which are offered in licensed hotels, in railways, boat landings, and at air ports. In hotels, beside the liquor displays should there not be a display of soft drinks, and in planes, boat and trains?" was the query put forth.

The goal of the New Indian Government, following the lead of the late Mahatma Gandhi, is prohibition. No liquor is allowed at any government function. And in London, the Indian embassy is the only embassy where liquor is prohibited. A seal has been placed upon it from the top authority what the policy is to be. For years, the west has been sending missionaries to the east; perhaps time is coming when the east will send temperance missionaries to the west.

"Is there a need still for the work of the WCTU?" asked the president, Mrs. Forrester. Pause and answering replies, "as long as there are broken homes; children in danger of losing their birthright; problems to solve and alcoholic liquor flowing as it is today in so many countries, the Women's Christian Temperance Union is called to use its influence to right these wrongs; to replace the things that mar and destroy by the things that are good and uplifting. Therefore, let the WCTU arise with renewed consecration to help bring in the Kingdom of our Lord and His Christ."

STIRLING
Mrs. C. Chard Tells W.A. of Trip

Stirling—The regular meeting of St. Paul's Woman's Association was held in the church parlors on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Harold Bird was hostess for the afternoon.

The meeting opened in the usual manner.

Mrs. Cecil Macklin and Mrs. W. T. Elliott will act as the visiting committee for November. Mrs. Albert Wells will be the convener of the church flower committee for November. The treasurer, Mrs. J. B. Thompson, presented a splendid financial report showing a bank balance of $438.12.

The invitation from the Carmel W.A. to their afternoon tea and bazaar on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 29, was accepted. It was decided to give $350 to the General Fund of the Church for the W.A. Thankoffering.

The W.A. will cater for a turkey dinner wedding anniversary to be served in the community hall during the Christmas season.

A request for more gowns for the Junior choir was presented. Mrs. Elliott thanked all members of the W.A. who sent cards, flowers, treats, calls, etc, to her sister, Mrs. R. Philp.

Armistice Program

The program of the afternoon was directed by Mrs. Don Donohoe and was based on the theme "Armistice". Mrs. P. Lyman read the Scripture Lesson taken from Acts 4:13-20. Mrs. Maurice Bell gave a splendid reading "Soldier, What Did You See?". Mrs. Don McIntosh delighted the W.A. with the pleasing solo "O God of Love". Guest Speaker

The guest speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Clarence Chard, who gave a descriptive talk on her recent trip to England. She embarked at Quebec and travelled via the "S.S. Samaria" with 1,200 on board. The sea was very rough but the beds were exceptionally good. They spent a day on the boat at Le Havre on the French coast, then they crossed the English Channel and docked at Tilbury.

Beautiful Countryside

The countryside was beautiful with hedges, green pastures, fields of wheat and fields of daffodils. The speaker told of the heavy taxes on all luxury goods and the high prices in the shops. England's food is much better and England has progressed in the 30 years, but still shows signs of the blitz.

The English people are optimistic in spite of heavy taxes to pay off English debts. The speaker graphically pictured Piccadilly Circus, Buckingham Palace, House of Parliament, Kew Gardens and the zoo. She also visited many old churches. Many castles are uninhabited due to heavy taxes.

Embarked for home on Sept. 29 and was favored with a smooth-er voyage.

During the social period a dainty luncheon was served by the committee in charge. Sincere thanks were extended to Mrs. D. Donohoe and committee; to Mrs. Chard, guest speaker and to all who took part on the program, by Mrs. R. Stapley.

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking?

One of the nice things about Chinese menus is that we can't understand them.

Few people ordering chop suey realize that these words mean beggar's hash. The name of the dish was originated by a Chinese chef in San Francisco who was rudely awakened in the night and forced to prepare a meal from the leftovers that were in his refrigerator. When you order asparagus tips, in Chinese, you must ask for Dragon Whiskers—a reference no doubt to the scales on the asparagus stems.

Chicken liver and asparagus casserole is an easily prepared Chinese dish. Chicken livers are first plunged into hot water, then drained and fried. This procedure keeps the shape of the livers intact and helps to prevent them from breaking up during subsequent cooking. Buy asparagus tips or pieces rather than whole spears. Remember that frozen vegetables cook more quickly than fresh. Remove the asparagus from the fire as soon as possible.

Chicken Liver and Asparagus Casserole. Serves 4.

1 12 oz. pkg. frozen asparagus tips
1-2 lb. chicken livers.
2 tablespoons shortening.
1 medium size onion chopped fine
2 cloves garlic, chopped fine
Salt—pepper
1 cup chicken broth
1 tablespoon sherry wine
1 teaspoon soy sauce,
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons cold water

Cook asparagus following directions on package. Drain.

Cut livers into cubes about 3-4 inch thick. Plunge livers into rapidly boiling water 1 minute. Drain.

Melt shortening in a large frying pan. Add livers, onion and garlic and cook until livers are browned, about 5 minutes. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon salt and 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Add chicken broth and bring to a boil. (If fresh chicken broth is unavailable, used canned.)

Mix to a smooth paste the sherry, soy sauce, cornstarch and cold water. Slowly add to boiling broth stirring well. Cook 2 minutes longer.

Add asparagus and cook only until asparagus is heated through. Serve with hot buttered noodles or prepared fried Chinese noodles.

It is estimated that only one in 10 African natives can read and write, though more children are learning each year.

W.I's Request Pre-Marital Blood Tests

Toronto, Nov. 23—(CP)—The annual board meeting of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario yesterday adopted a resolution requesting the provincial government to enact legislation requiring pre-marital blood tests.

In other resolutions, the board asked that commercialized Sunday sports be banned in Ontario, and increased pensions for disabled veterans and war widows, commensurate with the cost-of-living.

It was reported Junior Women's Institutes now have 77 branches with 1,554 members.

Gladys Houghton of Beeton and Grace Vollick of Canfield were elected to the board of directors.

Agriculture Minister Kennedy praised the Institutes for the work they are doing, and Mrs. J. R. Fulcher of St. Thomas, retiring president, thanked the minister for the co-operation his department had given the W.I.

A presentation was made to Mrs. Fulcher by Mrs. W. P. Simpson of Byron on behalf of the board.

WOOLER

Copenhagen Trip Described to W.I.

Wooler — Forty ladies gathered in the Sunday School room of the United Church for the November meeting of the Women's Institute. Mrs. W. H. Morrow, the president, occupied the chair and opened the meeting in the usual way after which the minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. L. Dorland. The roll call "What I would do if I were Reeve" was well responded to, many suggestions being given. Some were street lights in the village, better roads in the township, lower taxes, better sidewalks and many others.

Mrs. Wilbur McColl was convener of the program. She gave a paper on "Education and Citizenship" last week being "Citizenship Week" in Ontario. A vocal solo was given by Mrs. H. Ewing, a piano solo by Mrs. Lloyd Bell and a reading entitled "If" by Mrs. Gordon Cole.

Guest Speaker

Mrs. F. Gooding introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. W. A. Goodfellow, of Codrington, who gave an address on her recent trip to England, where she attended the meeting of the Associated Country Women of the World.

Her address was illustrated by many pictures and souvenirs.

ROSLIN

United Church W.A. Elects New Officers

Roslin —The November meeting of the W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. Andy and Mrs. Stafford Colden.

The president opened the meeting. Roll call showed 11 members and four children present. Plans for the supper and bazaar were completed.

Rev. Mr. Campbell was present and took charge of the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Walter Colden; 1st vice president, Mrs. Stafford Colden; secretary, Mrs. Don Chisholm; treasurer, Mrs. Harry Sayers; pianist, Mrs. F. Howes; assistant pianist, Mrs. F. Fargey; auditors, Mrs. Walt Chisholm and Mrs. D. Chisholm. Flower fund committee, Mrs. S Colden and Mrs. J. Fargey; recording secretary, Mrs. D. Chisholm.

The hostess served dainty refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

Mrs. Wilbur McColl thanked Mrs. Goodfellow for her most interesting address.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. S. L. Terrill, Mrs. B. Putnam, Mrs. Orvis and Mrs. J. J. Way.

Young Couple Recipients of Many Gifts

Plainfield — On a recent evening a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Murney Wilson for a miscellaneous shower given in honor of the newly-weds, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Wilson (nee Irene Wannamaker).

The early part of the evening was spent at cards and dancing, music being supplied by Kerr's orchestra from Plainfield.

At midnight the gathering was called to order and an address, signed on behalf of the community by Allen Gibson and Earl Harrison was read by Mrs. Carman Gibson to which Irene and Ross responded in a fitting manner and expressed their appreciation for the many lovely gifts and inviting all to visit them in their new home.

The ladies then served refreshments and the remaining portion of the evening was spent in dancing.

New Zealand Hurries Plans For Large Newsprint Mill

By J. G. GRAHAM
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Wellington, N. Z. — (CP)—The New Zealand government plans to speed up an $84,000,000 project for development of a newsprint industry in the dominion. The scheme aims at the utilization of the Kaingaroa state forest, world's largest man-made forest now reaching maturity in the north island.

The project promises to be a major factor in the country's economy within a few years and should also prove of wide significance to the sterling area. The export surplus will not be large enough to upset the huge North American industry, but it may make possible diversion of some supplies to other markets.

Tests and trials over many years have produced a plan to develop a sawmill with a capacity of 70,000,000 feet of timber a year, a pulp mill with an output of 15,000 tons, and a newsprint plant capable of producing 100,000 tons a year. About 10,000 tons of other types of paper would also be produced. All these targets are well within the capacity of the forest.

Of this output, about 55,000,000 feet of timber, 10,000 tons of pulp and 65,000 tons of newsprint would be available for export. Most of this would go to Australia, but some might be shipped to other Pacific countries.

Build Big Town

The plan provides for the building of a town for 10,000 people at Murupara, centre of the project, the construction of a railway linking the area with the main system, and construction of a deep-water port on the east coast of the North Island.

Kaingaroa was planted about 30 years ago chiefly with pine native to California and the trees have flourished, growing and maturing much more quickly than in their native habitat. Some areas are already ready for cutting and others will be ready within a few years.

The government is confident that production can begin by 1954 and be expanded considerably in future years. It says exhaustive tests have shown the essential economic soundness of the scheme and that currency revaluation has converted the industry from a marginal profit earner of the order of about six per cent after taxation to over twice that amount.

Lengthy tests, including full-scale production trials with New Zealand timber at a mill in the United States, have shown the suitability of the forest to produce acceptable grades of sulphate pulp, newsprint and various grades of printing and writing paper.

The government will be responsible for the railway, port construction and much development work at the project, but it wants the sawmill, pulp mill and paper plant operated by private enterprise.

Record Shows Films Always Faced Slams

Hollywood. (AP)—Hollywood thinks it has taken an awful beating lately. But it has always been the target of criticism.

The movie industry now is smarting under varied attacks. A Senator has denounced its morals. Censors mangle its pictures. Movies are attacked on one hand as too sentimental, and the other as too highbrow. Theatre attendance slumped enough to provoke a big advertising campaign on the theme "Movies are better than ever".

Back in 1922 there were newspaper editorials saying "Because two prominent figures in motion pictures have recently been the centre of a scandal, the entire profession is put under a cloud."

That wasn't any Bergman-Rossellini affair, but it rocked the film colony just as hard. Actor-Director William Desmond Taylor had been found dead with a bullet in his back. The furore was over some letters he left behind to actress Mary Miles Minter. That case was never solved.

The incident prompted producer Samuel Goldwyn to write a clause in his contracts providing for discharge of actors whose private life reflected discredit on the industry.

Prophesied Doom

About that time, Will Hays, appointed by the industry to censor its product, took office. Newspapers urged him to make a thorough house-cleaning. Hollywood's future was questioned.

Headlines were reminiscent. Should New York or Hollywood be the production centre? The old articles were on movies, of course. Nowadays the question concerns television.

The moguls themselves were divided in the old days. Goldwyn built what he called the biggest and best studio in the world in Culver City. Jesse Lasky demonstrated equal faith in New York by erecting a lavish studio on Long Island.

Times were tough a quarter century ago, too. But instead of shouting "movies are better" the producers in those days urged fans to take matters in their own hands. One of them wrote: "If you don't get what you want, shout for it. Producers strive to please."

The general run of Hollywood news hasn't changed much. Movies are the same as different, and not all of them, as witness Gloria Swanson.

Council Criticizes Change of Venue For Murder Trial

Napanee, Nov. 23 (CP)—Lennox and Addington county council yesterday expressed indignation over a ruling which moved the second murder trial of James Fosbrsey from Napanee to Picton.

Fosbrasy was convicted last week of manslaughter in the slaying of his wife and sentenced to life imprisonment.

At a meeting this council resolved to petition the attorney-general's department that no criminal case be moved from one county to another if it requires a jury.

Reeve Edgar Deeew of Camden township said the change of venue had cast a reflection on the people of the county.

The change of venue was granted on application by defence counsel who contended that prejudice in Lennox and Addington was too great to make it possible to select a fair trial jury.

32-Year-Old Song Now on Hit Parade

Toronto, —(CP)—An old song written by Bob Wilson, Toronto veteran of vaudeville, promises to climb high on the current hit parades. Wilson, now 74, carried the song in his pocket for 32 years before recording companies began trying to get it on wax.

Wilson says he got the idea for the song "Smile, Smile, Smile" while playing in vaudeville in a small Saskatchewan town in 1918. Now London records has recorded three versions, and others are coming from Victor, Columbia and M.G.M.

The cheerful, white-haired Wilson has been in Canadian show business for more than half a century. He was born at Somerville, a village in Carleton co Kawartha Lakes district, and came to Toronto as a small boy. He started as a youngster in amateur opera companies and turned professional with Jimmy Fax, show veteran who died five years ago.

His own company toured Ontario, western Canada and the United States for many years, during which he composed a number of songs. It wasn't until less than a year ago that he thought of trying to get any published.

He is saddened by the eclipse of the old Canadian Chautauqua groups. "There were a lot of good songs lost, strictly Canadian, when those old-timers went," he said.

OLD DOCKYARD

The dockyard which resulted in Davenport becoming a great British naval port was established in 1699.

Editor Advises Truckers to Form Voting Bloc

Toronto, Nov. 23 (CP)—Arthur Halley, editor of Bus and Truck Transport, a Maclean-Hunter publication, said last night that Canada's trucking industry should try to enlist the votes of its employees to strengthen the political position of trucking.

In a speech before the annual banquet of the Motor Truck Club of Toronto, he said "this potential voting bloc—the most powerful weapon we have—can be influenced by the trucking industry, and I believe we should begin to do it," said Mr. Halley. "... perhaps, with this potential power ranged behind us, we can go to the political parties and say: 'change your policies on trucking—or else!'"

He named as "opponents of trucking" the C.C.F., railway management and unions, the ship-by-rail association, and the Saskatchewan and Federal governments.

Bad Practice Says Justice

Toronto, Nov. 23 (CP) — Mr. Justice C. W. R. Bowlby of the Ontario Supreme Court said yesterday the "dangerous" actions of policemen who persuade suspects to plead guilty—to short-en their trial and get a light sentence—"must stop."

He dissented as two fellow judges—Mr. Justice R. E. Laidlaw and Mr. Justice J. A. Hope—upheld the conviction and sentence of three Cochrane district men accused of theft.

Counsel for Dugel Cameron, Fernand Dumoulin and Louis Therriault said there was evidence that provincial police persuaded them to plead guilty. Each was sentenced to two years less a year.

Mr. Justice Laidlaw and Mr. Justice Hope said the appeal failed because the magistrate who tried the three men had twice queried them on their pleas.

READER'S DIGEST TELLS WHAT LAXATIVES ARE BEST FOR YOU!

Here's how a "fussy eater" can be regulated without pills, salts or drugs

Britain Fighting Guerilla Bands in Malay Jungle

Kuala Lumpur, Malaya (Reuters)—The war Britain has been fighting in Malaya for the last two years is one without a front.

It has few pitched battles. It flares briefly around an isolated rubber plantation, a tin mine deep in the jungle, a village in a clearing.

Out of the tropical forest come the "faceless men"— the enemy dressed in black or jungle green, armed with rifles, knives and tommy-guns.

A few hours later they fade again into the green undergrowth, leaving behind the blackened wreck of a lumber store, the bullet-riddled bodies of European planters, the hacked corpses of Chinese who would not co-operate.

How many they are, even who they are, no one knows for sure. But for two years they have tied down British and Malayan forces vastly superior in numbers and equipment, and the wave of terrorism are increasing. It is reported that "incidents" in October totalled more than 500.

They began soon after the end of the war. After three years of Japanese occupation, most of the peninsula's heterogeneous population was glad to see the British back.

Long Peninsula

The Malaya federation occupies a peninsula reaching down from the continental mass of southeast Asia towards the Indonesian Archipelago. The States of Thailand and Burma lie to the north and running down into the narrow neck of the peninsula to the northeast is Indo China.

The federation covers about 50,690 square miles. Its capital is Kuala Lumpur, some 30 miles from the east coast and about 200 miles northwest of Singapore, the independent British colony that occupies the "toe" of the peninsula.

The 1947 population of almost 5,000,000 included 2,400,000 Malays, 1,880,000 Chinese, 530,000 Indians and 9,500 Europeans.

In June, 1948, the British authorities, alarmed by the spread of terrorism, declared a state of emergency throughout the whole federation.

Malcolm MacDonald, British Commissioner-General for southeast Asia, said the capture of Negotiators had foiled a communist plan to overthrow the Malayan government and set up a Soviet republic.

In August the communist forces were estimated at 10,000 almost all Chinese, with enough modern weapons to ram 4,000. British forces, consisting of about a division when the terrorist offensive began were strengthened. Police numbered about 29,000.

The "Briggs Plan"

In March this year the British government appointed a "strong man" to co-ordinate the campaign against the terrorists.

They chose Lt. Gen. Sir Harold Rawson Briggs, 55-year-old wartime army commander in the Middle and Far East. He formulated the widely-publicized "Briggs Plan." Its details have never been officially made known, but its mainstream was understood to be the "domination of populated areas."

Security forces believed the terrorists could not have held out for so long without help from the civilian population. They thought this help came mostly from 300,000 Chinese squatters scattered throughout the peninsula.

If the squatters could be gathered into permanent settlements under government control, the guerillas would lose their main source of food and shelter and could be left to starve in the jungle.

The "Briggs Plan" began to operate June 1. Colonial Secretary James Griffiths, back from a visit to Malaya, told the House of Commons June 12 not to expect quick and spectacular results.

From the beginning of the emergency until the end of July, 1,948 civilians were killed, wounded or missing. Of these, 688 were Chinese, 334 Malays, 139 Indians, 74 Europeans and 18 Indonesians.

In the same period 2,539 terrorists mostly Chinese, were killed—wounded or captured. Police lost 443 killed and 467 wounded.

Up to the end of June, British army casualties numbered 113 killed and 188 wounded.

Expect Controls Will Aid Fishing Across North Sea

Copenhagen (Reuters)—Special laws drafted to protect the North Sea fishing grounds have been ratified by eight countries interested in solving the problem of over-fishing in the area.

The legislation prepared by the international council for the exploration of the sea, which held its 38th congress here last month. France, Holland, Britain, Sweden, Norway, Iceland and Denmark have passed the legislation. Belgium so far has held off due to difficulties with The Netherlands' fishermen. The both countries fish common waters.

It is hoped everything will be ironed out by next February.

The legislation mainly limits the catch. Control must be applied either to the number of fish caught or to the amount of equipment used in fishing.

Delegates attended the congress from Belgium, Denmark, Eire, Spain, Finland, France, Britain, Iceland, Norway, The Netherlands, Poland, Portugal, and Sweden. The United States, Canada and Australia sent observers.

Dr. H. Blefvad, Danish secretary-general of the congress, said: "Immediately after the end of a war, there are always more fish in the sea than normally. This is because during a war the trawlers and big ships are used for military purposes and not of much fishing is done.

Postwar Problem

"After a war, the demand for food increases; more boats are available and grounds quickly become over-fished. Probably there are now only about 15 per cent. of fish in the North Sea over five years of age compared with the number at the end of the war.

"Actually, the yield has been kept up. But we know that the stocks have fallen. Since the war, we have to use more and more 'fishing effort' to keep up the yield. We have more fishermen but fewer fish.

"It is getting more and more expensive to get fish out of the sea."

The congress also outlined a plan to study the effects of hydro-graphical conditions — temperatures, salinity, currents and nutrient salts—on fish.

The results of investigations may, it is thought, make it possible to "manure" the North Sea to improve catches, in exactly the same way as a farmer manures his land.

Another decision taken at the congress aims at investigating the possibilities of adapting radar-type sound to fishery purposes. Recent tests show that "echo-sounders" can locate shoals of fish.

American Communists Ruled By Russia and Owe First Allegiance to "The Red Flag"

- - McGrath

Washington, Nov. 23 — (AP)— The government has fired the opening gun in what may well be a history - making battle with the communist party in the United States.

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath formally charged last night that American communists are ruled by Russia and owe first allegiance to "the red flag."

He called on the new Subversive Activities Control Board to force the party to register with him the names of its leaders and members, and give an accounting of its sources of revenue.

His petition constituted the most sweeping condemnation of United States communist activity ever put out by any official of the American government.

"In the event of a war between the Soviet Union and the United States," McGrath said, "the communists in the United States have obligated themselves to act to defeat the military efforts of the United States and to aid and support the Soviet Union."

McGrath's petition gave the Subversive Activities Control Board its first business. Created by the Internal Security Act passed by Congress last September, the five-member bi-partisan panel was appointed by President Truman a month ago.

McGrath's petition put the next move squarely up to the communist party. It must now appear before the board to explain its reasons for not registering voluntarily.
